Global Gallup Poll on Quality of Life

Americans Appear Most Satisfied

By George Gallup

Princeton, N.J. — Americans, despite their complaints about many aspects of U.S. society today, appear to be considerably more satisfied with the quality of their life than most other people of the free world.

Specifically, Americans express a higher level of satisfaction with important aspects of daily living, including family life, health, leisure time, housing, work, their communities, their standard of living, their education for work and for life, and, finally, life in their nation today.

Even among the lower economic groups in the U.S., satisfaction levels for the items tested are higher than the national averages recorded in the developing regions of the world.

First Global Study

These findings emerge from the first global public opinion study ever undertaken, covering 70 nations and 90% of the population of the free world.

One of the chief goals of the study was to gain greater insight into the views of people with respect to their lives and self-image, and to explore their views on such critical world problems as overpopulation, food supply, crime, urbanization, pollution and the like.

The study was funded by the Charles F. Kettering Foundation and the research was carried out in most nations by the 30 members comprising Gallup International Research Institutes.

Interviewing in most nations was carried out during the last 24 months. Presently efforts are being made to include Communist nations in the survey.

Advanced, Developing Gulf

The first effort to appraise the quality of life on a global basis indicates that the gulf which separates the advanced societies from the developing nations in respect to material well-being is just as wide in respect to psychological well-being.

The nations with the highest per capita income almost invariably top every test of psychological well-being and satisfaction in major aspects of live.

To measure the level or degree of satisfaction or dissatisfaction with important aspects of one's life, a 10-point scale was used.

Each respondent was asked to point to the step on the scale that best represented his feelings of satisfaction or dissatisfaction with a particular aspect of his life — including his job, family life, housing, standard of living, health, community, education, leisure time and nation.

The top step represented the highest level of satisfaction and the bottom step the lowest level of dissatisfaction.

Family Life Top

As the table below shows, family life rates at the top of all satisfactions among the more advanced societies, but lower on the satisfaction scale among the developing nations, with the exception of Latin America.

In the case of each of the 10 items tested, North America comes out on top (including the U.S. which represents the vast majority of the total population of North America).

In the results reported below, the percentage for a given satisfaction represents the total score for the top three steps of the scale, and describes the "highly satisfied":

	North America	Western Europe	Latin America	Africa	Far East
Your family life	73%	64%	60%	18%	18%

Bowl Scouts Watch NU-OSU Shoot-out

Give Me Liberty or Give Me Orange!

By Dean Terrill

Time after time it rained oranges in Memorial Stadium Saturday, but by the fourth quarter the splatters seemed more the size of pumpkins.

And with Nebraska up 14-10 on the scoreboard, that old moon over Miami also was looming larger. The Orange Bowl and New Year's night were on the minds of almost every spectator except those of Oklahoma State Cowpokes.

Heightening the speculation was Colorado's 16-7 loss to Missouri, leaving the Huskers at the top of a much-jumbled Big Eight heap. Yet to go are Iowa State and Oklahoma.

Of the traditional sellout crowd of 76,205, two of the most significantly interested were Lester Freeman and Bob Lafferty of the Orange Bowl selection committee. Both were beaming over the tie-in which will pit the Big Eight champion against an "open-market opponent."

"We've had a great history with Nebraska and have learned to love 'em," enthused Freeman, who also is chairman of the Big Eight host committee. "There never has been less than a sellout with a Big Eight team and we've also had some real thrilling games out of your conference."

Freeman said there are "eight or 10 teams still very much alive" as possible conference opponents. Named as good bets were Maryland, Pittsburgh and the runners-up of either the Big 10 or Southeast Conference.

He also suggested a "once-beaten Michigan" as a prospect, unaware he was pointing to that team's 16-14 upset by Purdue Saturday. Scouted for the first time in several years, he added, were teams of the Pac 8 conference.

Apologetic for their orange sport coats, which mistakenly identified them with Oklahoma State, the two representatives were nearly as impressed with the stadium's "beautiful, marvelous spectacle" as with the two teams afield. The Miami area has nothing to compare showwise in regular season games, they noted.

Liberty Interested

Also viewing from the press box was Buddy Leake of Memphis, Tenn., president of the Liberty Bowl Festival Assn. and a member of its team selection committee. There was an obvious drool as he predicted that "both of these teams will be at a bowl somewhere."

Played the first Monday after ABC's televising of regular season pro games, the Liberty Bowl attracted a TV audience of some 43 million last year. Leake called this "one of the biggest things we have to offer a team which is really interested in recruiting."

This year's bowl match also is unique in being the only 1976 sporting event officially sanctioned by the American Bicentennial Commission. There are no conference tie-ups for the Memphis affair.

Saturday's leather-popping slugfest, incidentally, seemingly created the greatest demand of this season for scalpers' tickets. At game time, several dozen would-be buyers were still unsuccessful in obtaining seats.

"I've heard of a few singles for $10 and $15," said one discouraged man intent on a pair. "But mostly I'm hearing prices like $40 and $50 per."

Carter Credits Debates for Election Edge

By Wesley Pippert

Plains, Ga. (UPI) — Charging that television failed to present his campaign fairly, President-elect Jimmy Carter said Saturday he thinks he would have lost the election if three debates with President Ford had not provided a balance to the news coverage.

Despite the importance he placed on the 1976 debates, however, Carter said he would "not necessarily" debate his challenger in 1980. He did not explain.

In a wide-ranging interview, Carter also said appointments to high office in his new administration might include a disproportionately large number of men and women from minority groups.

His statement was reminiscent of the approach he took in 1971 when, after he became governor of Georgia, he said: "The time for racial discrimination is over."

Owes Nothing

Carter said he owed nothing to other special interest groups.

He said he already is working to eliminate the trappings of an "imperial presidency" — the regal atmosphere that hit its peak during Richard Nixon's administration — and hopes to make the tone of his January inauguration "as democratic as possible." He stressed that he meant "democratic" spelled "with a little 'd,' " rather than as a reference to his party.

"All I want to do is a good job, and I think that everything I do will be open and clear to the people and I don't want to do anything that will make folks ashamed of me," Carter said.

"I feel very dedicated, very sober, very deeply aware of the responsibilities that will be on my shoulders. But I honestly can't say . . . that I feel afraid of the job or that I feel trepidation about it."

Carter was interviewed by a group of reporters for about 70 minutes at "The Pond House," his mother's cottage. Questions were restricted to an analysis of the campaign and the interview was for release in Sunday morning newspapers.

Unaccustomed Deference

The next president of the United States will looked like a peanut farmer, wearing blue jeans — pants and jacket. Nevertheless, he acknowledged that reporters showed unaccustomed deference on Thursday when he held his first news conference since the election.

"I may be disappointed, but I had the feeling that for the first time in quite a while it was a matter of mutual respect, that folks weren't trying to trick me," Carter said.

He laughed: "My wife doesn't treat me any differently. My staff doesn't treat me any differently."

Carter said he believes most of the press treated him "very well" and without it he could not have been elected. But he said he and his opponent were not treated equally by television.

"I felt the comparison between the treatment of Mr. Ford, particularly in the evening news . . . deference shown to the presidency and the White House . . . was a crippling thing," he said.

He said that on weekends he watched the tapes of television news programs. "Every time I made a mistake it was news and Mr. Ford's news was that he came out into the Rose Garden and signed a bill and he was in charge of things . . . very authoritative, very sure of himself . . . no problems . . . no mistakes."

"It used to make me very upset."

Hard to Deal With

Carter acknowledged the character of his campaign was hard for reporters to deal with.

"I think there's been a natural inclination to dwell . . . on my character," he said, asking rhetorical questions. "Who am I? What do I stand for? Is there a secret there? How could he win in spite of these odds?

"I have a feeling that had it not been for the debates I would have lost. I think the debates let the American people be reassured, 'Well, at least Jimmy Carter has some judgment about foreign affairs, defense and all.' "

No Race, Sex Bias

Carter repeated earlier statements that the only group to get special attention from his administration would be the men and women who were excluded from high

Boulder Voters Back Growth Limits

By Peter J. Bernstein

(c) Newhouse News Service

Boulder, Colo. — Proponents of measures to curtail urban growth have won a key victory in this sprawling mountain-rimmed city on the front range of the Rockies 45 minutes down the turnpike from Denver.

Boulder voters Tuesday passed an ordinance over the opposition of the local Chamber of Commerce and Board of Realtors that places a numerical limit on new housing units in the city.

The ordinance, approved by a narrow margin after a hard-fought battle between developers and environmentalists, would slow down the city's growth to a rate of between 1.5 and 2% a year from its annual rate of more than 3%.

Boulder has doubled in size in the last 15 years. Newcomers drawn to the onetime mining community with its environmental amenities and small town character have pushed the population from 40,000 in 1960 to more than 80,000 today.

Passage of the ordinance, modeled on anti-growth measures enacted several years ago in Ramapo, N.Y., and Petaluma, Calif., reflects the rising tide of citizen sentiment against the sort of uncontrolled urban development that despoils the natural environment and overtaxes city services.

450 Permits Annually

The ordinance limits the number of building permits issued in the city to an average of 450 per year for the next five years, with a provision stipulating that, for each year, 175 of the units are to be built in the central core of the city. The rate of construction in recent years in Boulder has averaged about 1,000 dwelling units per year.

Designed to curtail only large housing subdivisions and apartment complexes, the ordinance exempts building projects of four dwelling units or less. That enables the owner of an existing lot to build a house on it — for up to four families — without having to qualify under the annual building quota. The ordinance also exempts projects for low- and middle-income families built by the Boulder Housing Authority.

The ordinance provides that building permits under the annual quota be awarded on the basis of a merit system, with points assigned to each development project according to a number of variables. These include energy efficiency, design, proximity to stores, amount of open space and cost, with preference for moderate rather than high-cost housing.

Individual real estate projects in Boulder, a city which still has some remaining cattle ranches and farms could be sold for housing development, will be restricted to a maximum of 75 units unless it can be proven that such a size limitation is economically unfeasible.

Governor Supported

The ordinance was opposed by the Boulder mayor and the city council though supported by Colorado Gov. Richard D. Lamm who wants to limit further growth sharply in the state's heavily developed Denver metropolis. The city council voted 5-4 in August against putting the proposed ordinance on the ballot, prompting a successful petition drive that gathered the necessary signatures in 26 days.

Councilman Paul Danish, who drafted the ordinance, said Boulder's current annual growth rate of 3% may not seem excessive but it would mean a doubling of the city's population in 25 years.

"To accommodate that kind of growth we would have to alter the character of our community in ways which would eliminate the features that brought most people to Boulder in the first place," Danish said. "There would be increased environmental degradation, traffic congestion, noise pollution, greater demand on parks and recreation and a dozen other petty insults to the individual."

Boulder's business community contends the ordinance will push up the cost of housing and real estate, destroy old neighborhoods with its emphasis on redevelopment and increased density in the core areas of the city, and lead to sprawl in surrounding areas not controlled by the city.

Some critics also charge that the ordinance will be exclusionary — that it would close off residential possibilities for minorities and the poor in what is one of the most affluent cities in the West.

Few Blue Collar Workers

Though it's located within easy commuting distance of Denver, Boulder has few blue-collar workers. No major industry has moved into Boulder since 1967, when the city adopted the first of a string of measures to control growth.

In 1971, Boulderites defeated a charter amendment to set a population limit of 100,000 for the city, but they approved a resolution directing the city to take all necessary steps to hold down the rate of growth and they adopted a height limitation for new buildings.

Danish, an editor on the weekly Town and Country Review, discounts the argument that the ordinance is exclusionary or that housing costs are tied to growth rate. "Much of Boulder's growth will come from people who work in the Denver area but would like to live in Boulder; they are looking for housing, but if less is available here, they will simply go elsewhere."

Expanding With Vengeance

Jim Marsden is a Boulder resident who voted for the new ordinance. His family goes back four generations in Boulder, and Marsden has watched the city grow from a small town surrounded by mountains and ranches to a sprawling city that is expanding with a vengeance. He opposes any further expansion and would like to see a complete moratorium on growth.

"Boulder has gone past a livable place and is now becoming on a par with other large cities," he said. "The national population is not increasing anywhere near the rate of 3%, and I don't see why Boulder should have to bear the brunt of refugees fleeing from other cities. They should stay where they are and make their own areas into livable places."

This anti-growth view reflects a new mood of environmental concern about unplanned and often rapacious development. The old frontier of abundance and expansion is being molded by new ideas of growth limits and of the government's responsibility to protect and enhance the public's resources.

Saddest Moment

Emperor Hirohito of Japan said Saturday that World War II was his saddest experience in the 50 years of his reign over the island nation. Hirohito, 75, met Japanese reporters in the garden of the Imperial Palace. A ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of his ascension to the throne is scheduled Wednesday. Hirohito said his happiest memories were his friendship visits to Europe in 1971 and the U.S. in 1975. Hirohito said his primary concern has always been world peace, Japan's development and his people's happiness.

'Waste of Time'

Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral polio vaccine that bears his name, says the federal program to inoculate all Americans against swine flu is "a waste of time." Sabin said "There's as much chance of a swine flu epidemic occurring in this country during the coming four or five months of cold weather as there is of me getting hit by an automobile while crossing Tulane Avenue." Tulane Avenue runs through the New Orleans business district.

Recovered

First Lady Betty Ford has made a complete recovery from her bout with breast cancer, despite the burdens of the White House and a strenuous presidential campaign, her doctor said Saturday. "At this point, there is no evidence of any cancer recurrence," White House physician William Lukash said. "She's made a complete recovery, physically and pyschologically." But Mrs. Ford continues to have recurring bouts of painful arthritis in the neck, an ailment she has had for 12 years.

In Kind

The White House retaliated, in kind Saturday against James Naughton, the New York Times reporter who is well known prankster. Naughton, who once hid a sheep in another reporter's room and attended a presidential news conference wearing a mock chicken head, got a call from the White House saying President Ford would like to give him an interview Saturday at Camp David in Maryland. Naughton showed up there, only to be told the President was 70 miles away in Washington and no interview was scheduled. Among the conspirators was Richard Cheney, White House chief of staff. Press secretary Ron Nessen had alerted the Times' desk of the prank.

Carter Threat

Waco, Tex., authorities held Thomas Francis Gargan, 59, in jail in lieu of $25,000 bond Saturday for threatening the life of President-elect Jimmy Carter. Police said Gargan was arrested Friday night for being intoxicated in public and he subsequently threatened Carter.

Claims Credit

Ugandan President Idi Amin says he was responsible for Jimmy Carter's election as president. Amin said his endorsement of the Carter candidacy had ensured his victory by winning him the votes of "blacks and white revolutionaries," Uganda Radio, monitored in Nairobi, reported Saturday.

Shot to Death

Pierre Sebilleau, French ambassador to Yugoslavia, accidentally was shot to death in the lower back during a hunting trip for diplomats in woods north of Belgrade Saturday, French and Yugoslav officials said. Diplomatic sources said Austrian Ambassador Alexander Otto was standing behind Sebilleau trying to adjust something in his double-barrelled shotgun when the gun discharged.

Carter Finds Presidential Jet Fancy

NATIONAL

From News Wires

St. Simons Island, Ga. — Jimmy Carter stepped aboard a shiny blue and silver presidential aircraft for the first time Saturday and acted like a kid with a new toy.

"This is the one I've been looking for," the President-elect said as he took a long look at the first solid proof of his victory over President Ford in last Tuesday's election.

Carter carried his garment bag and a pair of rugged hiking boots up the front ramp and passed the seal of the President of the United States. Then the plane took him to a vacation at secluded Musgrove Plantation among the pines and palms and Spanish moss of this southern Georgia coastal island.

"I'm surprised how beautiful it is, how fancy it is," Carter said as reporters trooped in to inspect his airborne quarters.

The Boeing 707 served Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon as Air Force One until 1974 when it was replaced by a newer craft which Ford still uses. Carter called his new jet "very impressive, very beautiful, very historic."

"I felt like going back and getting my three-piece black suit when I saw this airplane," Carter said. He was dressed casually in sports slacks and shirt and a beige cardigan sweater. "I feel impressed with it but at ease with it," he said.

At several points he noted the plane's history, saying, "This is the plane on which President Johnson was sworn in as president. President Nixon's trip to China was made on this plane."

Accompanying Carter were his wife Rosalynn, their son Chip and Chip's wife Caron, and a small terrier, J.B.

Carter said he planned to catch up on his reading of transition documents but also wanted a rest after the long campaign.

"I've got a lot to read but I think today I'm going to be catching up on my sleep. We've been working pretty hard since we got home."

After the plane landed, Carter told reporters he will meet later this month with President Ford and that his wife Rosalynn will meet with Mrs. Ford.

First, he said, he plans to receive a national security and intelligence briefing from CIA Director George Bush.

As if to emphasize the working side of the vacation, Carter personally loaded a large cardboard curtain labeled "transition documents" into the trunk of his car. They outline priorities for appointing 75 top-level government officials and list the policy options Carter will have in the first few months of his presidency.

Carter

government office in the past because of their race or sex.

"The only promise that I have made, and that was on my own initiative — is to make sure that as I choose Cabinet and other members, that I will give heavy membership to minority groups who I think have been excluded in the past.

"I want to be sure that when I put together my Cabinet . . . that the country will say, 'Well, that's a fair thing to do.' And if there's any unfairness about it, it might be to give minorities higher representation."

Carter said he has never had a labor leader or mayor ask him for anything, adding: "Not the first one. I don't believe there's been an implied request."

Carter said he would consult AFL-CIO President George Meany, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and others. But, he said, "if labor ever asks me for anything other than try to work for the control of inflation and decrease the unemployment rate, et cetera . . . I would not comply with their recommendation.

"I was elected governor the same way that I've been elected president. I've never promised a person a position in government to this munute. There's not a single person in the United States who can say I promised them a position in government."

Populist Tone

Reviewing the campaign, Carter said that during the primaries he had been considered the conservative candidate. He said after he won the Democratic nomination he made a "spur of the moment sort of in-depth self-analysis" and adopted a populist tone in his acceptance speech.

"I was disturbed because the whole thrust of the Republican convention (the following month) was that I was a free spending, liberal, irresponsible, political spendthrift," Carter said.

He said Ford ran a "very good strategic campaign" in which "his major thrust against me was fear — of change, fear of the future."

The positive part of Ford's effort was the most effective, Carter said.

"He took the position . . . that he came into the White House when Watergate devastated the country. He did a reasonably good job. He restored confidence in the White House," he said.

Campaign's Low Point

Carter said the low point of his own campaign came between the first debate, which he said people felt he lost, and the second debate.

"I honestly never doubted that I would win," he said. But, he said, "there was a period in there, immediately following the second debate when I erroneously had an overly aggressive approach to President Ford. Had I let him stew in his misstatement about Eastern Europe . . . I would have been better off."

Carter said the concentration of TV stations forced him to campaign in major cities rather than suburbs. He said he tried to win middle America, explaining that when unemployment forces millions onto welfare rolls "the ones who pay the bill are middle class Americans."

He said voting figures showed a majority of those with a salary below $20,000 a year favored him, while those above $20,000 went to Ford 2 to 1.

"You could look at one of a dozen categories of people and say they gave Jimmy Carter the election — blacks, labor unions, big cities, mayors," he said.

Carter said he got 81% of the votes of Chicanos and 80% of blacks, slightly less than previous Democratic candidates; 50% of independents, about 10% more than usual; and 11% of the Republican vote.

During the next few weeks, he said, he will spend most of his time in Plains. He said that approach is in the tradition set by John F. Kennedy, whose transistion headquarters was in Hyannis Port, and Nixon, who had his headquarters in New York.

Carter said that Vice President-elect Walter Mondale, who lives in Washington, will represent him in the nation's capital until the inauguration "since he's going to be treated during the transition period and, subsequently, almost as an equal partner with me."

Hooks Is Named NAACP Director

From News Wires

New York — Benjamin L. Hooks, the first black member of the Federal Communications Commission, was unanimously elected Saturday to succeed Roy Wilkins as executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Hooks, 51, was elected unanimously during 2½ hour special meeting of the organization's national board of directors at the New York Sheraton Hotel, an NAACP spokesman said.

He will begin serving as executive director designate of the NAACP on Jan. 1, 1977.

Wilkins, 75, will retire July 31, 1977 after 22 years as executive director.

Part of Life

"The NAACP has been a part of my life for as long as I can remember," Hooks commented after hearing of his selection.

"This is one of the most important jobs in the country . . . the very top in terms of the black community."

Hooks said he will have to resign his position on the FCC to accept the new job. He said he would meet with NAACP officials in Washington to discuss details of the appointment.

As far as immediate goals, Hooks said "there are no great novel changes I'm going to propose. I just want to really see it bigger and better."

"Benjamin Hooks has made an outstanding record in every field of endeavor he has attempted . . . He is extraordinarily gifted, multitalented and effective," said Margaret Bush Wilson, chairman of the board.

Wilkins, 75, has held the top NAACP post since 1955 but his career with the organization began in 1931. The spokesman said Hooks will assume office on Jan. 1, 1977.

Benjamin L. Hooks

Retirement Conflict

The 75-year-old Wilkins, who had been executive director of the organization since 1955, had been in conflict with its national board over his retirement date.

He had insisted that he and the board had agreed that he would retire next July, but the board contended that he should step down at the end of the year.

The national membership was said to be divided, with some arguing that while they wanted a strong, decisive board, they did not want to see Wilkins hurt. The board finally agreed to let him stay until July. In August, a coalition black and white Avericans urged the board to settle the conflict without "additional public debate."

The 14-member coalition, which included Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Mayors Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles and Richard G. Hatcher of Gary, Ind., asserted that no reasonable person could believe the question of the retirement date could take priority over respect for Wilkin's contributions and the need to maintain a dignified image of the organization.

Chrysler Plants Closed by Strikes

Detroit (UPI) — About 9,000 wildcat strikers forced the closing of three key Chrysler Corp. manufacturing plants Saturday despite agreement a day earlier on a new national contract for 109,000 U.S. and Canadian production workers.

Chrysler and United Auto Workers negotiators continued to meet Saturday in an attempt to wrap up a separate agreement for 9,000 salaried workers whose strike deadline was extended indefinitely.

Also plaguing the firm's attempt to maintain normal operations was the lack of local agreements at 158 of 205 bargaining units.

With the Chrysler negotiations nearly behind it, the UAW plans to set a strike deadline early next week to General Motors for a new contract for its 390,000 U.S. workers. Separate negotiations also will continue to wrap up pacts for 26,000 GM of Canada workers and 12,000 employes of American Motors.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said Friday he expects GM to match both the wage and fringe benefits packages worked out at Ford during a 28-day strike and matched at Chrysler with some improvements in job-protecting issues. Asked if he thought GM would follow the pattern, Woodcock said:

"I have no reason to believe they will not. On the other hand, since they have done nothing I have no positive assurance they will."

The union has never called two nationwide strikes in any year since it began its "target" bargaining strategy in 1955.

Picket lines were set up Saturday morning outside the Trenton, Mich., engine plant; the Twinsburg, Ohio, stamping plant and the Etobicoke, Ont., casting plant. All three have been working heavy overtime and are considered critical to continued operations, a spokesman said.

Some Apartment Dwellers Feel Life's Better Seen Than Heard

By Eleanor Blau

(c) New York Times

New York — Stuart Schimmel launched a counterattack with stereo speakers.

A despairing engineer jammed his neighbor's television set.

The Corwins took up noise confrontation as a hobby. Noise, we are told, is among the most psychologically damaging phenomena in urban life. These people were all reacting to an intrusion into their one refuge from the city's clammor and screech: their home, violated by somebody else's sounds.

The moral here, if there is any, is that you can fight back but there's a good chance you won't win.

Talking Is 'Out'

There are temperate ways, such as dialog with the noisemaker. That is the most effective and unusual method, in the eyes of Judge Gerard Weisberg, who often handles noise cases.

There are official ways: complaints to a superior, in a co-op, to the board of directors or managing agent; calls to the police or Environmental Protection Administration, trips to summons or other courts.

And there are less conventional ways, not all them advisable or legal.

Unhappily, no action necessarily brings relief. Laws about permissable noise are vague. And noisemakers have rights, too.

Day to Day Living

As Judge Livingston Wingate, who has agonized over the problem observed, "Children are brought up in apartments, and drum playing may be a part of your child's life. Maybe you only let him play one hour a day. Should I, the judge, restraint your son or tell you to go hire an auditorium in addition to the $350 or $450 rent you might be paying, for your son to play the drum?"

What everyone must face is that, as Wingate put it, "There are some noises some people will have to endure as a result of apartment living."

Still, clearly legitimate grievances do exist. One can often at least ease noise problems. And the very effort of seeking relief could be therapeutic. An East Side resident who contrived somehow to set his toilet flushing continuously whenever a neighbor began practicing the piano was probably indulging in self-expression as well as drowning out the offending sounds.

Speaking of those less conventional methods, Schimmel, a Manhattan accountant who likes classical music, had his stereo blare at partying neighbors and concluded that "reciprocity works."

In another engagement, Schimmel rang the doorbell of two women upstairs, incessantly, whenever they let their radio rage. Success came within two days. "They thought they were dealing with a lunatic," recalled Schimmel.

One unfortunate result of requital is the sacrifice of innocents. A man in Schimmel's building turned his speakers against an upstairs neighbor whose son romped with clogs, or so it seemed, only to get complaints from his own neighbors below.

On East 14th Street, Perrault, an artist, has had no secondary complaints as a result of his unusual response but success has been less than complete. "Bob barks and the dog listens," his wife, Claire, reports. "Then the dog barks and then Bob barks and sometimes it will stop. It may be another human, I don't know," she added.

In New Jersey, the engineer's jamming device worked fine.

"I could hear the fellow banging on the TV set and cursing," he said. "After a few weeks of this, by the way, he moved."

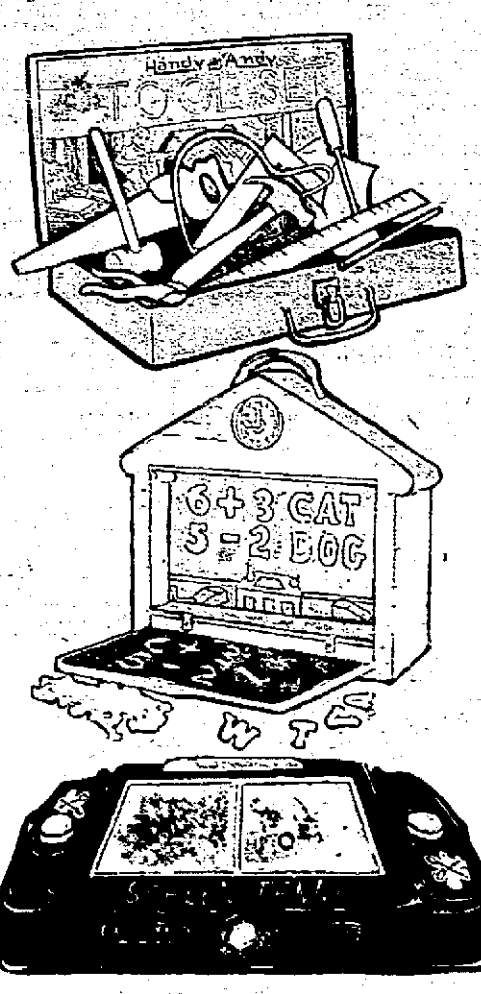

Extra Walls

Acoustics experts say there is no really effective way to reduce noise in buildings without making substantial changes, such as putting up an additional interior wall. If you put in carpeting it will absorb sound within your room, and thus spare a neighbor below the agony of your child's roller skates. But it will not actually stop sound from traveling into the space below.

Wingate, who did research in a law library after becoming troubled about a difficult noise case, found that, althought the noise laws are ambiguous, two trends are clear in past decisions. "Annonyance is not enough — it must be unreasonable," the judge reported. And the senisibilities of the extra-sensitive abnormal are not criteria. "Suppose I say I have a nervous condition," he said. "The court will have to say, 'that's unfortunate'."

American Family Saga

Maybe the most publicized book of the Bicentennial, of particular aptness, will be Alex Haley's "Roots."

Haley is a black American. He undertook an incredibly difficult job of research, trying to trace his family backward through two centuries, back to the African who was kidnapped and sold into slavery to whites in North America.

Haley succeeded in his quest. "Roots" is the irresistible, haunting result. The theme is so overwhelming and the human stories so engrossing that the level of the literary merit is purely coincidental. This is a book which should find a permanent niche in American literature.

One would guess few white Americans have unquenchable curiosity about their old country family roots. Europeans voluntarily emigrated to the colonies and then the United States and essentially for the same reasons — to improve themselves economically or find a personal freedom not otherwise possible.

Not so the blacks. They were victims of one of humanity's awful crimes. Wrenched from their homes, doomed to bondage, poverty and cruelty. It is a stain which America, even yet, has not vanquished.

It will never be purged from the history books, nor ought it be. But a saga like "Roots," which is history, too, does suggest racial redemption in America is not a lost cause, either.

Well Done, George Syas

Dave Newell may turn out to be one whale of a state legislator, and it could be true George Syas went to the electoral well once too often.

Nevertheless, we are not alone saying Syas will be missed when the 1977 Unicameral convenes without him next January. After 26 years of continual service in Nebraska's one-house assembly — two years short of the late Sam Klaver's record — Syas was upended by Newell in Omaha's 13th District last Tuesday.

Rough hewn, thunderously loud Syas was one of those men George Norris and other creators of the non-partisan Unicameral idealized as future members. A man who worked with his hands, who came directly "from the people," whose wisdom grew from the buffeting currents of ordinary and difficult life. A man of total honesty.

Syas was a Union Pacific shops machinist for virtually all of his political career. He took unpaid leaves of absence to come to Lincoln. Mrs. Syas' income as a working wife filled in.

A union man, a Republican, Syas continually badgered his fellow senators when they ignored the overriding commands of the state and national Constitutions. They periodically like to do that.

Syas was not without his blind spots and he could intimidate committee witnesses, although not maliciously. But knowing gut right from wrong was one of George Syas' long suits, and the Omahan acted upon such knowledge and instincts, to the enduring benefit of his personal reputation and that of the people of Nebraska.

U.S. Computers for Chinese

Not everyone will cheer the United States' clear signal of friendship to China's new rulers.

Permitting Control Data Corp. to sell the Chinese two Cyber 172 computers was, in truth, opposed by the Pentagon and the Energy Research and Development Administration. Reluctant authorities pointed out we have used the computer for making nuclear test calculations and in support of radar systems. They can, too.

The Pentagon grudgingly came around when the State Department pledged it would "press" the Chinese to agree to computer use safeguards.

As the story is told, the Chinese plan to devote one computer to seismic (earthquake-related) assignments and the other to oil exploration programs. For the first couple of years, Control Data technicians will be allowed to check out the machines. What happens after that is presumed negotiable.

Last year the Cyber 172 system was described by experts as "advanced" technology, the kind which can be most helpful in modern weapons control. Now, the assessment is the system is, well, toward the "lower end" of the computer spectrum.

That's bunk.

These are extremely sophisticated pieces of equipment the Ford administration is approving for sale to the Chinese.

What this represents is a calculated risk in the direction of improved Sino-American relationships and Chinese ability to remain free of dependence upon the Russians.

Critics might wish to reflect that former Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger Jr. — hardly a pinko softie — last month urged the U.S. to be "open and receptive" to requests from the new Chinese leadership, "particularly with regard to economics and technology."

Schlesinger even went so far as to suggest Chinese bids for U.S. military equipment "should not (be) reject(ed) out of hand."

Let Carter Keep Farm

When a business person of some wealth is elected or appointed to very high public office, a device sometimes used to avoid potential conflict-of-interest situations is creation of a blind trust.

Known holdings and assets may be liquidated. Then the proceeds are put under the control of a trustee. Such an arrangement prevents the officeholder from knowing where future investments might be lodged, while simultaneously protecting his legitimate private financial interests.

President-elect Jimmy Carter now is in that situation. He holds majority interest in the $5 million family-run peanut growing and warehousing operation.

While amenable to disposal of that interest, Carter has said he'd sure like to hang on to some of those 3,100 acres of Georgia farmland. He wants to pass them along to the kids.

Somehow, that ought to be allowed. Family roots run deep in the long-time ownership of farm land, as hundreds of Nebraskans would testify.

ART BUCHWALD

Biting the Ballot

I had a tough time on Election Day. At seven in the morning my neighbor Legendman was at the door.

"I have to vote today," he said, "and I'm scared."

"Everyone is frightened on Election Day," I assured him.

"I can't pull the lever for either guy. I just can't."

"Sure you can. I know it sounds impossible, but when you get in the voting booth I'm certain you'll find the strength to do it."

"Would you go with me? It would be a big favor if I had somebody with me."

My wife gave Legendman a cup of coffee while I got dressed.

I found him in the kitchen holding his head in his hands. "I never felt this way before. I used to look forward to Election Day. Why do I have this terrible feeling?"

"It happens to all of us sooner or later. I'm sure all over the country people feel the way you do. But Americans have to vote. It's a privilege as well as a duty."

"But if I pull the lever for Ford we'll have four more years of the same thing. If I pull the lever for Carter nobody knows what we'll get."

"Vote your conscience."

"If I voted my conscience, I wouldn't vote. I think I'll go get a swine flu shot instead."

I stopped him at the door. "Let's go, Legendman," I said, grabbing his arm. "All you have to fear is fear itself." I bundled him into the car.

We arrived at the school and I noticed several drivers pulling people out of cars. They were all screaming "I can't do it! I can't do it!"

I helped Legendman out. He was shaking and perspiring. "Look, I'll come back later," he said.

We showed our registration cards to the lady at the table. "Booth three," she said to Legendman. He tried to make a break for it and I tackled him.

"Inside," I ordered, "and pull the curtain."

I watched his feet under the curtain. He kept turning around. Finally, I heard a cry like a wounded animal and a click, and Legendman dashed out of the booth.

He looked at me with tears in his eyes. "I only hope God will forgive me."

U.S.-Canada Chill: Unmentioned Issue of '76

By Marc Leepson

A remarkable aspect of the presidential campaign this year was that U.S.-Canadian problems did not enter into the political debate. From this absence of discussion, an American might infer all is well between Ottawa and Washington. A Canadian, on the other hand, is likely to regard the silence as an example of American insensitivity or indifference to Canada.

It so happens Canadian-American relations are in a difficult period of transition. Canada, for many years the obliging junior partner, is attempting to reduce its dependency on the U.S. and to establish a distinctive national identity in economic, cultural and foreign affairs.

"Living next to you is like sleeping with an elephant," Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told an American audience a few years ago. "No matter how friendly and even-tempered the beast . . . one is affected by every twitch and grunt." This sleeping-with-an-elephant syndrome continues to pervade much of Canada's thinking.

American ownership of Canadian business has been a source of friction between the two countries since the mid 1950s when Americans began to invest heavily north of the border. Today, of Canada's 100 largest companies, 40 are American-owned. In addition, American interests control 44% of the country's manufacturing. This year American direct investment in Canada exceeded $26-billion.

Partly as a result of concern over the American "takeover" in Canada, the Trudeau government in 1974 established the Foreign Investment Review Agency to prevent investments not "of significant benefit to Canada." Prime Minister Trudeau called it "the most important of our legislative enactments" in economic nationalism.

The marked rise in Canadian nationalism the past few years has also contributed to increased tensions between the U.S. and Canada. Many observers point to 1972, the year Trudeau set in motion a new policy stressing increased Canadian economic and cultural independence from the U.S., as the start of a new wave of nationalism.

In that year Mitchell Sharp, then Secretary of State for External Affairs, announced Canada's future relations with the U.S. would follow the so-called Third Option, whose aim Sharp wrote, is "to lessen the vulnerability of the Canadian economy to external factors, including in particular the impact of the United States."

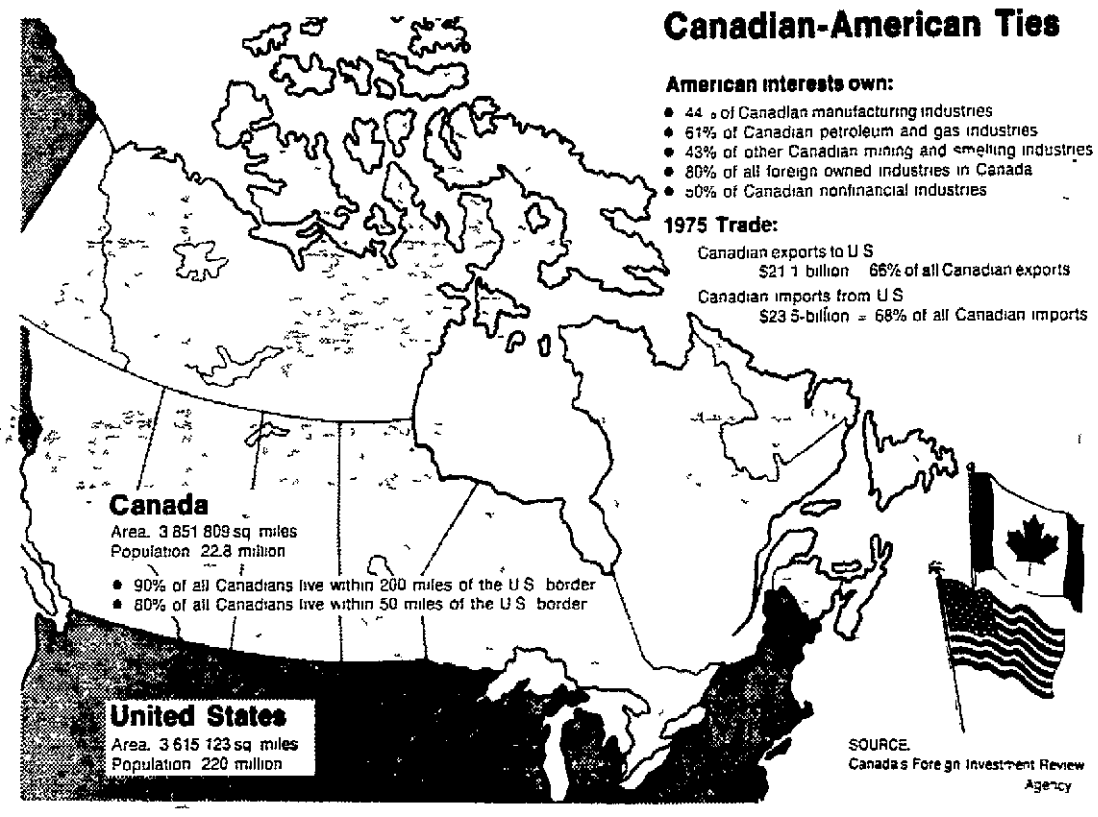

Canadian officials continue to insist the Third Option is not anti-American. They say the policy is basically an instrument for Canada to determine its own future without outside interference. They acknowledge, though, that the objective of the Third Option is to bring about a decline in Canadian dependence on the U.S.

An example of Canada's invoking the Third Option arose during the Arab oil boycott and energy crisis in 1973-74. To Washington's consternation, Canada for the first time imposed border taxes on Canadian oil destined for the U.S. and later, saying the oil was needed at home, said these shipments would be phased out by 1980. Some current tensions between Washington and Ottawa are attributed to those developments.

A more recent example of Canadian self-assertion was legislation approved this year by the Saskatchewan provincial government enabling it to take over potash mines, most of which are American-owned. In spite of assurances from Canadian officials that the province will not raise prices or withhold potash from the American market, one American economic observer has said the action has had a "chilling effect" in the U.S.

America's ambassador to Canada, Thomas Enders, and his Canadian counterpart, J. H. Warren, have insisted in recent speeches that relations are good today between the two countries and likely to remain that way. But differences that have arisen in recent years are not entirely smothered by the reservoir of good will that exists on both sides of the border.

Teaching vs. Practice: An Ancient Conflict

By Paul Greenberg

The most striking home of racial segregation in the Bible Belt has been the church. It is striking, of course, because of the contrast between what religion preaches and what its institutions come to practice. The division is as old as that between prophet and priest, but it is made graphic when the church doors must be closed at the approach of a black man in Plains, Ga.

It was that striking scene that was hung on Jimmy Carter less than 48 hours before the polls opened Tuesday.

Carter's response was exemplary. He refused to separate himself from his congregation or his community, nor would he keep silent about his own moral convictions. The Ford campaign prudently sent down word that nothing should be made of the issue but apparently it never got to a deputy press spokesman, who tried to play the incident for a good deal more than it was worth.

It was Rosalynn Carter who may have done more damage by explaining and explaining the incident. Her chorus of explanations will be as familiar to every Southern churchgoer as the strains of the doxology. But it was good to have them all up front and in print, where they could be seen clear, and weighed in the balance.

It has obviously been a long campaign for Miss Rosalynn and, within sight of the finish line, she let it all out:

• "I know if any other black who was decent and wanted to come into the church, he would be welcome." It goes without saying that no such test is imposed on those entering the sanctuary with a white skin. That has to go without saying, or being thought, for the explanation to be convincing.

• "This man is an activist and he is a man who screams on the street corner and he is against everything." An agitator, a disturber, one who might associate with harlots or even publicans. Can't have that sort in church.

• "If you want to know the truth, I am glad they are not going to let him into the church." Was Mrs. Carter under the impression we did not want to know the truth? And was it in truth a gladness of the heart she felt at such an outcome, or a different kind of gladness that one has to keep trying to justify?

• "I think he'd disrupt the whole thing, but I'd be very happy if we had some black members of the church." Yes, the right sort of blacks, of course, those who could pass the test. Whose test? Rosalynn Carter's, the deacons? There may be neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female in Christ Jesus, but certain distinctions are still upheld in Plains, Ga.

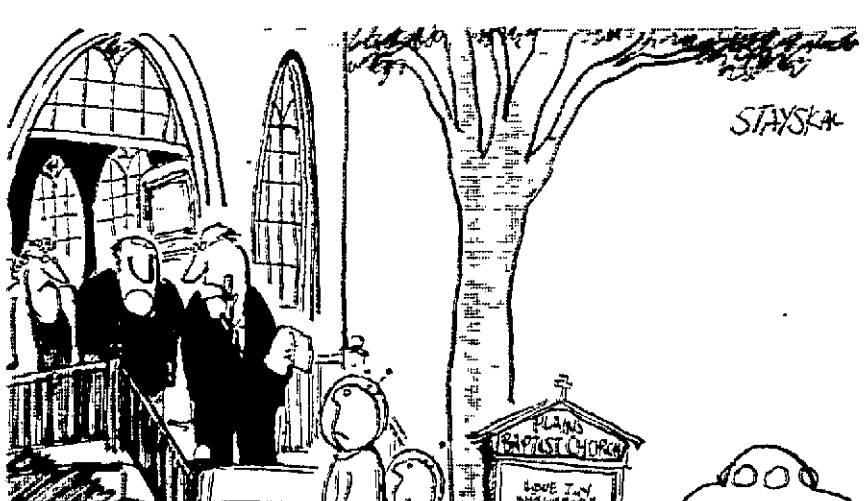

No, it was not an edifying performance on Mrs. Carter's part, but it was better than the crisp No Comment prudence might have dictated. As though this were a minor social embarrassment. Mrs. Carter came to grips with the subject, which means she could still loosen that grip and perhaps examine just what she has hold of, or what has hold of her.

As for the little church in Plains — whatever its sins, they were not discreet. They were right out there in the Georgia sunlight, being recorded by the TV camera. That the little church caught the attention of the media-kaleidoscope even for a brief moment illustrates the still great meaning of the church in America. For the conflict in the story is that between the church and its teachings.

The conflict would not have been vivid if the black visitor was being turned away from a country club or swimming pool, or even a school or library. He was being turned away from "my house, which shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples."

A great question was brought down to a human, understandable scale. It was brought into focus for one clear moment in an undistinguished campaign. Those who politely turned away might look back on it again. It may have said more than most of the speeches and debates in this presidential campaign.

Now It's Up to That Ridiculous Anachronism, the Electoral College

The people have spoken; we have had our straw poll for president. Now we must wait until January to see if the Electoral College will go along with the people's choice. And that's ridiculous.

Will the College ratify the verdict? Undoubtedly. But it doesn't have to. And that's both ridiculous and dangerous.

Here we are, 200 years into our democracy, and we still cling to the quaint custom that says the real presidential election, the only one that counts under the Constitution, can't occur until January when the Electoral College meets in Washington.

Scrapping the Electoral College, I know, is not a new idea. It's been proposed for years. And just as regularly sidetracked. But now it is time that we move — before the next presidential election in 1980 — when the heat of the past campaign has subsided.

We have heard a lot of arguments this year for constitutional amendments to ban abortion and permit prayers in public schools. But if there is one amendment that deserves prompt support of the newly-elected president, it's an amendment to insure that the next president will actually be chosen by popular vote.

Not a single decent argument can be raised in defense of the Electoral College It is like a loaded gun, lying around the house, waiting to go off. It didn't happen this time, but it might next time And we will be sorrier for it.

The College, you will remember from high-school civics, was a compromise inserted into the Constitution because the 13 colonies couldn't agree on a method for selecting the president. Some favored direct vote of the people but the majority felt that was too radical an idea Others wanted the president to be chosen by Congress, but objectors said that would make him subservient to the legislative branch. So the Constitutional Convention of 1787 opted for an intermediate plan. Each state would select, "in a manner as the legislature thereof may direct," a number of electors equal to the number of its senators and representatives in Congress. This "college of electors" would meet to pick the president.

The tradition, of course, is that a state's electors will cast their votes in accord with the majority of the popular vote in that state. But they don't have to do so. And if the Electoral College can't agree on a president, the choice reverts to the House of Representatives in which each state would have but one vote to cast for president

That hasn't happened since 1824, when Andrew Jackson, the popular winner, lost to John Quincy Adams in a raw congressional deal engineered by Speaker Henry Clay But we have had six narrow escapes since then, including the 1960 Kennedy-Nixon contest and the 1968 Nixon-Humphrey race.

Indeed, if there had been a strong third party candidate this year, the Ford-Carter contest might well have resulted in an Electoral College deadlock requiring a final choice by the House of Representatives.

The question is why we tolerate such an "elitist" tradition to continue. There have been dozens of proposals for reform of the College, but none so elegant or so clearly right as the abolition of the College itself.

Public opinion polls show the public supports abolition and has done so for many years. Most political scientists and constitutional authorities see no reason to retain this anachronism in an age when all other key public officers are chosen by popular vote

The hangup is in Congress, where lawmakers of small states have feared their political clout somehow would be weakened. That may have been true in the past. But it makes little sense now that the size of a state's delegation in Congress — and therefore in the Electoral College — is based on the population rule of "one man, one vote."

Congress should act. Public opinion should be exerted to insure that it act — if need be, by petition of the voters. My mail indicates it would be a worthy crusade, beneficial to persons of every political persuasion.

The presidency is the last major office in the land on which the voters do not have a direct voice. Last week's election of the chief executive should have rested with the people and with none other Let's make sure that this really will be the case four years from now

Lincoln — I am writing this at white heat, before I lose the momentum to write it at all. I have just had the third call in three weeks to solicit for some laudable enterprise.

If you answer your phone in the middle of the day, you are trapped My neighbors hate to see me coming with envelopes in my hand. I realize that there are various regulations about federal matching funds with which I am not completely concurrent. But is it not possible for some of these agencies to belong to the United Way and take their fair share therefrom?

Many of these causes have my support. But I am tired of begging my neighbors, and they are tired, too. I am willing to stand up and be counted among those who would like to know why your agency cannot participate in United Way and save all of us a dozen special pleadings.

If you cannot, I will be more than sympathetic. But you better be able to explain it to me and also assure me that there is not another agency doing the same work under the United Way.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The South Sioux City Star was critical of special interest organizations that "are not so much interested in the many thousands of laws which affect the quality of life in Nebraska so long as they do not affect them directly."

A case in point was the Nebraska State Education Assn 's backing of Aaron Butler of Wayne for the 17th district legislative seat, said the editor.

"The NSEA was interested in only one item . . . the fact that State Sen. J. R. Murphy, Butler's opponent, voted . . . in opposition to a bill or bills in which the NSEA had an interest."

The railroads also opposed Murphy because he sought to add the word "coal" to Nebraska statutes dealing with pipelines, the paper said.

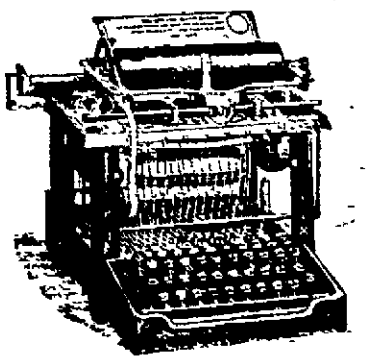

". . . one vote by a legislator could bring the wrath of an entire organization down upon him," the paper said. "Whatever else the legislator has done apparently is of no consequence."

Relocation of 45 state agencies in the new state office building will involve more than 1,800 people and $94,000 and create "an agency monster."

The irony, says the Aurora News Register, is that taxpayers have cried for elimination of many agencies on the federal level.

"While it's too late to scale down a building, it's not too late for the Nebraska taxpayer to say '. . . wait a minute and let us see how many of these agencies we really need or want,' " concluded the editorial.

The skirmish in Nebraska for the $10 million in federal public works money is a textbook example of what is wrong with this approach to creating jobs, wrote the Norfolk Daily News.

"Any projects adopted quickly now — assuming they are worthy enough to be needed — are those which will not be built in a more logical sequence later. This creates the risk of unnecessary unemployment later."

In the opinion of the editor, no funds should have been allocated this state or others where jobless rates are at minimum levels.

"Uncle Sam, of course, is dealing and also committing the gambler's cardinal sin: playing with borrowed money," said the Daily News.

Senator-elect Ed Zorinsky and representative-elect John Cavanaugh waged fairly conservative campaigns and "there is no reason to think they will not vote as they campaigned," said an Omaha World-Herald editorial.

Zorinsky's open door policy won him a lot of favorable publicity in Omaha but the mayor "may need a strong door in Washington with a deadman's lock to fend off Hubert Humphrey and Frank Church trying to pick up campaign IOU's by seeking support for liberal spending programs," the Herald said.

Economics Behind Burundi Coup

Nairobi (AP) — Burundi's ambassador in Uganda was quoted Saturday as saying the Burundi army overthrew President Michel Micombero because he failed to implement economic policies and practiced "injustices and other evils." Uganda radio, monitored here, said Ambassador I. Kebenge told Uganda President Idi Amin in Kampala on Friday Micombero's government was split by conflicting factions. Vicombero was overthrown this past Tuesday. Kebenge said Burundi's new leader, Lt. Col. Jean-Baptiste Bagaza, suspended the constitution. The new ruling Supreme Revolutionary Council of 29 officers would reorganize government institutions and the ruling party, the envoy said.

Arab Peacekeepers 'Turning Point'

Amman, Jordan (UPI) — King Hussein of Jordan said Saturday the Arab League's decision to send a 30,000-man deterrent force to Lebanon was a "turning point" in the 19-month civil war and the Arab world. Hussein said he supported Syria's intervention in Lebanon's civil war "to end the bloodshed there."

Marcos Grants Rebels Amnesty

Manila (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos granted amnesty Saturday to a band of Moslem rebels from the southern Philippines in a nationally televised ceremony. Sharip Macrang Mampao, described by Marcos as commander of 63 Moslem rebels, symbolically turned over a rifle to the president in the presidential palace ceremony.

Mud Dumped in Trapani

Trapani, Sicily (UPI) — One million tons of mud, dumped 24 hours earlier by flash flood waters, covered much of Sicily's westernmost city Saturday. The flood left 10 people dead, eight missing and thousands homeless. Muddy storm waters rushed into Trapani, a city of 70,000 persons, on Friday, flooding 40% of the city's ground floor apartments and shops.

Blacks Support Rhodesia 'Liberation'

Dar es Salaam, Tanzania (UPI) — Black Africa's five "frontline" states bordering white-ruled southern Africa pledged Saturday their continued support of armed struggle for the "liberation" of Rhodesia. In a communique issued after a one-day session, the five — Tanzania, Zambia, Mozambique, Botswana and Angola — reaffirmed their "committment to support the armed struggle for the liberation of Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) as the only means by which the independence of that colony can be achieved."

Egypt Majority Decided

Cairo (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat formally asked Premier Mamdouh Salem on Saturday to form a new cabinet after Salem's political organization won an overwhelming majority in parliamentary elections. Final results announced Saturday gave Salem's center-oriented group 276 of 324 parliament seats filled so far.

Elderly Prisoners Lead Resigned Life

Chino, Calif. (AP) — Like many other elderly men confined to institutions, the 140 residents of Elm Hall spend their days dreaming of the past and fighting off loneliness.

But the residents here are not rest home patients — they are all convicted felons, housed in California's only prison facility exclusively for ageing criminals.

Elm Hall is one part of the California Correctional Facility at Chino, a small town south of Los Angeles. The youngest inmate is 50, prison officials said, though there is no official age requirement.

"Older convicts spend their whole day devising little ways to stay out of everybody's way," said Dr. Joseph Ham, an expert on their problems.

"I had one guy who had done 30 years for murder," he said. "He was 76 when he got out and he didn't have any place to go. He deliberately committed a crime so he could get back in."

An Elm Hall inmate, interviewed while he worked a jigsaw puzzle, said for most of his fellow prisoners "there's nothing for them outside.

"They don't have any family or any friends," he said. "Nobody ever comes to see them. They'd just as soon die here as outside.

"Their primary objective is to do their time and not get in trouble. They take their meals early."

The inmate, who asked not to be identified, said many Elm Hall residents fear the younger prisoners they come in contact with at other prisons.

"The young guys hate prison authority and they fight the system," he said. "They do things the older people think are crazy. So the old guys just try to stay out of their way."

Another prisoner said he preferred life at Elm Hall to San Quentin Prison, where he spent a year.

"This is better," he said. "We have an occasional fight and some of the guys are grouchy. But we don't have stabbings or anything like that.

"You're under more stress when you're around the young guys. They give way to their emotions and you've got to worry whether they're going to start a riot," he said.

Innovator Misses Opportunity, But Choking Rescue Documented

By Arthur J. Snider
(c) Chicago Daily News

Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, innovator of a maneuver to rescue choking victims, has never saved anyone himself. But he came close the other day.

A diner in his Cincinnati hospital's coffee shop turned blue and collapsed. Onlookers hoped that Heimlich himself somehow would materialize, perform the technique and save the patient. Instead, a nearby volunteer worker came to the rescue. Heimlich, in surgery at the time, didn't learn of his missed opportunity until the next day.

While he has none to show for himself, the surgeon has documented 600 lives saved since introducing the pressure maneuver a little more than a year ago. That would indicate the estimate of 4,000 choking deaths a year in this country is too low, he told the recent convention of the American College of Surgeons. Many are wrongly attributed to a heart attack.

Probably Choking

"If an individual is stricken while eating, the chances are 98 in 100 that he is choking on food," said Heimlich, "especially if he has turned blue, is unable to breathe or talk. A heart victim usually is able to breathe and talk, even though in great pain," he said. "Time has been lost and patients have died because a would-be rescuer has tried to perform heart resuscitation when the airway was blocked by a bolus. If someone suddenly runs to the restaurant washroom or outside for fresh air, he probably is in a choking predicament."

Heimlich hopes the public could become familiar with a simple hand sign — such as grasping the neck with the thumb and index finger of one hand — to signify "I am choking."

Scarcely a day passes without a report to Heimlich of yet another dramatic rescue. Recently a blind man dining with seven others heard a commotion, arose and dashed unerringly around the table to his wife's side and applied the Heimlich maneuver. "I am grateful to you," he wrote.

Bellows Effect

In all probability, food-choking occurs while the diner is breathing in. This causes the food particle to be sucked against the larynx. The lungs are expanded and the large volume of air in them could be used as a bellows effect, Heimlich reasons. His calculations showed that a quart of air flows out during expiration, but there is still twice that volume left in the lungs.

That reservoir can be tapped by pressing one's fist upward into the epigastrium (the pit of the stomach — at the midline just below the rib cage). The diaphragm then rises several centimeters into the chest. Sudden elevation of the diaphragm compresses the lungs and forces out the food or other object blocking the airway.

The action can be simulated by inserting a cork into the mouth of an inflated balloon or a compressible plastic bottle.

Not Enough Pressure

The old-fashioned method of hitting the victim on the back increases pressure slightly, but does not produce a forceful stream of air.

There have been a few cases of ribs fractured because rescuers have squeezed the victim in a bear hug instead of wrapping arms around the waist, pressing the fist into the victim's abdomen and thrusting upward quickly, several times if necessary. An arm crush could injure the liver or spleen. Obviously, less pressure should be applied to children than to adults.

Twenty-three persons have saved themselves when no help was around. If one is reluctant to shove his fist sharply into his abdomen, Hemlich suggests pressing against the back of a chair or edge of a sink.

Thief Takes Fire Truck

Liege, Belgium (UPI) — It could have been a case of "where's the fire," but it wasn't.

Witnesses said an unidentified person Friday stole a 22-ton fire truck from the regional fire station at Liege and drove off, sirens wailing.

Eventually, the thief rammed the fire engine into a parked car, witnesses said. A little while later, they said, he abandoned it near the fire station and ran off on foot.

Exiled Scientist Tells Of Two Soviet Disasters

London (AP) — An exiled Soviet scientist asserted Saturday that hundreds of people were killed and thousands suffered from radiation sickness when buried atomic waste exploded without warning in the Ural Mountains in 1958.

Zhores Medvedev, a biochemist and geneticist now living in England, also said that dozens of top Soviet space technologists lost their lives when a moon rocket ignited while they were examining it in 1960.

He disclosed details about the Soviet disasters in an article in New Scientist, a British scientific weekly.

Medvedev wrote that for many years, atomic reactor waste was buried in a deserted area a few dozen miles from the town of Blagoveshensk in the Ural Mountains, which form the dividing line between the Soviet Union's European and Asian territory.

The waste overheated within the shallow burial facility and erupted "like a violent volcano," the scientist said. Strong winds blew the resulting radioactive clouds hundreds of miles away. Medvedev said that no one was evacuated from the affected area until after symptoms of radiation sickness were evident.

According to Medvedev, many Ural towns where the level of radiation was moderate to high, but not lethal, were never evacuated. The area most seriously affected by the atomic waste mishap is still considered dangerous and is closed to the public, he wrote.

Medvedev wrote that another Soviet disaster occurred in fall 1960 when then Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev ordered that a moon rocket be launched at the same time as his arrival in New York for the United Nations General Assembly session.

The move apparently was intended to score a propaganda victory by demonstrating the superiority of Soviet over U.S. space technology, the exiled scientist said.

When the launch moment came, the ignition button was pushed, but nothing happened. Under normal safety procedures, Medvedev's account said, the rocket's fuel should have been drained before inspection to find the problem, but this would have taken time and would have forced a postponement of the spectacle.

Marshal Mitrofan Nedelin, in charge of the project, was "under an obligation to fulfil the ambitious order" issued by Khrushchev and thus "irresponsibly decided to investigate the fault immediately," Medvedev wrote.

Dozens of engineers and other experts began examining the rocket and its support systems. Then, suddenly, the ignition started to work. But the rocket did not take off and instead toppled over because it was unable to pull clear of the forest of inspection ladders.

The mishap turned the Soviet cosmodrome into a holocaust, Medvedev wrote, killing dozens of persons in the area around the rocket, among them "some of the best representatives of Soviet space technology."

He added that the Soviet government tried to hide the disaster and subsequently reported that Nedelin died in a plane crash.

Madvedev gave no sources for his account of the two reported mishaps, but as a scientist in the Soviet Union he presumably had access to information that was not made public. Virtually all disasters, whether natural or man-caused, are routinely ignored in the controlled Soviet news media.

Medvedev, a well-known dissident within the Soviet Union, was allowed to come to Britain in January 1973 to work for a year. He became an exile when Soviet authorities refused to allow him to return.

Betel Nut Ban Making Natives Red With Anger

Saipan, Micronesia (UPI) — The betel nut chewers of Micronesia are spitting mad at Washington for a proposed ban on the export of the nuts which have been chewed for centuries by the Pacific islanders.

Palau District Administrator Thomas O. Remengesau said the "dangerous" label was placed on betel nut chewing by "the sun-crazed officials" at the Health, Education and Welfare Dept.

The Micronesian news service said Guam Congressman Antonio Won Pat had joined the fight to have the ban removed. HEW has stopped importation of the nuts into the U.S. mainland because they contain substances that could be dangerous or poisonous.

"The nuts have been chewed all over the world for hundreds of years," said reporter Valentine Sengebau who says he has chewed betel for half of his 36 years.

"It's better than hard liquor and the only danger involved is that you're liable to get your white shirt stained when spitting," he said.

The ground nuts, when mixed with lime juice, give off a red juice that stains the teeth. The ingredients are carried in over-the-shoulder bags by the Pacific islanders who would feel undressed without their betel nut bags.

Remengesau said that despite warnings from the surgeon general's office that cigaret smoking is dangerous to the health. HEW officials are allowing tobacco manufacturers to continue their shipments of their commodities over state lines and on to foreign countries.

"But when some sun-crazed officials at HEW say that betel nut may be dangerous, the entire department goes on the warpath about an issue they know nothing about and a practice they themselves have never tried," he said.

Won Pat has asked HEW Secretary David Mathews to overturn the ban.

"A reasonable person could only conclude that the ban has been imposed because it is "strange" or "different."

Officials in the Yap district which grows Micronesia's finest betel nuts have offered Won Pat a life-time supply of nuts if the ban is lifted.

Estimated at 40 feet long, this fuzzy image was detected by sonar in about 350 feet of water in Loch Ness. A team searching for the Loch Ness Monster has nicknamed the object "The Average Plesiosaur," after the prehistoric animal that some believe Nessie bo to be.

Sonar Reveals Object — Nessie or Barge?

Boston (AP) — Scientists report that a snoar search for the legendary Loch Ness monster has turned up a fuzzy outline of an object on the bottom of the deep Scottish lake which resembles a prehistoric dinosaur.

But Martin Klein, head sonar expert of this past summer's expedition to the loch sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Science in Boston, is cautious about his discovery.

Klein said in a telephone interview from Salem, N. H., where his sonar manufacturing firm, Klein Associates is located, "It certainly bears further investigation."

A picture of what might be a monster carcass — of a shipwreck or something else — appeared in the electronics trade journal (EDN), published here Friday.

A carcass would establish Nessie's existence almost as well as a live specimen, but no one has ever found one.

The picture is a side-scan sonar trace of the bottom of Loch Ness. One object is almost certain to be a barge sunk years ago.

Nearby is what EDN and Klein described as "an unusual shape with a long neck-like projection and what could possibly be flippers" about 30 feet long.

EDN said the object was at 330 feet, too deep for a dive, but in his telephone interview Klein said the magazine was mistaken and it was 150 feet.

Klein provided another picture of a scan of what the sonar crew dubbed "The Average Plesiosaur," after the prehistoric animal that has been one candidate for the identity of the legendary monster. It also was about 30 feet long.

In the draft of an article for Technology Review, the alumni publication of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Klein wrote of that scan, "As is often the situation in our type of work, we made one of our most intriguing finds just as we were about to wind up our survey."

"The target has a carcass-like shape with a long neck-like projection, and . . . does not look like any of the other targets which we picked up in the loch. Of course it would be wild speculation to make any assumptions about this target without further investigation. An underwater television or a small submersible would probably be needed for identification . . .

"We named this target 'The Average Plesiosaur' to tease our paleontologist friends. It will be interesting to find if the target is still there when we next go to look for it."

The expedition mounted a complex of cameras and other sonar equipment this summer in the loch in its most ambitious undertaking yet, and probably the most ambitious monster hunt ever launched. It has not yet reported its findings.

Mayors Planning Strategy

Chicago (UPI) — Mayors from more than 100 cities will attend an "emergency" meeting in Chicago today and Monday to try to agree on a strategy for implementing their national urban policy under President-elect Jimmy Carter.

Newark Mayor Kenneth Gibson, president of the National Conference of Mayors who called the meeting, said he expects the mayors to make "a national urban investment program" their top priority.

"We took the cities which had been destroyed in World War II and we rebuilt them," Gibson said. "We rebuilt them physically, economically and in many cases we rebuilt the individual human services.

"And there are returns now being realized from Western Europe becasue of that investment. What we're really trying to say is that if this nation made practical, reasonable investment in its urban centers, the returns would be far better than that original investment."

Gibson added, "to talk about an investment is much better than just talking about cash grants, because people in this country tend to think that mayors just want get their hands on money.

"Mayors are not always there saying, 'Give us the money.' We have a problem. We have millions of people who have problems and we need some help to solve these problems."

Staid Dental Images Fading; New Offices Encourage Visits

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Getting people to make regular trips to the dentist has been like, well, pulling teeth.

The traditional image of the dentist's office as a stark white cell, equipped with instruments that look and sound as if they could uproot an oak, has prompted many to ignore sage advice to seek routine dental check-ups.

A recent survey, however, reveals that the Americans who make annual or semi-annual visits to the dentist has risen by 33% in the past 20 years. In 1957, one of every seven people saw a dentist regularly. Now, the figure is one out of four, says Esmark Inc. of Chicago.

According to Esmark, which deals in dental furnishings and equipment, the rise is due to a combination of medical developments and psychological inducements.

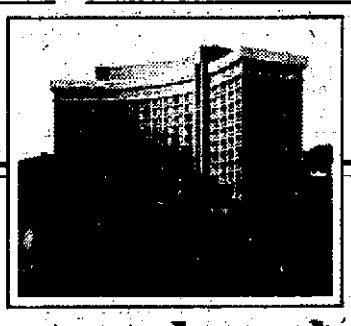

The high-speed air drill produced in 1957 enabled dentists to work more rapidly and to cause relatively little pain. Dentists also have set about changing their offices to fit the new technology.

Esmark reports widespread use of comforting green, yellow, gray and brown "earth tones" in treatment and reception rooms. Colors often "flow" in graphic designs from walls to ceilings and floors. Children's reception rooms frequently have eye-level pictures of clowns and cowboys.

The dental industry also has taken pains with lighting and music. Soft lights are used in waiting rooms; concentrated fluorescent lights are reserved for treatment areas.

Acoustically, treatment rooms have been designed to maximize the soothing effects of music systems and to dull the sounds from drills and other mechanical equipment. Some dentists have tried piping music into headphones for patients.

The survey also notes the growing use of plants and paintings to create a "homey" feeling. In some regions of the country, notably the South, dental offices are located in old homes with such comforting touches as fireplaces and lace curtains.

Flood-Damaged Italian Paintings Being Restored

Gilberto Uresti

Texas County Cleaning Closets

San Diego, Tex (UPI) — If it weren't for the late model cars and long hair styles on a few young men, this languid little town in the heart of South Texas could easily be mistaken for the setting of "The Last Picture Show."

The Regis Theater, the town's only movie house, closed for more than a decade ago. An arsonist set fire to the building after it closed and now only parts of the old theater stand.

Tacho's candy and ice cream store on Main Street is still open. Tacho sells cigarets for a nickel apiece. Most customers come from across the street, the unemployed who spend lazy afternoons hanging out at the deteriorating pool hall run by Johnny Benavides

Despite the sameness of appearances, there is something different about Duval County, a place which for Texans automatically brings to mind crooked officials and was presented to the rest of the nation on television as a flagrant example of rural corruption.

The Duke's Legacy

Those were the days of "The Duke of Duval" and his legacy. It is because those days are gone that change is at hand.

For the first time in 60 years, the Parr family no longer controls the sprawling South Texas county of ranch land dotted with mesquite trees and cattle. Duval County, with the help of federal and state prosecutors, is cleaning house.

George Parr, 73-year-old "Duke of Duval," committed suicide last year after being ordered to serve a prison sentence for failing to report and evading hundreds of thousands of dollars in Federal income taxes.

Insiders said Parr chose to die rather than go to prison. In the early 1950s, at the height of his power, Parr did go to prison for mail fraud in the theft of money from the Benavides school district. That prison stay was cut short with a pardon by then President Harry S. Truman.

100 Indicted

In the past two years, more than 100 officials and county employes were indicted to end the political machine started by George Parr's father at the turn of the century.

Investigators in the Texas attorney general's office say millions of dollars in public funds were stolen during the Parr regime in a county with a population of only 12,000.

"The county bought his (George Parr's) groceries and gasoline," one investigator said. "The county was his personal bank account."

Now, Gilberto Uresti, a short, slender pharmacist and admitted political novice, is trying to put Duval County back on a firm financial basis.

Uresti was elected county judge this year, one of the winners in an election which saw 87 candidates vying for the county's political positions — which was new for Duval County, where contested races were rare for more than half a century.

When Uresti, 40, took office the county was broke and owed $450,000. Now, Uresti said, Duval County has an operating fund of $900,000, plus $350,000 in certificates of deposit in a local bank earning 7¾% interest.

Shady Delings Ended

But equally important to Uresti has been an end to the secrecy and shady dealings of the Parr regime.

"I promised the people I would not hide anything and I've tried to fulfill that promise," he said. "I schedule county commission meetings at night and invite the citizens to participate.

"I have many plans for this county. But it takes time and money — and help."

While Duval County was undergoing its shakedown this year, the CBS-TV program, "60 Minutes," visited the county and portrayed its corruption.

"I challenged 60 Minutes," Uresti said. "I told them to come back and see the improvements we've made"

Florence, Italy (AP) — Ten years ago, the Arno river flooded this treasure house of the Italian Renaissance, killed more than 50 people and damaged thousands of works of art.

But after 10 years of talk, "not one thing has been done to control the Arno and prevent it all from happening again," said Elio Gabbuggiani, the Communist mayor of Florence.

The memories of Nov. 4, 1966, were accentuated Thursday by heavy rains that caused floods from Venice down to farmlands south of Naples. But the Arno stayed well within its banks, and damage elsewhere was limited to a small number of homes and crops.

In 1966, 113 persons were killed and countless millions in damage were caused by floods over large parts of the Italian peninsula.

Florence caused the most concern, because about half of the deaths were in this area and art treasures representing a whole era of history were threatened.

About Half

Art restoration experts have been working ever since on the estimated 1,200 paintings and thousands of centuries-old illuminated books and manuscripts that were damaged by the waters. Authorities say the job is about half complete.

The most celebrated victim of the flood, a 13th Century crucifix by Giovanni Cimabue, was submerged for days and lost major portions of its paint. What is left is almost ready for public viewing again.

Since the flood, there have been plenty of ideas about how to control the Arno: dredge the river bed, reconstruct the bases of the city's bridges to prevent debris from damming up around them, dig artificial lakes to drain off any overflow. But nothing has been done.

The regional government recently launched a new study of the problem.

Mismanagement

Gabbuggiani, who became Florence's first Communist mayor in mid-1975, accuses the national Christian Democratic governments of virtually leaving the city to its own resources after the flood. But he says part of the problem is years of mismanagement by the Christian Democrats in the city government.

"Since 1965 there have been eight different city administrations, some of them lasting only a matter of months," he notes.

He claims Florence's economy, culture and social welfare all have been allowed to deteriorate. He says all parties must get together to "confront these problems, or they won't be solved."

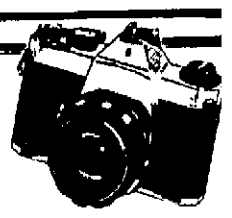

Only the Christian Democrats and the neo-Fascists voted against his Florence Project for urban renewal, he said, while the Republicans and Social Democrats abstained with positive comments on the plan although they are officially members of the opposition.

The project aims to revitalize the artisan backbone of the city's economy, restore the central city without destroying its historical authenticity and put development on a basis of orderly planning.

The mayor said the municipal prison will soon be moved to the outskirts, and studies have begun on the feasibility of putting the railroad tracks to and from the central station underground.

Arson Is Called Fastest Growing Crime in U.S.

By Michael Magner
(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — The recent Bronx social club fire that took the lives of 25 persons briefly focused national attention on the fastest-growing crime in America — arson.

The fire in the Puerto Rican Social Club early Oct. 26 was only one of more than 2,000 suspicious fires this year in the Bronx area alone.

Nationwide, the number of suspicious fires has more than doubled since the beginning of the decade. Most urban fire chiefs agree that well over half the fires they fight today are of suspicious origin.

Dollar losses due to arson have also increased enormously in recent years. This year, the Insurance Service Office estimates that total arson losses will exceed $4 billion. In 1970, the losses were estimated at about $2 billion.

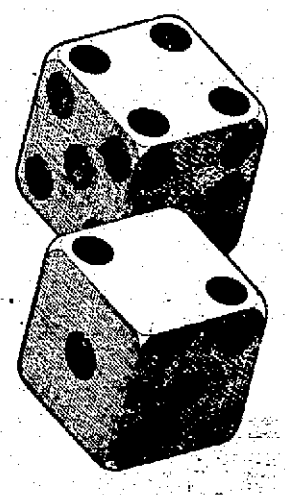

The recession has been blamed in part for the rapid rise in the arson rate. Robert Knowles of the Insurance Information Institute said, "It has become extremely profitable to burn your building in recent years. From 1973 to 1974, (the first year of the recession), insurance company payments for fire losses increase by 75%." The difficulty in detecting arson has also made it an attractive risk for many who are caught in a financial squeeze. Fewer than half of all suspicious fires are fully investigated, and only a fraction of those investigations result in arrests and convictions.

The problem is not only that it is difficult to detect arson, but most local fire officials have not been trained adequately in fire investigation methods. In some localities there is even confusion about who is responsible for conduting an investigation — police, fire or insurance officials.

"Our biggest problem is that we still don't fully understand the extent of the arson problem," said Howard Tipton, administrator of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration (NFPCA), a Commerce Dept. agency that was two years old last week.

"We have never been able to substantiate the actual magnitude of the problem, so we're still trying to define the areas of need," Tipton said. "Right now our first priority is to educate the members of the fire service, primarily in methods of detecting arson. We also have much to learn about the behavior patterns of arsonists."

Odds Are Improved With Crooked Dice

Washington (UPI) — Throwing crooked dice does little to help a gambler in the short run, but over the long haul a set of sophisticated "bricks" or "misspots" may slightly increase the mathematical odds of winning, the FBI said Saturday.

The FBI laboratory's gambling unit conducted field tests of dice that were altered in a number of ways ranging from blatant number changing to more sophisticated methods. The results were published in FBI, a justice Dept. publication for law enforcement officers.

"Whenever a dice gambling game is played the house has a built-in mathematical advantage or takes a percentage of the pot," the magazine said. "However, unscrupulous operators (or sometimes the players themselves) may increase their edge (or the players attempt to defeat the edge) by use of crooked dice."

"The value of most altered dice (other than misspots) is in the long run . . . contrary to popular belief, a pair of strong loads or obvious bricks, when thrown together, will not throw the favored numbers every time or even a majority of the time. The crooked gambler merely wants to alter the fairness of the game in the long run."

The report detailed ways to make and use crooked dice. Examples:

— Misspots. Fair dice have six faces, each numbered from 1 through 6, and two opposite sides added together always total 7. Misspots are made so two or more faces have the same number of spots.

A fairly obvious example has the 5 on all faces and, coupled with a die having only a 6 and a 2 on each face, can only throw 7 and 11. More subtle dice have three numbers, making them harder to spot since a player can only see three faces of a die at one time.

— Loads. Part of a plastic die can be removed and a heavier substance, such as lead, introduced — usually under one or more spots — so the die tends to fall with that side down, thus favoring the opposite side.

— Magnets. A substance that can be attracted by a magnet is used instead of lead, and crooked operators either use an electromagnet installed in the dice table or carry a hand magnet.

— Flats or bricks. The die is flattened, brick-shaped, instead of being a perfect cube. Most brick dice are "6-ace flats" — flattened so the 6 and 1 opposite sides have larger surfaces than the others.

— Rockers or bevels. Faces are rounded so the dice tend to rest on specific numbers.

— Edgework. Most good dice have sharp edges. Fair dice with beveled edges should have the edges cut at a 45 degree angle. When edgework is employed, the edges are not filed to give one or more surfaces having an increased area.

Pershing Rifles Pledge Stabbed in Hazing, Killed

Lindenhurst, N. Y. (UPI) — A pledge for the St. John's University ROTC fraternity was stabbed to death with a bayonet as he was being "interrogated," apparently as part of illegal hazing, authorities said Saturday.

Suffolk County police said 20-year-old Thomas Fitzgerald of New York City, a pledge for the Pershing Rifles, was submitting to mock interrogation late Friday night in order to be admitted to the national ROTC fraternity.

Police said Fitzgerald, a student at St. John's, was stabbed once in the chest by a bayonet and died shortly afterward.

James Savino, 21, of New York City, a member of the fraternity, was charged Saturday morning with second-degree murder in the stabbing, police said. Savino is a student at Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N. J., but is a member of the St. John's ROTC.

Martin Healy, a spokesman for St. John's, located in the New York City borough of Queens, said a group of about 20 members and pledges of the Pershing Rifles went to the Indian Island camp in suburban Long Island for the training in "interrogation techniques," in which members played the part of "interrogators" and the pledges were "prisoners of war (POW)."

"At one point they got into the area of intimidation," Healy said, in which an interrogator jabs at a POW with a bayonet. The POW is protected by a block of wood hanging from his nec.

"In this case," Healy said, "the block of wood apparently slipped."

Healy said the youths told their ROTC supervisors they were going to a friend's house for a party, not to Indian island for training. No ROTC training is allowed to take place without an army officer and an enlisted man present, he said.

Healy also said all forms of fraternity hazing are outlawed not only by the school but also by state law. "If they really were hazing, all the students who took part could be expelled," Healy said. "I understand that state law makes it a misdemeanor."

Is GOP Losing Its Grip on Nebraska? Pols Say Yes, No, Maybe

By Don Pieper

Bob Crosby remembers 1936, when he put a Landon for President poster in his office window and worried someone might toss a brick at it.

No one did. But Alf Landon was a Republican, and Crosby tells the story to show that, if the Nebraska GOP had its ego bruised last Tuesday, Republicans have had to be humble here before.

But not often.

In the 28 presidential elections since statehood, Democrats have won Nebraska's electoral votes only seven times. Two of those victories were recorded by native son William Jennings Bryan — and even Bryan lost the state once to a Republican.

The Republican, Gerald Ford, was the presidential winner in Nebraska last week, as usual. And two incumbent GOP House members were returned to Washington by overwhelming majorities.

But it wasn't the same old dynasty routine. The Democrats elected a U. S. senator and a House member. They already had a governor.

Suddenly, it was time to look at the party which has dominated Nebraska politics, with only an occasional lapse, for more than a century.

Do Tuesday's Democratic successes signal a fundamental change in Nebraska political attitudes? Or was this election another lapse?

Sittig: Basic Shift

Dr. Robert Sittig, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln political scientist, has been examining the lapses through the years, and he doesn't think this is one of them. A basic shift has occurred, Sittig says, but it isn't as dramatic as some Democrats are claiming.

"Nebraska probably has shifted from a

Democratic Gov. J. J. Exon puts it differently.

"For the first time in history," he says, "Nebraska has come of age as a two-party state. Never again will a candidate have a 20,000- or 30,000-vote automatic head start just because he is a Republican.

"This is no flash in the pan. The Republican party isn't doomed, but Republicans should realize that Nebraska voters no longer think of all Democrats as wild-eyed spenders."

Val Peterson of Wayne, former governor and Republican elder statesman, says he is a firm believer in the two-party system. "If you believe in that," he says, "you've got to believe in competition in your state. Republicans better realize the challenge is going to get tougher every day."

Lapse Theory Liked

Republican leaders, though chastened by Tuesday's double loss, tend toward the lapse theory in discussing long-range effects. They say renewed enthusiasm, critical self-analysis and infusion of new blood will restore the historic dominance.

"All types of volunteer organizations have cycles," according to Glenn Wilson of Grand Island, a former state GOP executive director. "We're in a low cycle. It's difficult to motivate people when they've had things going their way for years."

Former State Chairman Bill Barrett of Lexington says the GOP must take a long look at its appeal to the average voter. "Nebraska has been a Republican state generation after generation, so the base is there and we must build on it. The time is past for rhetoric; we're going to have to produce," he says.

Another former state chairman, Milan Bish of Grand Island, puts heavy stress on opening the party. "By golly, the leadership better look at this thing," he says, tracing some of the recent difficulties to an attitude that the Nebraska GOP is a "Washington protection society."

Bish says fresh GOP talent often is smothered.

Koch: Tunnel Vision

State Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston says the party must make room for moderates. Current leadership, he says, "is guilty of tunnel vision. They are always against programs and government."

Bob Crosby, who went on to become a Republican lieutenant governor and then governor after watching Alf Landon lose, said last week's loss of a Senate seat and a House seat could have "a purgative effect. We might have purged ourselves of an apparatus that might have tended to keep the same gang in."

Crosby was referring to anointment of successors by GOP hierarchy.

Monday Auction Latest Round In Blue Hill Bank Controversy

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Blue Hill — About noon Monday, an auctioneer will start selling off 320 acres of Louis Witte's 480-acre farm, plus most of his machinery. Nightfall should find Witte able to pay off some $190,000 in overdue bank notes.

The bidding will be spirited, as will some certain barnyard discussion about Blue Hill's Commercial Bank. Surfacing intermittently since the first of the year, the topic has raged full force since a brief review appeared in the current Newsweek.

Jumping from the page was an unnamed businessman's description of bank president David Schomburg, 48, as "the most hated man in Webster County." That may be an overstatement, but there's no denying the furor over his tightened loan policy since he arrived here last December.

Newsweek claims the tougher credit "has forced as many as 30 farmers to sell all or part of their lands." The related impact on Blue Hill's overall economy is also of concern — and somewhat in dispute.

Schomburg himself, 18 years in banking including the past 8 with Grand Island's Commercial National Bank, flails the article as "totally inaccurate." He does acknowledge yanking the credit reins but insists it was necessary to strengthen the bank.

Schomburg: Overstated

The article "grossly overstated" the number of farmers whose loans have been called in, he says. But the banker declined a Sunday Journal and Star request for the correct figure, calling it "confidential information."

"Since I am not at liberty to talk about facts of a confidential nature, I find it difficult to respond to the article," he stated. "But I know what my directors want and I know what is required to have a good sound bank. Some people are just trying to undermine us by driving down deposits."

Schomburg's predecessor, the last local member of the McBride family, which owned the bank from 1905 to 1969, was removed as president in June by four fellow directors of a holding company, Blue Hill Agency Inc. E. J. McBride acknowledges that he always had a "moderate to liberal" loan policy but angrily denies the board's suggestion that this equates with poor management.

The directors adjudged some $2 million in loans as marginally "classified" at an October 1975 meeting, McBride says, but he is defensive of the total.

"There always have been marginal loans, only we tried to work with people rather than sell them out," explained McBride, 50.

Louis Witte

David Schomburg

E. J. McBride

Other directors are chairman Harold Myers, an Omaha investor; Oxford banker Dan Huff, North Loup banker Dale Stine, and contractor Phil Werner of Hastings. All have interests in other banks as well.

Stricken a year ago with a rare form of cancer which apparently has been arrested, McBride said "nobody mentioned a thing about so-called poor management until I got sick." He staunchly defends his 29-year record with the bank and "our loans that just about made this town . . . ask anybody on Main St."

Role Confirmed

Businessmen do confirm Commercial's role in building Blue Hill and generally are appreciative of McBride. But some also reflect Schomburg's contention that he is forced to push borrowers because of worsening economic conditions.

Schomburg blames the situation on four principal factors: prolonged drouth, small nonprofitable cow calf operations, heavy indebtedness and what he calls "the inability by some individuals to manage that heavy indebtedness."

Newspaper publisher Leland Ostdiek said general economic conditions, starting with high 1972 cattle prices "which enabled farmers to borrow high," caused some operators to become overextended. The impact here depends upon the total so affected — a number still in dispute — and an apparent boomerang effect on the bank.

"The bank is continuing to loan, but its assets already have dropped and this obviously brings a decrease in loan money that's available," said Ostdiek. "This is what could hurt both our farmers and the trade they bring to Blue Hill."

Upon questioning, Schomburg said assets have dropped from $12.9 million in February 1975 to $11.9 million as of Oct. 1. But he added that "it is not uncommon today for a country bank's deposits to be down."

According to Witte and several other farmers upset over the bank policy, "several dozen accounts" already have changed to other banks or will do so in the immediate future. Among them is the account of Larry and Jerry Kort, who say they are leaving although the bank did not call in their notes.

"Just last week we went in to pay a $130,000 loan, but Schomburg refused unless we either paid cash or added seven days' interest while the check was processed," said the brothers. "He wouldn't even take a certified check . . . We're through."

Charles Van Boening said he quit the bank "because Schomburg told my brother-in-law things were fine, then called in his notes three days later . . . I can't operate with a man like that."

The main complaint by Witte, 39, is that Schomburg allegedly refused to help him apply for an 80% guaranteed FHA emergency livestock (EL) loan. Told that a friend of Witte would deposit the remaining 20% to cover the balance, Schomburg reportedly said he "doesn't go for EL loans."

Schomburg told a reporter he feels that "most such loans simply prolong the borrower's problems." He added that he believes Witte would be technically ineligible anyway because he expanded his farm operation.

Claim Denied

The banker also denied Witte's claim that Schomburg once agreed to refinance him, then backed out. Witte said he has been "battling the bank since last Jan. 2, when I first met Schomburg and was told 30 seconds later that he decided to sell me out on Feb. 15th."

The chairman of a farmer group organized in protest to the bank, Bryan Jones of Bladen, said he notified Newsweek of the controversy. Reporter Chris Harper, a UNL journalism alumnus, handled the story.

Jones said he knows of "10 farmers who

Part of the fleet of earth movers and other equipment that for six months has been building the 4,500-foot-long Elwood Dam.

Elwood Dam, Reservoir Near Completion After 3½ Years

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Elwood — — Kids in a giant sandbox, construction workers about three miles north of here have been moving dirt for six months.

Unlike kids in a sandbox, what they have wrought is important: a 4,500-foot-long, 125-foot-high dam that soon will be the north end of the Elwood Reservoir, a 12.4 billion-gallon lake.

The Elwood Dam is nearly finished. Richard Stroud, of the engineering firm CH2M-Hill, said the 1,700-foot-long main dam and adjacent saddle dams should be completed by December. When filled, the reservoir will cover about 1,300 surface acres.

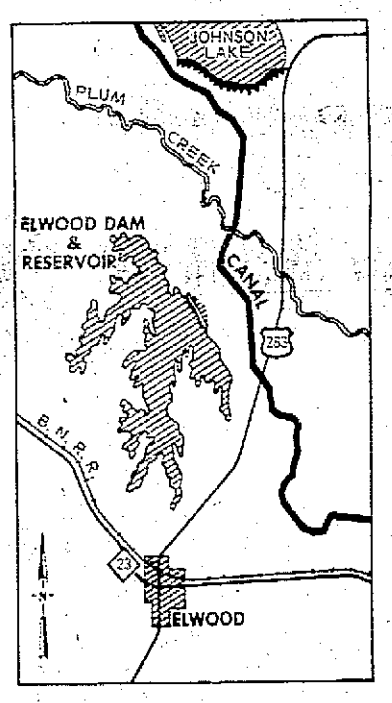

Don Long of the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District, which is building the reservoir, said the project began about 3½ years ago.

"The reason is that our system is over 30 years old and needed rehabilitation," he said. "We needed to put extra water into that system."

Long said the original system, now being enlarged, provides water to farmers on a 21-day rotation.

"As a result, farmers in the area had to sign up two or three acres to irrigate just one," he said.

When the new reservoir is full and the system complete, area farmers "will have water when they want it, on demand, rather than sticking to a strict rotation schedule," Long said.

In addition, the reservoir will be open for public recreation. A boat ramp is already finished, and an access road from nearby U.S. 283 is under construction.

Officials also are discussing the possiblity of limiting boat speeds or restricting the lake to nonpower boats.

The lake also will be stocked with fish, Long added.

There are several unsual features to the project, Stroud said.

While the main dam system is at the north end of the reservoir, a pumping station is being built southeast of the dam to control the flow of water in and out of the lake.

When full, Lewood Reservoir will be 100 feet deep at the deepest point.

Hundreds of acres will be under water year-round because of "dead storage" water that won't be used for irrigation.

Stroud said dead storage water is below the level of the pumps' inlet-outlet pipe. The pipe has been placed at a level so low that water will be too cold for fish, he said.

Stroud said it is expected that the fish will remain at higher, warmer levels, eliminating the need for fish screens or other devices to keep them out of the pumps. Long said filling the reservoir should begin in autumn 1977, with first irrigation use sometime in 1978.

However, Stroud emphasized that filling the 3½-mile-long, 1½-mile-wide lake will be done slowly.

Filling reservoirs behind earthen dams too quickly can cause problems. "An example of rapid filling is the Teton Dam," he said of the Idaho dam which collapsed last spring.

The Elwood dam, pumping station and other work on the irrigation system will cost $13 million, Long said.

The reservoir is being built under a $10 million U.S. Bureau of Reclamation loan, with $3 million in district funds being used to rehabilitate other canals and laterals.

Uncertainty Fogs Costly Pesticide Training Plan: What's on List?

This may be what the well-dressed farmer soon will be wearing. Ervin Williams of Firth models an eye shield and respirator, part of the equipment used in a program to teach Nebraska farmers how to use pesticides safely.

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

The Nebraska Pesticide Training Program, which will teach farmers how to use pesticides restricted by the federal government, could cost a half-million dollars.

Emery Nelson, who heads it, estimated the cost for each farmer who attends a half-day session at about $6.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has provided $268,000 for the program, with the rest of the cost to be absorbed by the University of Nebraska Extension Service in the form of agents' time in teaching farmers.

Nelson has just completed a series of two-day training sessions for county agents and the distribution of books, 50,000 color slides and related safety equipment.

Homework, Too

Farmers attending the classes early next year will take some material home for further study after receiving instruction in the classroom. Commercial applicators will attend separate classes taught by the extension staff.

"There are 11 different groups," Nelson said. "A group of golf course applicators has requirements different from those of the pilots of spray planes."

Nelson has had to design a course to meet federal certification requirements without knowing what pesticides will be on the restricted list, which EPA still hasn't published.

"We have a pretty good idea it will include any chemical that could possibly harm the applicator or the environment," he said. "This suggests that every farmer who grows sorghum, corn or alfalfa — and most livestock producers — will have to take the course."

Useful Data

The program is designed to provide farmers with useful information that will help them do a better job of controling insects, save them money and make pesticide use safer.

"We teach them how to read a label on a chemical, what the various terms mean, about the restrictions they can expect to follow, and what kinds of equipment they must use," Nelson said. "If the label says you must wear goggles, then you better have the goggles on when you use the chemical or you could be cited by an EPA inspector."

Nelson doesn't expect EPA to bother many farmers with inspections.

"I expect they will concentrate on the dealers when it comes to enforcement, but I understand there have already been a few cases where EPA people have issued warnings to Nebraska people about careless use of chemicals," he said.

Toughness Expected

"I have a hunch EPA is going to be real tough. Nebraska is one of four states that don't have an approved program. What I suspect may happen is they will try to make an example of us so other states don't follow our lead in not having an acceptable pesticide law."

The state law and the federal laws could be changed before the Oct. 21, 1977, deadline, which adds to the difficulty in deciding what to include in the training sessions.

The training material is aimed at giving farmers information on how to set sprayers and other applicators in order to apply the proper amount of chemicals.

"We also have included information to help the farmer recognize the weeds, diseases and insects he is trying to control and data on which chemicals are most effective on these pests," Nelson said.

Safety and first aid equipment and information on symptoms of illnesses related to chemical use is included in the program.

Major Points Listed

"We explain the existing laws at both the state and federal level, tell farmers how a pesticide can affect the environment, tell them how to save money by proper use of chemicals and other related information on ways to use chemicals better," he said.

Nelson said the course reminded him of a defensive driving course he once took.

"You may not like having to take it," he said, "but it really is all information that you ought to know if you are going to use chemicals."

Commercial applicators will have to take a test to be certified.

"I think most farmers will benefit economically from the knowledge," Nelson said. "I have seen a lot of damage to crops from badly applied chemicals. It may cost more than the damage the bugs would have caused in some cases."

Good Ol' Farm Days of '51 Rated Against Today's Daze

Washington (AP) — Just 25 years ago, farmers were getting some of their best prices in years for many commodities and were receiving a substantially higher chunk of the consumer food dollar than they are today.

But there was also a national problem with inflation in 1951 as the Korean War droned on and government price curbs, along with other devices, were being used in attempts to cool off the economy.

A yellowed copy of a U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) "marketing and transportation" report dated November 1951 was passed along to a reporter last week shortly after the USDA issued a similar report showing where today's food dollar is going.

Edging Down

Actually, 25 years ago, retail food prices and farm prices were edging down from record peaks earlier that year. But farm and food prices still were relatively high for that time.

The old report shows that in October 1951 farmers received about 50¢ of each dollar consumers spent on food. During World War II and for a few years thereafter, farmers actually received 51¢ to 54¢ of each retail food dollar before easing back to a range of 48¢ to 49¢ before the Korean conflict.

Today, farmers get about 40¢ of each food dollar spent, with the rest going to middlemen who handle products between the farmer and consumer. This September, for example, the farmer's share was 39.9¢

Higher Plateau

A vast difference is that today's food and farm prices are at a much higher plateau, generally, than they were in 1951. Grain and livestock prices set records in 1973, and food costs have continued to climb to new marks, although currently at a much slower pace than last year and in 1973 and 1974.

On a dollar basis of food costs and farm prices, it is difficult to compare the 1951 situation with today's. Some of the breakdowns for specific items, however, are interesting to look at.

Twenty-five years ago, for example, beef sold in retail stores for 84.9¢ a pound. The "farm values" in that pound of retail beef — not

West Lincoln Residents Call Area 'Sleeping Giant'

NEWS of the Neighborhoods

By Jim Aucoin

Residents of west Lincoln have a certain sense of destiny and a lot of determination.

When you ask them about their communities — West A, West Lincoln, Arnold Heights, Capitol Beach, West O — their eyes seem to sparkle and they say with some toughness in their voices the word "potential."

They reminisce about where their communities have been and count off the things they've accomplished. Then they tell you that their side of town — which has always been considered Lincoln's stepchild — has the makings to become a significant part of the Capital City.

T O Haas, who was one of the first business men to move to the western side of the city when he founded his tire firm, describes West O as a "big sleeping giant."

Room for Expansion

Haas said there is room for much expansion, both residential and commercial, throughout the western part of Lincoln, and the city should vigorously promote the west area instead of allowing development east into the Steven's Creek Watershed.

"Don't run away from the political and educational center we have downtown," the former president of the West O Business and Civic Assn cautioned.

City officials and planners also have expressed the desire to see the city develop concentrically, rather than to continue its lopsided eastern expansion. The City-County Planning Commission counsels in its comprehensive plan that Lincoln should grow west.

Natural barriers to westward growth such as the flooding of Salt Creek and manmade barriers such as the railroad yards, the viaduct and the foul smells of a rendering plant have been done away with or at least minimized since the mid-1960s. The flooding is stopped, and the rendering plant is gone.

Solid Foundation

Marvin Copple's development of the Capitol Beach area and his brother Ed's building of West Gate Shopping Center has laid a solid foundation for growth in the area.

A $3 million, 1,100-acre residential - commercial - industrial development is looming to the northwest. Developers of Highlands North, which will be roughly bordered by Neb. 34, I-80 and the Union Pacific Railroad tracks, predict 15,000 residents for the area in 10 years Construction on the first 300 single-family lots is scheduled to begin sometime next spring.

New developments near Belmont, at Airpark West and on West A are bringing the pressures of growth.

Evelyn McEwen of Lakeview Elementary School, 300 Capitol Beach Blvd, said that if the growth continues, indications are that the school will be unable to handle the increased enrollment. West Lincoln Elementary School already is overcrowded and further population pressures seem likely, according to developers who plan to build homes and apartments in the area.

The city and the neighborhoods alike are recognizing the need to bring improvement to the western section of the city. The West O group has fought for — and won — the relocation of railroad tracks which have interfered with traffic on West O St.

Duty to Inform

"It's our duty to see that the people who govern us know what the heck we want," President Dick Van Horn recently told members of the West O organization.

"We get good cooperation from the city," he said. "Now, whether we get a good return on our taxes, I don't know. I doubt it."

The issues are fairly clear: The residents of western Lincoln want more parks, recreation centers, paving, sidewalks and health facilities

The city's position has been that the services will come when the population of the area warrants it.

Two years ago the first Community Development Task Force, charged with delineating needed improvements in Lincoln neighborhoods, said in its final report that lack of paving and sidewalks in the West A and West Lincoln neighborhoods is of "major concern." The report also pointed out the need for parks and street lighting.

Roads Deteriorate

Since annexation of West Lincoln, "the roads went to hell" because the city didn't know how to take care of gravel roads, said Bill Smith, chairman of the West Lincoln Neighborhood Assn.

"We want to pave all the streets in the area, put in sidewalks and plant trees," he explained.

And they're receiving some help from the city's Urban Development Dept., which is planning to provide paving to the neighborhood starting next fiscal year. The city will pay 50% of the paving development out of federal community development funds.

"Before Urban Development," Smith said, "there was no way to get paving. It was too expensive."

Other areas are not as lucky. West A neighborhood's needs are given low priority by the Urban Development Dept. because of a plan to concentrate what money it has on those neighborhoods showing the most decay.

The city's Parks and Recreation Dept. has long range plans for four parks of varying size for neighborhoods west of 1st St And City Council is scheduled to make a decision Monday on a proposed $120,000 park the Urban Development Dept wants to put in West Lincoln.

Some residents of the neighborhood are opposed to the park, but Bill Smith said a recent survey showed an overwhelming desire for it.

Rec Centers Wanted

Other neighborhood groups are fighting for community recreation centers The West A community has assumed control of the Willard recreation center on a 90-day trial basis. The city has said it wants to close the center because of lack of neighborhood response The residents want to operate it on a volunteer basis.

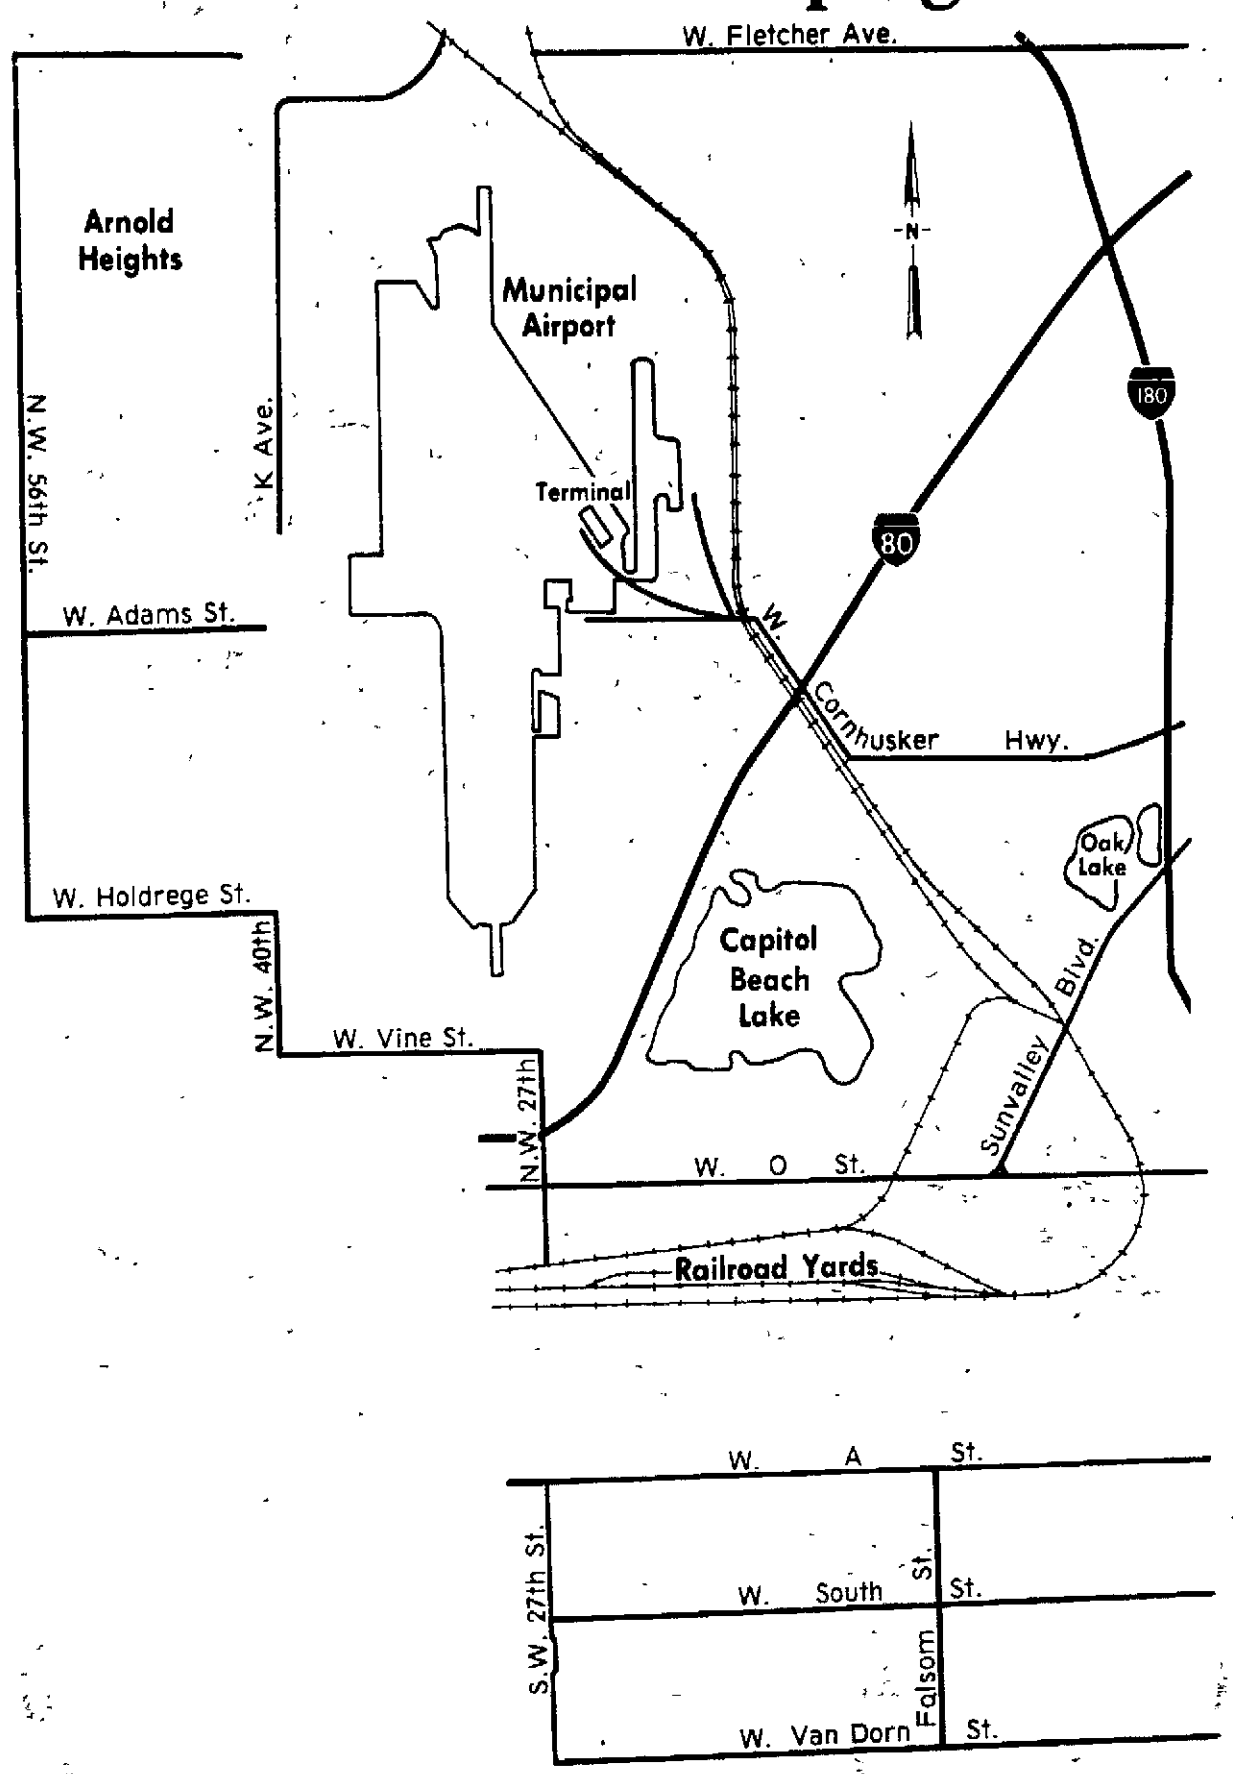

Some organizations are pushing for beautification projects. They say more people enter Lincoln from the west side on West O and from the north on Cornhusker Highway than from any other direction and the city should upgrade the appearance of the areas along the two thoroughfares to present a good image to visitors of the city.

And there is even one neighborhood group that is happy, at least from the standpoint of its spokesman. Harvey Schwartz of the Arnold Heights Community Betterment Assn. said his group has worked for a library, a recreation center, a retail area, a swimming pool, a park and a playground and has gotten them all.

"It's sort of an enviable position to be in," he said.

But he admitted that it was probably easier for the city to provide the services because of structures and land acquired from the old air base.

But whatever the residents of western Lincoln are fighting for, more than likely they'll make themselves heard. As Van Horn of the West O organization said, "We're separated (from the rest of the city) If we don't speak up, we'll be lost."

Morrison Will Head Med-Legal Agency

Omaha (AP) — Former Gov. Frank Morrison says he will head a nonprofit foundation that will deal with legal problems arising from medical claims

He said the Frank B. Morrison Institute of Law, Medicine and Science will be incorporated next week.

Morrison said the organization will bring information to the legal, medical and engineering professions about personal injury, wrongful death and related claims.

"Right now, there are thousands of communities with thousands of different standards," he said. "There are problems of malpractice. It's chaotic."

Morrison, who served three terms as Nebraska governor, said he will commute from Whitefish, Mont., to serve as foundation director. He will move to Montana Jan. 1 when his term as Douglas County public defender expires.

Morrison, who is 71, said he will devote half his time to the foundation and half to his son's law firm in Whitefish.

The foundation will conduct seminars and maintain an information bank for its clients, he said. They will include attorneys, physicians, engineers, companies and educational institutions.

State Traffic Mishaps Snuff Out Three Lives

Traffic Fatalities	1976	1975
Nebraska	342	324
Lancaster County	28	16
Lincoln	12	13

Three traffic accidents in Nebraska Saturday claimed at least as many lives.

Warren Ihnen, 22, Omaha, was killed and Jeanne Waggaman, 26, also of Omaha, was injured when their car crashed through a guardrail on Interstate 680 just north of its intersection with I-80 near Omaha and burst into flames Saturday night.

Their automobile collided with a tanker truck before plunging through the railing. A passerby pulled out Ms. Waggaman but flames trapped Ihnen, the driver of the car.

A 22-year-old Winnebago woman, Sharon R. Bassett, was killed early Saturday morning when she was struck by a tractor-trailer truck on U.S. 77 just south of Winnebago. Ms. Bassett was walking in the southbound lane when she was hit.

State Patrol officials reported an accident on U.S. 20 near the U.S. 20 bypass in Dakota County last Saturday which killed at least one person. The identity of the dead person was withheld, and whether others were killed or injured was not immediately revealed.

A 17-year-old youth killed Friday when the van in which he was riding collided with a semitrailer truck near Inman has been identified as Monte Reed of O'Neill.

Larry Mumm, 17, driver of the van, suffered internal injuries.

Omahan Dies At NU Game

A 64-year-old Omaha man collapsed at Memorial Stadium Saturday and died before he could be taken to a hospital.

A representative of the Lincoln mobile heart team said Ted Obal became ill in a restroom. Medical personnel were unable to revive him.

Whether he died of a heart attack or a diabetic complication had not been determined late Saturday night. A companion said he had diabetes and sometimes suffered reactions.

Draftee Dies

"In my opinion," he said of the bank, "the least it can be accused of is being terribly callous."

GOP

committee member and former Lancaster County Republican chairman, says he hasn't seen evidence of Washington delegation control

Instead of blaming fellow Republicans, Knox says, GOP analysts should credit Exon. "I hate to do it, but I have to give him credit," Knox says.

Those subscribing to the lapse theory claim Edward Zorinsky and John Cavanaugh, the Democratic Senate and House victors, are fated to one-term service.

Liberalism Expected

"Nebraska really is a relatively conservative state and those two will show their true liberal leanings during their terms," Republican National Committeeman William Morrow of Omaha says.

Crosby, his tongue only slightly in his cheek, suggests Zorinsky might win another term if he switches back to Republican during the next few years.

The former governor says the Republican party may have "taken a trouncing" Tuesday, but the Republican philosophy didn't, because the Democrats ran on GOP platforms.

"Zorinsky and Cavanaugh are going to go back to an extremely liberal White House and Congress and try to be both Democrats and conservatives. They're going to find that won't be easy to do," Crosby says.

Morrow says money and manpower provided by organized labor fueled the Zorinsky and Cavanaugh campaigns. Crosby says the newly elected Democrats will have a hard time keeping labor's affection and pleasing Nebraskans

State Democratic Chairman Dick White says labor is overemphasized by Republicans when they assess Democratic success "Labor has helped, but we've always had labor Agriculture is the sector where the growth is in the Democratic party," White says.

Frances Ohmstede of Guide Rock, Democratic national committeewoman, says there isn't much difference between the things labor wants from government and the things other Nebraskans want. "The Republicans have waved that red flag about labor for so long that people finally are realizing it's nothing but a red flag," she says.

White and Mrs. Ohmstede point to growing voter registration parity. She says Democrats are getting more of the new registrations because "nobody wants to join a has-been outfit and that's the picture the Republican party has portrayed."

Mrs. Ohmstede also contends Republicans are wrong about Nebraska conservatism. "Sure, Nebraskans are fiscally conservative," she says, "but start them talking about issues and they'll hand you every liberal issue in the book. They're more liberal than they think they are."

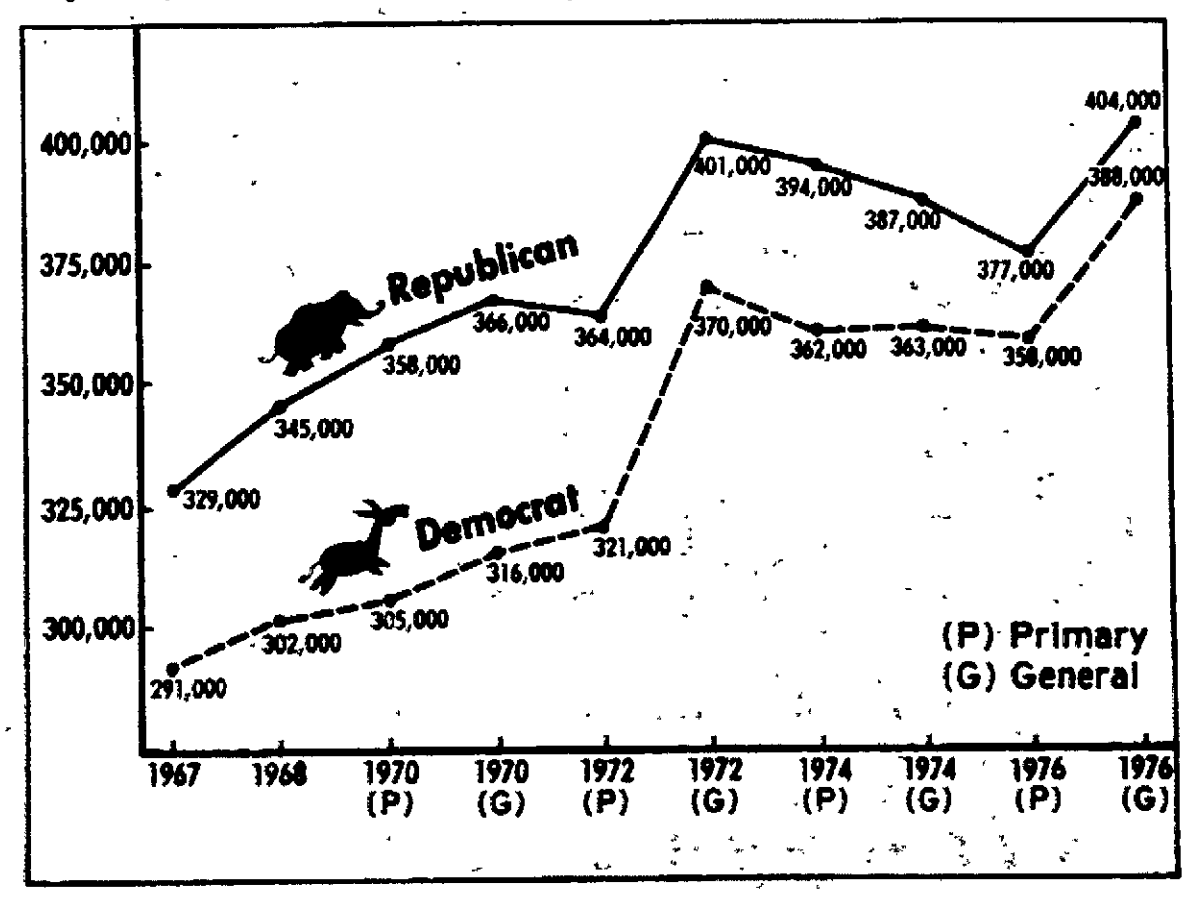

Mrs. Ohmstede's Republican counterpart. GOP National Committeewoman Patricia Lahr Smith of Lincoln, says conservatism is important. Conservative Zorinsky just nipped liberal Hess Dyas in the Democratic primary and, Mrs Smith says, if Dyas had been the Senate nominee, Republican John Y. McCollister would have "beat him like nothing."

Governorship Needed

Mrs. Smith and many others say the secret to Republican rejuvenation is candidate selection. She says preprimary endorsement by party officials might help. National Committeeman Morrow thinks that is dangerous, he says more hard work is the answer.

"It sure would help if the Republicans controlled the Statehouse," former chairman Barrett says. Since 1958, only Democrats have been elected governor, except for 1966, when Norbert T. Tiemann broke in for a single term.

Former Gov. Peterson says: "Either the Republican party captures the Statehouse or it is going to suffer through more elections like Tuesday's."

Statehouse Letter

By Don Pieper

Legislature Big Loser

One of the big losers in Tuesday's election was the Legislature.

All but one of the five proposed constitutional amendments dealing with the lawmaking process were rejected. Only the amendment giving the senators appropriations veto parity with the governor by authorizing line-item overrides survived.

It's difficult to avoid a conclusion that the results indicate general dissatisfaction with the Legislature, as well as disagreement with the provisions of the amendments.

Perhaps it shouldn't be surprising (in spite of the well-financed campaign lobbyists waged for passage) that the senatorial pay raise amendment lost. That could be viewed as an economic vote — a chance to say "no" personally to a spending proposal.

But the pay hike rejection, together with the defeat of amendments affecting the mechanics of lawmaking (such as changing the starting date of legislative sessions), indicate the senators still are having image problems.

The defeat of the Legislature's grand old man, George Syas of Omaha, and another senior member, Leslie Stull of Alliance, supports the theory.

Senators will tell you it's a bum rap. They say much of their image problem may be traced back to bad-mouthing by Gov. J J Exon.

Nearly half the members of the 1977 session will be in their first term We'll see if the image problems are reduced.

Political Paragraphs

- Politics can be rough on the hands. U S. Sen.-elect Edward Zorinsky has callouses between his thumb and index finger from shaking hands so much. And Democratic National Committeewoman Frances Ohmstede says she knows of a volunteer who got a sore finger from too much dialing in a campaign telephone bank.
- Zorinsky says he has been receiving mail for months from Washington real estate firms. He's thrown the letters away. Now that he will be moving there in January, he wishes he had kept them. The realtors had more faith in his chances against John Y. McCollister than Zorinsky did
- Pauline Anderson's "Parables of Pauline" ads win the prize for the most clever of the campaign That can't be much consolation to the First Congressional District Democrat, who lost by a ton to Rep Charles Thone.
- Hess Dyas, Democratic loyalist par excellence, was seen holding one of Joyce Durand's signs during the "human billboard" effort. Joyce was running for a Public Service Commission seat. Dyas came within an eyelash of being a U. S. Senate nominee.
- CBS newscaster Dan Rather said election night that a Democrat winning a Senate seat in Nebraska is "as rare as an ivory-billed woodpecker"
- Rosemary Bauer, a legislative secretary, has bid for manager of the Lincoln office U. S Sen.-elect Zorinsky says he will open.
- Kay Orr, a pepperpot worker for Ronald Reagan in the primary, is joining Rep Charles Thone's Lincoln staff
- Anything's possible, but the inside word is that Nebraska's Ted Sorensen isn't likely to have a job in the Carter administration. Sorensen, a member of John F Kennedy's inner circle, is helping Carter prepare for the presidency, but he doesn't want steady work. He prefers his private law practice in New York.
- Speaking of Nebraskans in the federal government, former Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann (federal highway administrator) and his one-time aide Clayton Yeutter (deputy special U. S. trade representative) probably will be casualties when the guard changes.
- State Republican Chairman Anne Batchelder is reported recovering nicely from a cataract operation.
- Some of the new legislators are so young lobbyists won't be able to take them to some of the traditional establishments without notes from their mothers.

Denney's Decision Shocks

Max Denney's announcement that he will not seek another term on the City Council came as a shocker to many at City Hall, including Mayor Helen Boosalis.

Political insiders are saying Denney may run for Congress if U.S. Rep. Charles Thone decides to run for governor.

Denney's statement that he may seek a higher political office was no surprise, but his declaration that he would not run again for the Council was unexpected.

The council chairman's political announcement underscores the realization that the City Council campaign will be getting under way soon.

If Denney decides to run for the House of Representatives, he could cash in on the Denney name which is remembered by First Congressional District voters from when Max's brother Bob was in Congress before being appointed to the Federal Court in Omaha.

With Councilman John Robinson expected not to run again, it's speculated there will be hotly contested campaigns to fill those two vacant positions. Sue Bailey hasn't said if she will run again but speculation is that she will.

City elections aren't usually very spirited when the mayor's office is not up for grabs, but her honor thinks the campaign for three council positions this spring will break that old mold.

In predicting more interest in the upcoming campaign, Mayor Boosalis said she expects the philosophical differences in the community to generate a field of candidates.

Police Review Board

The move to abolish the city's 13-month-old Police Review Board could very well end in some kind of a compromise that revamps the board's procedures. Councilmen Bob Sikyta and Denney are cosponsoring an ordinance, which will be introduced Monday, to abolish the board.

Although there apparently are enough votes on the Council to pass the ordinance, it's unlikely the Council could override an expected veto by the mayor.

Mayor Boosalis has said she thinks some of the board's procedures need redoing but would like to see a continuation of the board. Denney voted in favor of creating the board last year on a 4-3 Council vote and it's his switchover that paves the way for the demise of the civilian review group.

Denney said he changed his mind because he sees no need for a board because the police now have an internal affairs team to investigate complaints against police officers.

Hospital Authority

The Lincoln General Hospital Board is recommending the creation of a Hospital Authority as the mechanism for breaking the city-owned hospital away from City Hall control.

A majority on the City Council apparently favors a severance of the hospital from city government but a more than $3 million bond debt is a legal barrier to such a move. The bond debt stems from the $4.3 million revenue bond issuance 11 years ago to finance construction of the current hospital building.

The city can't sever its ties with the hospital until the bonds are paid off. However, the creation of a Hospital Authority apparently would remove this legal barrier since the bonded indebtedness, in effect, would be transferred from the city to the authority.

Hospital officials will meet with the Council Monday to feel out the Council on the authority question.

Approval Is Expected For Water System Design

A resolution is likely to be approved Wednesday authorizing engineers to design a water system estimated at nearly $2.5 million for the Highland North subdivision northwest of Lincoln.

The board of trustees of Sanitary and Improvement District No. 7 of Lancaster County will meet at 2 p.m. in the First National Bank Building suite of Highland Development Corp. to vote on the proposal. The 1,000-acre project would be the largest planned residential, commercial and industrial development in the state.

The board, composed of landowners in Highland North, is expected to direct engineers to design, then seek bids on the first phase of the water system, estimated to cost $300,000, for the north-central part of the subdivision.

Joel Katleman of Omaha, president of Highland Development, said good construction weather has made it possible for most of the sewer system for the project's first 100 lots to be completed.

A separate contract has been let and work is underway on paving for these lots, he said.

Long Law Arm Can Still Grab

Copenhagen, Denmark (UPI) — Police in Ringe, on the island of Funen, received a reminder that even the long arm of the law is vulnerable to theft.

Two youths, aged 15 and 16, residents at a home for young offenders, sneaked into the police station at night, robbed the safe of $200, read a few confidential reports and, to make sure of a good head start, stole the keys to the two police cars parked outside.

Police were not able to start the chase until they changed the locks on the cars, but a policeman in another town caught the youths when he noticed they were carrying police flashlights.

THE COLDER IT GETS, THE MORE YOU NEED BIVOUAC.

The same functional gear that keeps skiers and backpackers warm, works great in town, too. So, before you freeze your duff off this winter stop in to see the cold-weather specialists at BIVOUAC.

Down. Ask an insulation expert or a friend who's tried it. They'll tell you there's nothing like down to keep you warm. That's because it expands or "lofts" to fill up insulating space better than anything else. Yet it's featherlight. And down has the resiliency to continually spring back to its original loft or thickness. We've been selling down products for years, and using them ourselves, so we can answer your questions in more detail or give you brochures to take home.

Polarguard. There are select man-made materials that do a great insulating job, but not quite as well as down. And even though you can't beat down for performance, polarguard does offer some other advantages. It's usually less expensive, it performs better when wet, and it's non-allergenic. Bivouac sells the best of these polarguard products.

Review Unit to Be Topic

A proposed ordinance abolishing the Police Review Board will be introduced during Monday's Council meeting.

Co-sponsored by Council members Bob Sikyta and Max Denney, the measure is expected to generate controversy when it is before the Council for a second reading and public hearing next week.

The ordinance's sponsors say they see no need for a continuation of the civilian review board since Police Chief George Hansen has set up an internal affairs office to investigate citizens complaints against the Police Dept.

Other items on the Council's 1:30 p.m. Monday meeting include:

Second Reading
Public Hearing

Pay Schedule — Supplementing City Code relating to pay schedule for various classes of city employes.

Water Bonds — Amending ordinance to increase water revenue bond authorization from $3.5 million to $6.5 million.

Legislative Team — Directing team to act on behalf of the city in supporting the following legislative proposals during the 1977 legislative session:

1. Local control of lotteries and raffles.
2. Constitutional amendment for use of local funds for limited urban rehabilitation.
3. Charter control of Lincoln's Board of Plumbing Examiners.
4. Expand the Lincoln-Lancaster County Board of Health.
5. State funding of construction of a performing arts center in the Old Federal Bldg.
6. Penalties for any labor organization which works to hinder or suspend governmental services or fails to comply with any court order.
7. Require the Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations to establish rates of pay and conditions of employment through a comparison with employers only in the states of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas.
8. Authorization for deferred compensation plans for employes of counties and cities.
9. Local control of the number of liquor licenses in cities of the primary class.
10. Authorization for local health authorities to remove garbage and refuse from private property after notice and for assessment against the property.
11. Replacement of lost or destroyed warrants which are mailed to the payee upon affidavit that the original warrant has not been received.
12. Temporary custody of persons at mental health centers on the determination of a "mental health professional."

Support Wanted For Vet College

By John Barrette, AP

A meeting is planned within three weeks to seek support from the academic community in five states for a regional veterinary college

Governors of the Old West Regional Commission states decided informally Saturday that the session was needed quickly to seek support from higher education interests in the states before legislatures begin meeting

The commission includes Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas

"I think we'd better get moving on this, because they're (legislators) going to be in our state capitals before long," said Nebraska Gov J J Exon

"I'm sure this is not going to fly in the other states unless we get the support of the academic community," he said Exon strongly favors the regional vet school concept, as does Gov Art Link of North Dakota

Who's Wagging?

Lank agreed with Exon that support from academicians should be courted before going to state legislatures for funding, but he was concerned that the regional commission not be subservient to university administrators

"Who's wagging who in this case?" Link asked "They have little kingdoms built up in the states"

Gov Ed Herschler of Wyoming and Richard Kneip of South Dakota indicated, however, that general support would be necessary from higher education before legislatures in their states might be persuaded to accept the regional concept

Montana Gov Tom Judge was absent from the session, but a representative from that state said the vet school concept generally has support in his state

Three Weeks

Regional commission staff was instructed to set up a meeting of the governors with university presidents and deans of agriculture schools within three weeks at a point located centrally in the five-state region

In other work, the commission discussed at length but took no formal action on water problems in the region and the proposed coal slurry pipeline that would run from a point in Wyoming to Arkansas

Governors Exon, Herschel and Kneip expressed concern about the use of water to carry the coal if it came from the Madison formation

The commission approved a $209,000 project for evaluation of Bureau of Land Management policies regarding livestock grazing on government land

Soviets Won't Let Religious Group Visit

New York (AP) — An interreligious delegation of eight American Christians and six Jews, which had scheduled a study tour next month to the Soviet Union, has been refused entry because of rabbis in it

Leaders of the National Council of Churches and the American Jewish Committee, sponsors for the trip, called it a "flagrant violation" of the Helsinki agreement, assuring freer movement and contact

Citing notice by Soviet authorities that visas would not be granted to three rabbis in the group, the Rev Dr Nathan H. VanderWerf of the church council called it "a blatant anti-Semitic act against friends and fellow citizens"

"As Christians, we cannot participate in such a trip while some are denied equal treatment," he added

Wrong Door Given Knock

Albuquerque, N M (UPI) — A man accused of trying to sell marijuana knocked on the wrong door

Deputy Sheriff Bill Rehm said he and State Policeman Jim Woods were in his apartment when the man came to the door and said, "I heard you would like to buy some grass"

Rehm said the man came inside and took out several samples of marijuana He offered to sell some for $10, Rehm said, and at that point, the officers showed their badges and arrested the man

Booked on a charge of distributing marijuana was Glen Martinez, 24, of Albuquerque

Washington Perspective

By Andy Montgomery

Selective Law Obedience

Washington — When Congress passes legislation and it's signed by the President, it becomes the law of the land and is to be obeyed, right?

Well, not exactly If the various federal departments and agencies don't like what Congress has wrought, they can always look the other way — and usually do

Section 901(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1970 is one such monument to congressional good intentions and bureaucratic indifference

This section mandates that the executive branch must give first priority to rural areas in locating any federal office, facility or installation It plainly says that all policies and procedures must be written with that goal in mind

When it inserted that provision, Congress was emphasizing its oft-expressed commitment "to a sound balance between rural and urban America," a balance deemed so essential that "the highest priority must be given to revitalizing and developing rural areas"

Job Creation Seen as Key

Congress felt the key to rural development lay in the creation of jobs Strong in this belief, it said that by locating more offices and other facilities in rural America, the federal government could have a direct impact on strengthening rural economies

But there's a wide gap between passing a law and implementing it, as a recent investigation by the Congress' watchdog, the comptroller general, shows That probe turned up only three federal agencies complying with the mandate

This lack of compliance only points up what the agricultural communities in Nebraska and elsewhere have been saying all along high-sounding statements and promises may come out of Washington, but when push comes to shove, rural America is still the stepchild in federal policy making

In breaching Section 901(b), the bureaucracy here has provided a rather good insight into the federal attitude toward rural America And — no surprise — it's not good

Congressional Action Pledged

However, the surfacing of ill feelings on the part of many departments and agencies has served to bring assurances, notably from Iowa Sens Dick Clark and John Culver, that the 95th Congress will attempt to do something about the continued indifference to rural areas

Out of the anticipated hearings will come an insistence that the law be obeyed repeal of Section 901(b), or, if past is any prolog, a "clarification" of the original intent, which probably will only muddy the waters even more

In the recent comptroller general's report, the Department of Defense bluntly questioned "whether there was still a need to revitalize rural areas" Even though the department added a qualifying "particularly in comparison with existing urban area problems and unemployement," the hostility toward rural America still came through loud and clear

Bias Shows Trough

Other departments and agencies were less forthright, but their urban bias still showed through

The Civil Service Commission piously said it recognized "the need for developing and revitalizing rural areas" but suggested that rural America should still remain secondary to the economic development of the cities

The Department of Housing and Urban Development frankly stated that its primary responsibility was to the revitalization of urban areas and that it had no intentions to revamp its thinking to include the needs of rural areas

The Department of Commerce advocated repeal of Section 901(b), declaring in essence that rural America should recognize its place — and that's low on the totem pole

Could Shape U.S. Future

Staffing 'Key' to Carter Success

By Neal R. Peirce

Washington — The next 11 weeks — before inauguration day — may be crucial to the success or failure of Jimmy Carter's presidency and the nation's future course

The vital questions are the management competence, and the human qualities of the men and women Carter picks for his staff, his Cabinet, and hundreds of other key Executive Branch posts

As James Landis reported to President-elect John F Kennedy 16 years ago, selecting superior personnel is the "prime key" to a successful administration "Good men," Landis noted, "can make poor laws workable, poor men will wreak havoc with good laws"

Carter's opportunity is a rare one He comes to the Presidency with comparatively few commitments to established power blocs, after a campaign in which he stressed independence from special interests He's the first President-elect since Franklin Roosevelt with executive experience as a governor

Full-Scale Search

Since July, Carter has had a full scale talent search underway, directed by a policy and appointments transition task force, the first such pre-election effort in U S history More than 7,000 names were received in Atlanta before the election from would-be job-holders, from the Carter task force and campaign associates This "talent inventory" bank will now be computerized to perfect the matching of names and skills

The mere existence of Carter's talent inventory bank doesn't guarantee quality in the final selection process The sad fact is that since Kennedy's Presidency, there has never been a full Presidential commitment to recruit persons of vigor and full independence for key Cabinet and sub-Cabinet jobs

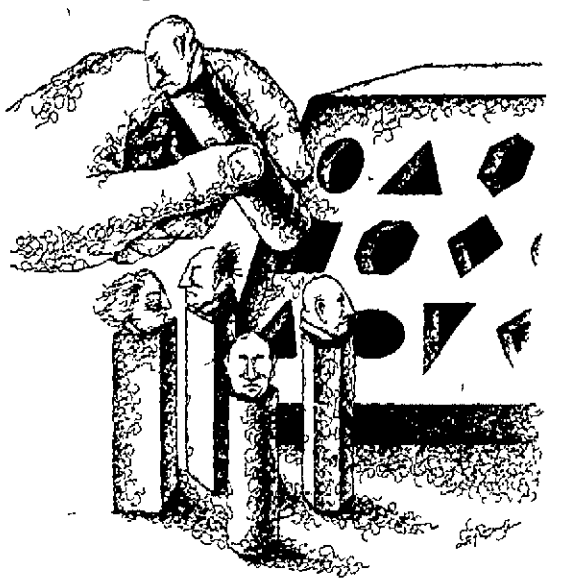

Last summer, Carter said he'd look for "a new generation of leadership" to staff his administration But will he instruct his staff to develop a system to identify talent that's not immediately obvious? Will the outstanding state or local government administrator, the gifted state college professor or consumer group leader be considered on a par with the gilt-edged academic or old Washington hand?

Kept Appointees

As Georgia's governor, Carter searched assiduously for top-grade appointees and kept most throughout his administration Right now, he's faced with serious tensions in his own camp Even before election day, there was festering antipathy between his transition planning group and campaign workers who'd been with him since the start of his Presidential quest Veteran Carter campaigners feared that because the transition group was dealing with appointments, its members would have an inside track in obtaining jobs for themselves

As President, Carter told me, he'd look for appointees combining management expertise and compassion

That's one specific Carter promise against which his selection of key appointees should now be measured And there are others

• Cabinet and staff Carter repeatedly promised his Cabinet officers would have direct, easy access to him, that his White House would have no single chief of staff; and that his staff would function in "a true staff capacity, not a command role" over the Cabinet officers and the federal bureaucracy.

• Tenure Nixon, Ford and their staffs often complained about the unresponsiveness of the federal bureaucracy, yet their own chief appointees stayed an average of only 19 months, scarcely enough time to master their jobs (Between 1933 and 1965, the median was 40 months for Cabinet officials) Carter promised "to obtain pledges from my appointees that they will remain in office until we have accomplished the goals upon which we agree"

• Openness Carter promised an administration of unprecedented openness Will this extend to public release of potential nominees for key administration and regulatory posts, so that the public can react before appointments are definite? That process was used in Carter's Vice Presidential selection, now we can see if Carter follows through for other key posts

• Women and minorities Repeatedly, Carter led women, blacks, Spanish-speaking and other minorities to believe they would receive policy-making positions in his administration A "51 3% Committee" to reflect women's share of the national population was set up and conducted a systematic state-by-state search for potential women appointees Minority groups fed names into the Atlanta talent bank Now we'll see how many women and minorities are actually selected

• Conflict of interest Carter made much of the need for high ethical standards in appointees Will he demand that they make public their personal finances and disclose any potential conflicts of interest?

• Accountability In the past, Carter said, Presidential appointees "have been fired for political misfakes, but rarely for managerial incompetence My appointees will understand that they will be held personally accountable for failures in the management of government programs Those who

Voc Tech, High School Cooperation Is Urged

By Jack Kennedy

The state's network of postsecondary vocational-technical school areas must cooperate with high schools, Voc Tech leaders say.

But they could not enroll high school students in their programs unless they had more room, money and legislative authority, said three officials interviewed at the Nebraska Assn. of Community College Trustees general assembly which closed here Friday.

The NACCT board is discussing moves by some public schools to form joint vocational high schools or contract with existing voc tech schools, said Arlo Wirth, Hartington insurance man.

Wirth, a trustee of the Northeast school in Norfolk, is former president of the old state junior college board.

'Locked In'

The law governing voc tech areas limits them to postsecondary levels, he noted.

The area schools can work cooperatively with high schools, he said, but younger students should not get "locked in" too early to extensive, career-oriented vocational education.

Surveys indicate about half of the state's high school students do not have access to vocational education while in high school.

"We're very much in the same business," said veteran Central area voc tech president Dr. Chester Gausman, Grand Island. But changes in funding and legislation would be needed to permit contracting, he said.

"If high school and voc tech roles were clearly defined, and programs were clearly thought out," Gausman said, "surely we would have a role. However, our primary role is postsecondary."

Dr. Chester Gausman

Dr. Robert Eicher

Vocational postsecondary educators also have a philosophical concern, said Gausman, a former Lincoln public schools staff member.

"Vocational education is more effective the more mature a person is," he said, "and the more employable a person is."

There is no question, he said, "the least effective vocational programs are in the small communities." But, he added, "We just don't have a place for any more students," and the areas have financial problems.

Dr. Robert Eicher, Southeast area president based in Lincoln, said he and Ivan Stern, Educational Service Unit administrator at Beatrice, have talked informally about possible facilities for a proposed 11-school combine.

There has been no decision, Eicher said, about whether part of the old Pershing College which Southeast now owns at Beatrice might be leased for a vocational high school.

Eicher, once an Iowa administrator, said postsecondary vocational schools there set up vocational courses for high school students in separate centers away from their campuses. There is no sharing of costs, staff or facilities, he said. The voc tech network does offer guidance to the high school programs.

Sometimes "it becomes a dead end" for high school students in vocational programs, Eicher said.

A pilot program in Lincoln does allow selected high school seniors to enroll in Southeast programs at Milford or on the vocational school's Lincoln campus.

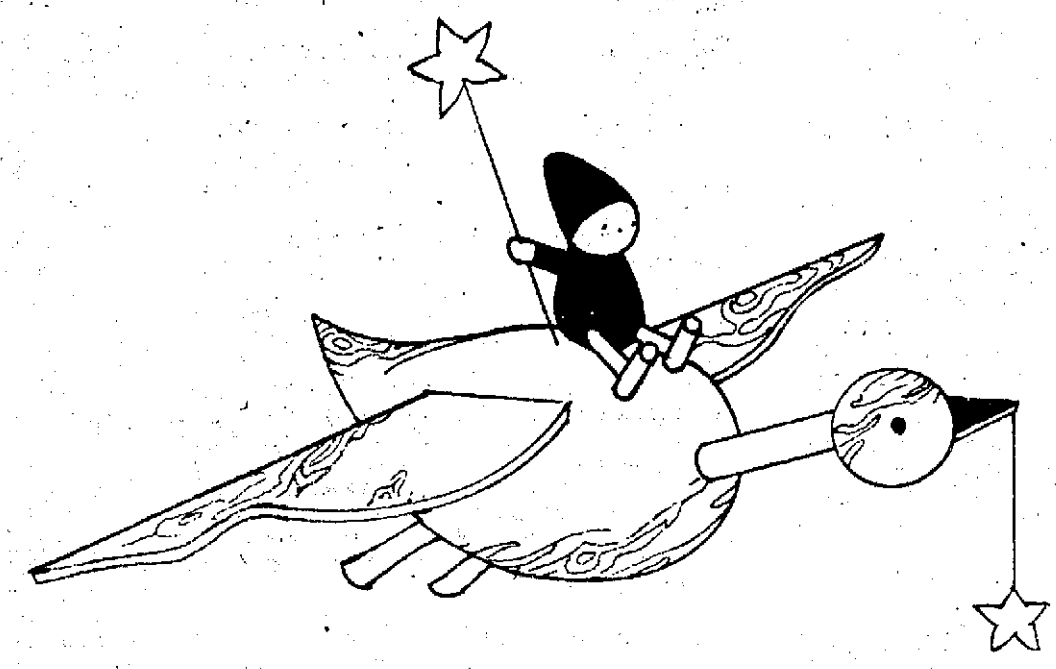

Similar expanded sharing between high schools and the vocational areas might be possible, he said — but local school districts would have to pay the cost.

The Southeast area with its 2½-mill levy could not afford to, he said, even if permitted to contract or share space by law.

Retired NU Prof, Coach Ed Higginbotham Dies

Ed Higginbotham, 75, 4300 B, longtime varsity tennis coach, died in Lincoln Saturday.

Native of Geneva and 1924 Doane College graduate, Higginbotham spent 27 years at NU as assistant professor of physical education for men before retiring in 1970.

He taught and coached at several Nebraska high schools before he joined the University's athletic staff in 1943. In 1951 he became varsity tennis coach.

Retirement ceremonies honored him for his many contributions to NU, especially for his part in organizing and conducting the men's intramural program.

Higginbatham was actively involved in community work, donating much of his time to organizing recreation programs and to tennis court design and tennis-related activities.

In 1974 he received the Doane College Builder Award, which recognizes persons who have excelled in their life's work

Hastings Races Close; Recount Is Expected

Hastings (AP) — A ballot recount was expected Monday in Hastings races with slim winning margins.

After the Adams County Canvassing Board finished counting absentee ballots on Saturday, the winning margins totaled 12 votes in the 4th Ward City Council race, 45 votes in the airport authority race and 18 votes for the Hastings School Board's fifth seat.

Adams County Clerk Anita Hawes said a recount is automatic when the winning margin is less than 1½%.

This September, the most recent USDA report shows, the retail price of beef was slightly more than $1 34 a pound, with farmers getting an equivalent of 72 6¢ and middlemen 61 7¢

The 12-month average for choice-grade cattle in 1951 was nearly $38 per 100 pounds on the hoof, with corn selling at the farm at $1.66 a bushel This September, choice steers averaged $36.40 per hundredweight and corn sold at the farm on Sept. 15 at $2 60 a bushel

Much has changed in agriculture in the past 25 years Farm production expenses are much higher than they were in 1951, and farmers have many more costs to worry about today.

Dramatic Changes

But middleman expenses for transporting, processing and selling food between the farmer and consumer also have changed dramatically.

Labor costs, energy and all other inputs have gone up more than farm prices over the years, at least since farmers got 50¢ or more of each dollar consumers spent for food.

As of Oct 15, according to USDA, prices of items farmers use in producing crops and livestock averaged 195% of what they were in 1967.

That is almost double what the costs were nine years ago In 1951, despite rising inflation, production costs were 95% of what they were in 1967

Iowa-Gering Cattle Case Sent to Jury

Des Moines (UPI) — After lengthy closing arguments and the reading of 20 jury instructions, U.S. District Judge William C Stuart Saturday recessed the federal trial of former State Sen. James Schaben until Monday, when the seven-man, five-woman jury will open deliberations.

The Dunlap livestock auctioneer and unsuccessful 1974 Democratic gubernatorial candidate was indicted by a federal grand jury earlier this year on charges he knowingly transported from Gering, Neb., to Dunlap cattle which allegedly had been exposed to brucellosis.

The defense wrapped up its case late Saturday morning. Final arguments were heard Saturday afternoon.

Before he completed his case Friday, U.S. Atty. George Perry traced the July 1975 movements of 16 cattle, allegedly exposed to the disease, from the Platte Valley Livestock Auction Co. in Gering to Schaben's Dunlap auction barn and feedlot

The 16 cattle were among 19 purchased for Schaben at the Nebraska firm by Dale Van Wyk of Monroe, an independent cattle buyer. When tested for the disease, three of the heifers showed positive reactions and were then ordered for slaughter.

The other 16 were not to have been moved and Schaben violated the law in having them moved, the government said. Perry maintained Schaben did not have the necessary health certificates from Nebraska veterinarians to move the 16 to his Dunlap feedlot.

The prosecution must prove "Jim Schaben did it knowingly . . . not because of mistake . . . accident or other innocent reason," defense attorney Jerry Wieslander said.

Wieslander said it is "beyond belief" that Schaben would jeopardize 27 years of experience for 16 head of cattle.

Schaben said that at no time was there any attempt to hide the cattle from inspectors and that he expected them to be checked as any of his cattle were.

He said he relied on the Platte Valley sale barn and veterinarian to do their jobs according to industry custom.

African Told To Steal Bike

Livingstone, Zambia (UPI) — An African walked into the local police station to report the theft of his new bicycle.

The duty sergeant told him to go out and steal another one for himself But, police sources said, the sergeant warned him not to be caught because the police would have to arrest him.

Kansas Chief's Wife Stricken

Topeka (AP) — The wife of Gov. Robert Bennett was taken by ambulance to a Topeka hospital Saturday evening and placed in the intensive care unit for treatment of an undisclosed ailment.

Mrs. Olivia Bennett, 45, became ill about 6 30.

Hospital officials said she was transferred from the emergency room to the intensive care unit. They said she was first treated for a suspected lung infection and later given an electrocardiogram The results of the tests were not revealed.

New Legal Group Will Intervene In Some Environmental Battles

Attorneys who do court battle for environmental groups may soon meet challengers from the non-governmental legal fraternity in the central U.S.

A non-profit group called the Great Plains Legal Foundation has been formed to intervene in cases or situations where it is felt environmental demands are excessive or unrealistic.

Included in the foundation area are Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana.

The group is affiliated with the National Legal Center for the Public Interest, created over a year ago, and patterned after a five-year-old west coast group called the Pacific Regional Legal Foundation.

The west coast group entered one battle on behalf of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation to see that a dam and reservoir were built in the Pacific Northwest.

The Great Plains Legal Foundation will operate out of Kansas City with a small staff. Attorneys will be hired as needed to fight specific cases.

Organizers point out the legal foundations and law firms fighting for environmental causes employ about 250 to 300 attorneys with resources in excess of $10 million. That doesn't include another 200 or so attorneys financed with tax funds.

Arch Booth, Wichita, Kan., a foundation organizer and past president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said the foundation's goal is to give the courts a balanced view of the environment and government actions.

Board members for the foundation include Booth; David Heskett, president of Montana-Dakota Utilities; Russell Perry, chairman of Republic Financial Services, Dallas, Tex.; Ben Love, chairman of Texas Commercial Banc Shares, Houston, Tex., and Edwin Putzell Jr., general counsel for Monsanto Corp., St. Louis.

String of Defeats

The anti-nuclear lobby is building an unblemished string of defeats in its efforts to convince voters to ban the atom as a fuel to generate electricity.

Voters in Arizona, Colorado, Ohio, Montana, Washington and Oregon turned thumbs down last Tuesday on initiative petitions to ban more nuclear power plants.

The margins of defeat for nuclear foes ranged from 70-30 in Colorado and Montana to 58-42 in Oregon. Nuclear foes had high hopes in Colorado and Oregon, where citizens are supposedly environmentally aware.

Overall, the vote in the six states last Tuesday was 2-to-1 for nuclear power. That's the same margin by which California voters endorsed nuclear power last June.

Pro-nuclear forces attribute defeat of the moratoriums in large measure to a pro-nuclear coalition of labor, management, scientists and minority groups.

With Tuesday's vote in the six states, roughly 20% of the American electorate has had an opportunity to say whether they want to continue using nuclear power.

The same issue has been put to the Nebraska Legislature the past two sessions without success by anti-nuclear forces.

Directions to Sidney

The South Platte Natural Resources District (NRD), host to an upcoming meeting, apparently feels some Nebraskans may not be certain exactly where Sidney is located.

In a recent meeting notice, the NRD said people can drive to the Panhandle town, near the Colorado state line, by following these simple directions:

"Get on Interstate 80, drive west until you can't stand it any longer, then go about 45 more miles. You should be here by then."

8 People Injured In Bluffs Shooting

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Eight persons were injured after someone fired three shotgun blasts into a crowded "after hours" bar here Saturday, police said.

Police were not sure Saturday whether the three 12-gauge shotgun blasts were fired from inside or outside The Garage, bar. About 150 persons were in the bar when the 2:55 a.m. incident occurred.

Police are seeking two men and a woman who were in a pickup truck with Nebraska license plates. According to one witness, the three may have been ejected from the bar earlier in the evening.

"It just happened," said Barry Rasmussen, one of the victims. "Somebody just ripped off about three shotgun blasts. I didn't see what it was, who it was, or where it was.

"The first round went between me and Hugh McManus (another victim) and hit me in the hand. I jumped off to the side. There was a lot of panic, a lot of people running around not knowing what they were doing."

Rasmussen, 28, of Council Bluffs, was treated and released and McManus, 45, of Council Bluffs, was listed in good condition.

Other victims were Jim Henderson, 33, of Council Bluffs, in stable condition with chest wounds; Michael Becik, 26, of Omaha, fair condition with abdominal wounds; Catherine Collier, 23, of Omaha, good condition; Peggy Bressman, 17, of Council Bluffs, treated and released; Harry Sayers, 54, of Omaha, good condition; Murray Johnston, 29, of Council Bluffs, treated and released.

cannot manage, will not remain in office."

Carter's Nature

Asked why Carter could be expected to fulfill his promises, transition chief Jack Watson said: "It's in the nature of the man. Jimmy Carter is a strong manager, a planner and an administrator. He is the most persistent and formidable man in terms of the commitment to goals and in the achievement of those goals that I have ever known."

My own reading of Carter's Georgia record indicates that is not an exaggeration of Carter's executive record. Now we shall see if he has the caliber to perform as well as President of the United States.

CIA Burglary Report Denied

Nice, France (UPI) — Police sources Saturday strongly denied reports that Albert Spaggiari, charged with masterminding the $10 million "burglary of the century" of a bank in July, was caught because bragged to the CIA about his feat.

Sources close to the investigation said, "He was captured under totally different circumstances through the work of the nice police. The CIA story is sheer journalistic fiction."

Reports said Spaggiari had gone to see the CIA in the Washington offering to burglarize embassies. As a reference, Spaggiari had allegedly boasted being the author of the burglary of the nice branch of the Societe Generale in which burglars tunneled into the main vault through sewers and emptied 300 safe deposit boxes.

Adams County Seeks Ruling On ESU Seat

Hastings (AP) — Secretary of State Allen Beermann has been asked by Adams County Officials to rule on Adams County's position on the Board of Educational Service Unit 9, decided in Tuesday's general election.

Eligibility questions cloud the victory of Mrs. Pauline Dudek.

She pays taxes in Webster County and has a son who attends a Webster County school.

Although Mrs. Dudek was allowed to file for the Adams County position last March, she was given a Webster County ballot and was unable to vote for herself last Tuesday. She lives in Silver Lake Township, which is on the Adams-Webster County border.

Beermann was asked to decide whether she can serve in the Adams County position she won.

Fire Damage In G.I. Home Said $10,000

Grand Island (UPI) — Fire that may have been caused by faulty electric wiring caused about $10,000 worth of damage Friday in a two-story Grand Island home.

Fire officials said the blaze apparently started in a first-floor bedroom and was contained in a nearby dining room. No one was injured, and several children were able to escape. The home is occupied by the Stanley Aguilar family.

County Picks Winner Again

Covington, Va. (UPI) — Rural Alleghany County in southwest Virginia may continue bragging about its ability to select a presidential winner.

For the past 18 presidential elections county voters have selected the victor.

Jimmy Carter won the county Tuesday over President Ford, 2,462 to 1,765.

The last time the county went with the loser was in 1904, when it selected Democrat Alton B. Parker over the winner, Republican Teddy Roosevelt.

House Stolen

Bear, Del. (UPI) — State police have arrested a Delaware man for possession of stolen property — a house.

Albert Zecca, 45, of New Castle, was arrested and charged with illegally possessing a $20,000 modular house.

The house, removed this summer from a modular home park here, was found behind Zecca's home.

Police said they had no idea how the house was moved.

• Arnold's Tavern at 6113 Havelock Ave., has been purchased by S.R.S. Inc., with Leo Scherer Jr. as president and manager. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Stumbaugh, who operated the business for 27 years, are retiring.

Scherer was most recently project development representative for Davis/Fenton/Stange/Darling, a Lincoln-based architectural and engineering firm.

He had also served as administrative assistant to Gov. James Exon; had been Lincoln community development director; administrative assistant to former Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, and was a reporter for the Lincoln Evening Journal.

• Lincoln Equipment Co., with branches at 930 West O St. and 20th and Cornhusker Hwy., will continue as a Caterpillar dealer, according to an announcement from Caterpillar Tractor Co. This franchise covers southeast and south central Nebraska. The firm also has a Grand Island branch.

Lincoln Equipment will celebrate its 50th year as a Caterpillar dealer during 1977.

Blum's . . . . . of Lincoln, Indeed!

'We've got a little bit of San Francisco in the Midlands,' says Clive Hilgert, (the mints in this box are among his favorites).

By Gene Kelly

Clive Hilgert gets a kick out of calling Blum's of San Francisco "a small . . . no, it's a nice little company operating out of Lincoln.

"We've got a little bit of San Francisco in the Midlands," he adds.

THE Blum's has its national — now international — headquarters in Nebraska? The Blum's that talks about its "elegant" candy, ice cream and bakery goods? The Blum's that began as a confectionery store at Polk and Sutter Sts. in the cobblestoned San Francisco of 1890? Where carriages made deliveries to Nob Hill mansions?

The same.

You can look Clive in the eye and see he's not putting you on.

He admits that "Lincoln will never have the fascination that the West Coast has. But I was born in Lincoln and got into the candy and ice cream business here when I was all of 16. I've always considered it home.

"San Francisco is one of my favorite cities. It's first as a good place to go . . . we certainly have capitalized on that charisma."

Hilgert bought Blum's five years ago, in a move that was more like rebellion against retirement than anything else. He had retired in 1967 as a general partner and executive vice president of Russell Stover Candies — a career that spanned 35 years in Lincoln and Kansas City. He rationalizes that he couldn't retire, since he doesn't play golf and never had time for hobbies.

Clive found he just couldn't keep his hands out of the candy. He was elected president of Loft Candy Corp. of Long Island City, N.Y., in 1968.

But that wasn't like owning your own candy company. When Blum's became "available" in 1970, Hilgert saw his chance to realize this boyhood dream: "I decided that I'd like to spend my golden years doing what I know best and enjoy most," he explained.

Clive moved the national headquarters of Blum's to Lincoln in 1974 "because I can operate it better from here, than from the coast . . . San Fran is actually quite a long ways from everywhere." From a merchandising standpoint.

Hilgert decided it was easier to move Blum's to Lincoln, where he and his sons have extensive business investments.

Clive eventually tells you the factor that prompted the move. "The Blum's people (it was owned by Envirofood Inc. of Orange, Cal.) were interested in developing their retail stores on the Coast. I wanted to expand distribution into the national market."

Expand he did — into 2,000 wholesale outlets that account for 90% of Blum's sales. Some outlets are rather remote: the Fiji Islands; Guam; Johannesburg, South Africa; Tokyo and Hong Kong.

And franchising into cities of 50,000 or more is under way.

One aspect of its wholesaling is unique in the industry, Clive says. "We distribute 'branded' candies. These are fine lines we offer for a dozen other manufacturers. Recently we've had other makers come to us, asking us to distribute for them."

Clive confides that he'd like to begin acquiring or merging with some of these small candy manufacturers, as Blum's grows. "One day we may go public . . . but it takes a certain volume and profit level to make that stock market dream come true."

Just what level of profits or sales volume Blum's has is Clive's secret.

He will tell you that sales have increased 540% since he bought the company. In 1974 he was saying that sales had increased 10 times in a three-year period and stood at more than $3 million annually.

And Hilgert will compare Blum's with Stover: "Their sales are 25 times ours." In its fiscal 1976, Stover had sales of more than $100 million for the first time.

Clive started as a soda fountain boy in the Mrs. Stover's Candies, Ice Cream and Cake shop in the Walgreen Building at 13th and O.

About 30 years ago he was transferred to Stover's main Kansas City plant.

And he literally grew up with the Stovers: he lived in their home for years. He saw their sales go from $300,000 a year to $1 million in 1941. And that represented one million pounds of candy.

When he retired from Stover, he had a partnership interest in three Stover factories. The Kansas City plant was closed a year after the unionization of its workers.

Quality ingredients and "exquisite packaging" will continue to earn Blum's the attention of "the classes, rather than the masses," Clive pledges. "We have to make a better product . . . there's no way I'll go along with the trend to consistent mediocrity in restaurant food."

While candy making has been a tradition in Lincoln for decades, Hilgert says he is the only Lincoln resident who owns one.

Blum's candy factory is in Jackson, Minn., its refrigerated distribution centers in Omaha, Harrisburg, Pa., and, of course, San Francisco.

AMERICA'S MEXICAN-AMERICAN REVOLUTION

There's a revolution underway in the nation's dining habits.

In one short decade, the number of families eating Mexican-American dishes increased 45 per cent. And most of these customers are in the 18-to-34 age bracket, the fastest growing segment of America's population.

That's a big potential market.

So we've taken our experience in one successful business—Kentucky. Fried Chicken—and used it to help create Zantigo Mexican-American Restaurants.

Zantigo Restaurants already are open in several markets. But a number of individual franchises are available.

If you'd like to know more about Zantigo and the American revolution in Mexican-American foods, write now for complete financial and franchise requirements.

If your application is approved, a Zantigo Mexican-American Restaurant can be opened with an initial investment as low as $40,000. We're seeking prospective franchisees willing to make a commitment to be active in the day-to-day operation of their Zantigo Restaurant.

For detailed information, write to my attention giving your complete address and phone number.

South Korea Tourism Up

Seoul (AP) — South Korea's foreign exchange earnings from tourism amounted to $222 million in the first 10 months of this year, up 95% from a year earlier, the Transportation Ministry reported.

The number of foreign tourists who visited Korea in the January-October period rose 34% from a year ago to 700,000.

Japanese numbered 436,200, accounting for 61% of the total, followed by 86,200 Americans and 19,700 Nationalist Chinese.

Coughlan: SealRite To Expand in 1977

Indal Limited, a diversified Canadian manufacturer, is wasting no time in demonstrating its North American growth philosophy.

Dermot Coughlan, Indal president, revealed Friday that the SealRite plant in Lincoln will get 20,000 more square feet of production space during 1977.

Coughan, who moved to Toronto in 1969 from England, said he views SealRite as "Indal's wood fabrication base" in the U.S. The Lincoln expansion may not be in wood windows or insulated glass units, he said: "We're looking at new product lines and expansion of SealRite products into other markets . . ."

SealRite has a $20 million sales potential, Coughlan says. Sales during its fiscal 1975 were about $6 million.

Indal recently bought 70% interest in SealRite's 104,000 square foot plant for $1.8 million; this included its cut-stock lumber and millwork plant in Spokane, Wash.

Indal, with six other American manufacturing subsidiaries, produces aluminum, steel, glass and wood products for the auto and construction markets.

Herb Heumann, board chairman of SealRite Industries, says a big factor in the decision to sell controlling interest "was our inability to make available to the company annual infusions of capital to support growth."

Indal's decision to buy SealRite was "pure coincidence", Heumann says, and was not based on his World War II friendship with the late Sir Val Dunca, who was board chairman of Rio Tinto-Zinc Corp. of London. Rio Tinto owns 60% of Indal Limited.

New Heumann Role

Elected a director of Indal Inc., Heumann will "undoubtedly be involved in other acquisitions of American companies for Indal," Coughlan said. Indal Inc. is its U.S. holding company.

Indal Limited had net earnings of $7.5 million on sales of $218 million during 1975, making it 111th among the 200 largest Canadian corporations, says Canadian Business magazine.

Coughlan says SealRite fit into its growth strategy of buying a group of small American companies with strong management and growth potential, well established in their marketing areas.

"We look for a successful entrepreneur -- full of ideas — who needs more capital to grow. His products are of high quality, his operation is privately held and profitable. We want to retain this management."

Indal has a goal of $500 million in U.S. sales within five years. Its American acquisitions are financed with cash flow and a $7 million stock offering.

Canadian companies have invested in more U.S. manufacturing during 1976 than those from any other country, says The Conference Board, a nonprofit business research group.

High labor costs, lower productivity and policies of the Liberal government in Canada have spurred this trend, Coughlan explained. "We planned to move into the U.S., but accelerated our move due to the healthy American investment environment and the free enterprise system.

"Before Indal makes major new investments in Canada, we need a set of rules so we know what return on investment we'll be allowed."

Stock Prices Volatile, Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — With blue-chips bearing the brunt of the selling, prices fell last abbreviated week in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange amid uncertainties over President-elect Jimmy Carter's economic policies.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which had gained 26.18 points the week before, lost 21.86 to 943.07. This included a 17.37-point setback Friday, the worst in five weeks, and a 9.56-point decline Wednesday, the day after Carter beat President Ford in the race for the white House.

The NYSE common stock index lost 0.95 to 53.94 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, dropped 2.08 to 100.82.

Declines topped advances, 911 to 831, among the 2,053 issues crossing the tape.

Volume for the four-day week totaled 80,211,940 shares, compared with 78,537,680 the week before and 74,899,590 traded during the corresponding week a year ago. The market was closed Tuesday for the presidential election.

Carter's election has removed the uncertainty about who will be in the White House next year. But the election left Wall Street uncertain about the Democrat's economic policies.

Carter said Thursday night he may call for a tax cut or rebate if the economy continues to lag through January, but made no commitment. Labor Department officials said a tax cut would stimulate the economy, but also would risk the chance of rekindling inflation.

Last week, the government reported its September index of leading indicators fell 0.7 per cent, the same as in August. It was the first time since early 1975 of back-to-back declines.

In addition, new factory orders declined 0.7 per cent in September, the third consecutive month the figure has decreased.

Meanwhile, October wholesale prices rose 0.6 per cent. That was down from 0.9 per cent in September, but it included a disturbing 1 per cent rise in prices of industrial commodities, the largest increase in a year.

The nation's basic money supply climbed $1.8 billion in the latest reporting week and $3.4 billion on a broader basis. This revived fears the Federal Reserve Board may tighten credit.

Carter also said Thursday a decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise prices substantially at its Dec. 15 meeting would be a "serious blow" to consumer nations.

Wall Street showed signs of nervousness when Cairo's leading newspaper earlier thursday urged Arab nations to unite to use oil as a weapon against Carter's alleged pro-Israeli policies.

As had been expected, the October unemployment rate rose to 7.9 per cent from 7.8 per cent in September. This was one result of the slowed down economy.

The news wasn't all gloomy. Consumer installment credit rose $1.48 billion, helping stores report strong October sales. Retail sales rose 1.2 per cent last week and should continue higher with Christmas sales beginning. Analysts noted consumer spending carried the economy's recovery earlier this year.

Even more encouraging, September construction rose at a 0.9 per cent annual rate, increasing to $149.4 billion from an upward revised $148.1 billion the month before.

Analysts believe Wall Street may react more positively once Carter appoints his key cabinet and staff members, and elaborates on what he plans to do about the economy.

Until these actions occur, however, the stock market will be struggling with uncertainty. And Wall Street hates uncertainty.

General Motors, trading ex-dividend, topped the Big Board active list, falling 3 to 70⅞ on 1,189,400 shares. The issue was strong earlier this week when the company declared a record $3-a-share extra yearend dividend.

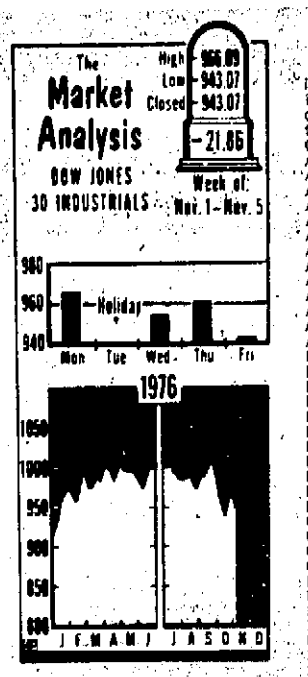

Texaco was the second most active Big Board issue, off 1¼ to 26 on 815,300 shares. American Telephone & Telegraph, which said it expects improved earnings, was third, up ⅛ to 61⅛ on 744,200 shares.

Blue-chip Eastman Kodak lost 5¼ to 82⅝. The November issue of Consumers Report cited a print "fading" problem with Kodak's instant film. A Kodak spokesman said the company did not consider the fading a problem.

A government committee triggered heavy selling among soft drink manufacturers when it raised safety questions about cola drinks that contain caffeine. PepsiCo lost 4⅞ to 77⅛ and Coca-Cola 4⅜ to 77¾.

Institutions cashed in on some electronics and computer favorites as the year heads into the homestretch. IBM fell 9⅛ to 262¼ and Digital Equipment 5⅛ to 146. They are among the most volatile NYSE stocks.

General American Oil gained 10 to 57½. Observers have been speculating the company was a takeover target since Mesa Petroleum bought 495,717 shares early this week.

The Dow Jones average closed at 943.07 Friday, down 21.86 from the week prior. Analysts attributed the drop to investor uncertainty over the result of the national election and worry over the economy.

Steer Top Is $39.75

Omaha (UPI) — Trade in the cattle alleys last week again had to deal with the wholesale trade, the Omaha Livestock Foundation said in its weekly summary.

At the opening declines were posted as buyers were not aggressive because of the carcass trade and the depressed attitude continued for most of the week.

Numbers were light after the opening but failed to boost prices. Toward the close wholesale trade began to pick up and the few cattle available turned higher.

Receipts totaled 14,000, compared with 13,900 the previous week and 15,100 a year earlier.

Steer top was 39.75 for a late load of choice with end of prime at 1,123 lb, mostly Yield Grade 3. Same grades through the week were 39.25-39.50. Bulk of 975-1,300 lb choice steers sold from 38.00-39.25.

Heifer top was 38.50 with the bulk of the choice heifers bringing 36.50-38.00.

Cows finished the week 50-1.00 lower. Utility and commercial brought 20.00-22.00 with a few 22.50. Canners and cutters sold from 16.00-20.50.

Hog trade was mostly active and demand was generally good taking into consideration the large number of hogs.

Butcher top was 32.75 with the bulk of the 188-310 lb hogs selling from 27.00-32.50.

Wheat, Oats Lower

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat and oats were substantially lower, corn irregularly lower and soybeans mixed last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 3¼ to 5¢; corn unchanged to off 3½; oats up 3¾ to 5; and soybeans up 15½ to off 8.

Trade was mostly featureless throughout the week with the harvesting pressure of a record corn crop again dominating thinking in that commodity and wheat futures remaining under the influence of unusually high stocks-on-hand.

Encouraging export inspections in corn for the previous week offset some of the declining trend.

Wheat and corn futures benefited slightly in overflow strength from the soybeans complex on late-week rumors of potential export business with the Soviet Union, China or both, along with other Eastern European nations.

The rumors remained unconfirmed into the Friday session, which saw the major commodities open moderately higher but failing to hold any of the increases much beyond an hour, except in soybeans, which ended the week higher in all positions except the deferred November.

Speculative activity dominated across the floor Friday but midway through the session trade became more cautious with considerable short-covering activity prevailing ahead of the weekend.

Merger Planned

Directors of Champion International and Hoerner Waldorf report the two companies have agreed in principle for the merger of the two firms.

Champion International is headquartered at Stamford, Conn., Hoerner Waldorf at St. Paul, Minn.

The agreement calls for each share of common stock of Hoerner Waldorf to be changed in .95 of a share of common stock of Champion International. At current market prices the transaction would be worth $317 million.

The agreement is subject to approval of a definitive agreement by the boards and stockholders and receipt of a favorable tax ruling.

Havelock Bank Awaiting Word on 70th and A Office

Havelock Bank is awaiting a Lincoln City Council decision on its proposal for a teller office on the northwest corner of 70th and A Sts.

Roger Anderson, bank board chairman, said he is interested only in detached auxiliary teller offices in what is conceived as a small group of financial and office complexes. No retail outlets would be built.

The City-County Planning Commission has recommended denial of Anderson's application to get the zoning of the 8.7-acre site changed from residential to local commercial (3½ acres for a financial facility and the remainder to office zoning.

Anderson said the banking office would be similar to his Pine Tree office at 70th and Adams; he declined to make an estimate of investment or square footage that might be involved.

"We're not developers," he noted. "We want to sell the site and have someone else build.

"There has been some negotiation with a savings and loan that might locate in the complex," he continued.

Approval of Havelock Bank's application for the teller office, filed with the Department of Banking and Finance, is contingent on city approval of the zoning change, Anderson stressed.

Developing Nations From Black to Red

Bangkok (AP) — The world recession turned trade balance figures from black to red for most of the developing countries in Asia and the Pacific region, a study report asserted.

A paper issued by the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific said the recession and falling prices for export commodities turned an $8.1 billion regional trade surplus in 1974 to an $829 million deficit in 1975.

Asian countries' export growth rate dipped 4.7% in 1975 after recording a 121.4% jump the year before, it added.

Padlocked Fishing Ponds

On Ft. Robinson, Red Cloud Agency, there is a fishing pond that is posted "no fishing." We have heard that state dignitaries, including the governor and his wife have been using the pond. Is this reserved for VIPs only?

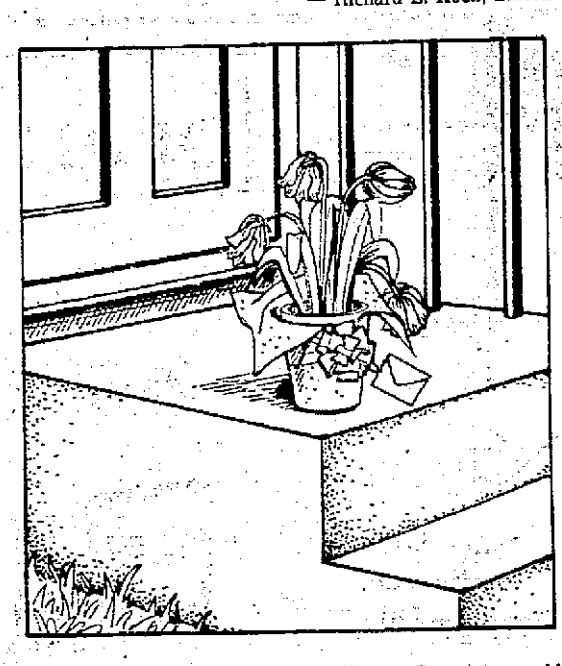

— Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: All ponds at the state park are open to the public for fishing, according to Vince Rotherham, superintendent of Ft. Robinson. Bob Thomas of the state Game and Parks Commission agreed. Charles Duncan of the state parks commission said access to the ponds near the Red Cloud Agency is restricted only to the extent that the agency's road is locked. By contacting the park superintendent, he said, persons may gain entrance to the area and fish the ponds. The padlock was installed only to prevent vandalism to the agency, Duncan explained. All the officials contacted said there are presently no signs posted prohibiting fishing in the ponds.

While in San Antonio, I called the florist shop at Lackland AFB and ordered one yellow rose and one potted begonia plant to be delivered by FTD to my wife in Lincoln, Kramer Greenhouses delivered the order and left it inside the screen door. When my wife returned home, the flowers were wilting and losing buds. I asked Kramer Greenhouses to give me and my wife an apology and full financial restitution or replacement. I would appreciate it if you can get either Kramer's or FTD to respond to my complaint.

— Richard L. Koch, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Betty Kramer of Kramer Greenhouses said they offered a refund or replacement but were turned down. She said the matter is now in the hands of the national FTD office. Hazel Hunter, of the customer relations section of FTD said the FTD field agent will look into the matter and possibly recommend corrective action on Kramer Greenhouses. She said Koch may receive a refund upon sending FTD a receipt of purchase.

Water Stain Removal

How can I get water stains off an old clear glass vase?

— Waterlogged, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Cyril Bish, Lancaster County extension agent, suggests using a solution of one part vinegar, one part household ammonia and four parts detergent. If the vase has too small an opening to allow scrubbing of the inside, he said lead pellets from a shotgun shell dropped into the vase and swirled around will remove the unsightly spots.

VOLUNTEER

Hey, Give Yourself

Women, men and youth are needed by the non-profit Volunteer Bureau. Address responses to Rm. 219, Lincoln Center Bldg., 215 So. 15th, Lincoln, Neb. 68508. Or call 435-4980.

Do you care? Enough to assist in a community-wide program designed to provide Thanksgiving and Christmas for low-income families and individuals? Volunteers are needed to answer phone and help with planning and organizing.

Do you care? Enough to help keep little children warm this winter by knitting mittens, scarves or caps? Some yarn can be furnished but much needs to be donated.

Do you care? Enough to be a big brother or sister to an elementary age child needing the steady friendship of a young man or young woman who really cares about kids? Training and supervision provided by professional staff.

Do you care? Enough to supervise games and activities for about six children each Tuesday evening while their parents are involved in a class? Or every second Thursday morning of the month?

Twenty individuals and one organization registered last week at the Lincoln Area Volunteer Bureau, according to director Millie Katz. They were referred to Eastmont Manor, YWCA, Lincoln Information Service for the Elderly, City Parks and Recreation Handicapped Swim Program, Pre-trial Diversion, Lakeview School, Planned Parenthood, Personal Crisis, Lancaster County Welfare, Task Force on Abused Women, Cedars Foundation, Lincoln Action Program, Volunteer Bureau, Lincoln Council on Literacy and Red Cross.

Summer Job 'Little Scary'

Miami (AP) — Louis J. Kilmer says a summertime switch from sociology instructor to campus security guard at Barry College here proved "a bit shocking, a little scary in retrospect."

Kilmer said when school ended last spring, he needed money, so he applied for a guard job. "I walked up to the chief of security and said how about a job. He thought I was kidding," he said.

He said that patrolling the campus on a scooter at night soon made him suspicious of things such as people walking across campus at night and automobiles cruising around.

Kilmer said he also noted with distress how eager he became to ticket cars parked in unauthorized spots.

Board Will Reconsider Contract

Lancaster County Commissioners will reconsider, during a Tuesday afternoon meeting, last week's decision not to extend the contract with consultants doing technical work on the county-city comprehensive plan.

Last week Bruce Hamilton and Bob Colin voted against the contract decision. Since then, the mayor and the planning department staff have asked the commissioners to reconsider that decision.

The board also will hold a public hearing on Stan Grell Sr.'s application for a beer off-sale and bottle club license at a proposed building on 84th and Pioneers.

The board also will consider a subdivision appeal by Pearle Finigan. The City-County Planning Commission denied the subdivision at 840 Waverly Rd.

Wood-Burning Stoves— Nostalgia That's Practical

By Kathy Moore

Many homeowners are trying to tame a near-extinct breed of fire-eating beast. The wood-burning stove, once used as a main heat source and cooking appliance, is returning to the modern home. No longer a monster that haphazardly spews forth fire and smoke, the cast iron heaters are helping fight rising fuel costs.

As recently as five years ago, wood-burning stoves (heaters are called stoves even if no cooking can be done on them) were reserved for log cabins and summer homes. Now they are alternatives to main heating sources.

Kari Ronning and Curt Donaldson ordered their Franklin stove in the fall of 1973. The energy crunch had just begun and since installing a fireplace wasn't practical in their home, they thought a wood-burning stove would be the answer. Unfortunately, a backlog in the order delayed the stove's delivery until May 1974.

Kari said they didn't know much about the pros and cons of models, but her husband Curt wanted a mid-sized, cast iron frame and a closed stove to slow the burning process and conserve wood. Since their home is decorated with antiques, the Franklin fit right in.

Their Franklin was purchased before it became trendy to have a wood-burning stove, so they paid only a little over $100 for the model. A similar one now runs about $200.

Kari said the house "never seemed to be warm enough for me." Now, in the early fall, they can set the thermostat at 65° and the day after using the stove, the house temperature registers 72°.

They figure they are saving on heating bills since their only initial cost was the stove. Installation was done by Curt and the wood supply has come from a dead elm in their yard. A chain saw is shared with other families.

They regulate the amount of heat by the number of logs burned. A typical evening (from 5 to 11 p.m.) uses three quarter-logs.

Although the first year's cost of supplying the stove with wood, obtaining a chain saw and purchasing the unit may seem like more than you're saving, it will probably pay off. Kari said that often wood can be obtained through "informal contacts."

Most families choose a simple box stove for their first investment. This includes the Franklin, potbellied and parlor stoves made of cast iron.

Aside from their heating aspect, many consider the stoves another piece of furniture and these models satisfy varied decorating tastes.

Air in box stoves enters through an adjustable intake in the door. As the fire progresses, gradually close down the adjustable air intake to curb it. Because this type of stove is not tightly sealed, joints around the door and seams allow for minimal air to leak into the firebox, even though the intake is closed. It is difficult to set the stove for a slow burn and impossible to extinguish by closing off its supply of oxygen.

The front doors on a Franklin give the advantage of a fireplace when open (viewing the fire) but when closed are more efficient as heating units.

Stoves can provide about three times as much heat as a fireplace, using the same amount of wood, since most fireplace heat goes up the chimney.

Other stoves advertised as more fuel-efficient include the Ashley and Riteway.

Both of these are air-tight and have a thermostatically controlled damper. According to local stores, however, customers would rather opt for style than efficient heating.

Prices on the Franklin models range from around $120 for the 22-inch size to about $200 for the 30-inch model. These prices, however, only include the basic unit. In most cases, the grate, screen and curtain for an open-door model are extra. It boosts the cost about $50.

Additional costs are incurred in installation. According to Jim Pierce, manager of the home improvement department at a local department store, the cost goes up with the chimney. City codes require the chimney to be made of a certain material and major carpentry knowledge is needed. He said many homeowners choose to do it themselves to cut costs. Final installation usually runs around $200 to $300, including parts.

Compared to putting in a masonry fireplace, though, this is still hundreds of dollars cheaper.

Regardless of these costs, the wood-burning stove market is hot. Pierce estimated his business has more than doubled over last year. He said his firm now carries many stoves in stock. Other stores supply them via the catalog desk, but then there is a small delay. Antique hunters can find original models in old homes and at auctions.

Aside from the cast iron styles, other models are springing up. They are made of heavy gauge steel with a concrete floor or cast iron door.

Fireplaces, Heaters, Stoves Spark Need for Fire Safety

Safety Check List

- ☐ Prepare emergency phone number list.
- ☐ Gasoline and other flammables stored in tight metal or approved plastic containers away from heat sources.
- ☐ Heaters and stoves located on nonflammable surfaces with no combustible material near.
- ☐ Heaters and stoves isolated to prevent accidental burns.
- ☐ No worn cords.
- ☐ Chimney clean and in good repair.
- ☐ Fireplace screen in use.
- ☐ All supplemental heating devices ventilated.

By Jim Ancoin

The signs of homeowners chilled by the rising costs of electricity and natural gas are obvious: the wood pile heaped on the patio; the red cans of gasoline or kerosene marked "flammable" stored in the garage; the sacks of coal and charcoal.

More and more, people are experimenting with alternative means to supply heat and power to their homes. Some firms have reported a quadrupling in fireplace sales in the last few years. And other space heaters are equally as popular — anything to reduce the use of the furnace.

Although reducing utility costs, these energy sources increase safety hazards in the home. Improperly stored fuels, poorly installed stoves and heaters and imperfectly maintained fireplaces and other heating devices can create dangerous conditions.

Flammable Liquids

Storing gasoline, kerosene or other ignitables is never safe, for instance. Gasoline fumes can build up in closed basements or garages and be set off by a careless spark or open flame. The explosion of one gallon of gasoline compares to the blast of more than a dozen sticks of dynamite.

When you must store flammable fuels, use only a metal or approved plastic container which seals tightly. Never use a glass or ordinary plastic jug or bottle.

And make sure the container of gasoline is not stored near the open flame of a gas heater or where a spark could reach it.

Installation of wood stoves, electrical heaters and other space heaters should be done with safety in mind as well, with particular attention to where the heater or stove is set.

Watch Surroundings

Never locate a heater or stove on a surface which might catch fire. Make sure no curtains or other flammable materials hang near and place a barrier around the heater if there is a chance it can be tipped over. Allow 36 inches of clearance between stoves and combustible wall coverings.

Minimize chances of arm and leg burns from accidental contact with stoves and heaters. Burns from heaters are high on hospitals' lists of emergency room cases.

Something to remember about electric heaters: They produce heat by running high amounts of electricity through small wires. The tax on the electrical supply is tremendous, as is the strain on the device itself. Make sure heater cords are not frayed, and use only those which have automatic shut-off safety switches.

Fireplaces, likewise, have their safety hazards.

Defective Chimneys

One of the leading causes of fires in buildings is defective chimneys. Soot accumulations in chimneys not only restrict the exhaust of the area but are subject to being ignited as well. Keep your fireplace chimney clean.

Also:

— Use a screen over your fireplace;

— Don't overload the fireplace with wood;

— Don't allow the fire to smolder when the damper is closed; harmful fumes can back up into the house;

— Never use a soft bituminous coal. It gives off carbon monoxide, as does charcoal briquets and can be deadly if used indoors.

Kerosene and propane fuels (which should be used indoors only in extreme emergencies) give off poisonous gases and require substantial ventilation.

On most supplementary heating devices, in fact, a vent pipe should be installed to the outside.

A few added reminders: put ashes in metal receptacles and place outdoors; never add lighter fluid to a fire once it is burning; pipes connecting stoves to chimneys should be made of not less than No. 24 gauge steel and should not directly touch any flammable wall material.

World of Women

Diana Warner Tuned In to Radio

By Linda Ulrich

"Working stockholder, officer and director in all operations."

Diana Warner's own description of her role in KLIN radio operations is one that has evolved. When she and her husband, Norton, bought their first radio station in Kimball, he had had some work experience in broadcasting, she had a master's degree in piano performance.

Both of them rolled up their sleeves and jumped in.

She now does Federal Communications Commission (FCC) license renewals for all eight of their radio stations, which are located in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado.

Licenses must be renewed every three years and the process is a thorough one which requires study of FCC rules and rule changes. "This year I think there are more changes than in any other renewal period." she said.

Part of the FCC requirements include interviewing community leaders and a random general public survey. Such interviews help broadcasters determine what people's concerns about their community are, she said. "We as broadcasters have a responsibility to respond to those concerns. We can't solve the problems but we can bring them to public attention."

Thoughts and Surveys

The thoughts of community leaders and the public surveys together "give us a pretty good idea of what people are thinking about. Usually, we see patterns emerge and there will be four, five or six things that are consistently mentioned."

She feels that "lots of times we (broadcasters) end up over-regulated. It appears that much of legislation is made to cover a few isolated cases. Most broadcasters are responsible but those who are not reflect on all of us so there are more regulations for everyone that really apply to only a few."

More Women Entering

One of the few women with ownership responsibilities in the broadcasting business, Mrs. Warner says more women are entering the field. "Broadcasting doesn't necessarily mean being in front of a microphone. That's a small part of what goes on."

It's a field for anyone who has "a good head and is well organized, capable and effective."

"Anytime you have a job mainly using your head, what difference does it make if you're a man or a woman?"

Although her work at the radio station is important to her, music is of even more importance to her.

She plays piano, both solo and as part of a team, and does a lot of accompanying. She also has taught, written, composed and arranged music.

She feels that music played over the air should reflect a philosophy in which the station is "somewhat selective. Music has to stand on its own merit."

The ideal is a happy medium of keeping up with your own standards and keeping up with today's musical tastes, she said.

Mrs. Warner doesn't think the state of music is any different now than in any period of history. "Not everything Beethoven wrote was his greatest hit. A few things live that people love. The good stuff goes on and the trash goes away but we have an opportunity to hear it all."

Diana Warner

Mrs. Warner is president of the alumni chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon and is a member of Musical Art Club and Thursday Morning Musical Review, performing organizations. She also enjoys bridge.

The Warners have three children, Lisa, 17; Sidney Anne, 15; and Nortie, 13.

Nightmares Can Be a Normal Grief Symptom

How many times have you heard remarks like these? "Her husband died way last summer and she's still depressed . . ." "He never got along with her anyway so why is he so upset at her death . . ." "That boy must not have loved his grandmother very much — all he did at her funeral was run around like crazy . . ."

People "in mourning" don't wear black clothes any more or refrain from dancing for a year. But John Brantner, University of Minnesota psychology professor, feels perhaps they should, because many people don't realize how severe and how long-lasting normal grief can be.

Hallucinations, nightmares, dazed feelings and irritability are normal symptoms of grief. "People sometimes think they are going crazy," Brantner said, but extreme reactions are common and normal in severe grief.

Grief begins with a sense of dazed shock which creates confused behavior and an inability to concentrate, Brantner said. This first phase lasts a few days. During this time the person "in mourning" needs massive support from the family and from those not grieving intensely themselves, such as fellow church members or coworkers.

The next phase of grief lasts three or four months, Brantner said. During this time of intense mourning, the bereaved person is depressed, sad and lonely most of the time. This is the time of nightmares and hallucinations. Sleep and appetite are disturbed, concentration is difficult. The person wants others nearby but also wants them to leave because they set off more waves of sadness and bring out more irritability.

Gradually, after about a year, the symptoms diminish. Sleep and appetite patterns return to normal. Attention is again turned outward. "Normal grief for a significant death goes on longer than many people think," Brantner said.

Even after this first, intense mourning is over, holidays and special days are especially sad. The birthday or death day of the loved person, Christmas or even the time of year when vacations were spent together can reawaken painful grief for the rest of one's life.

"Some people are like swans," Brantner said. "They learn to be happy again, but they really have mated for life."

Only a few people exhibit what psychologists call "pathological grief." One was Queen Victoria, according to Brantner. She shut herself up after the death of her husband and would not sign government bills for years.

Other people have more than the typical number of normal suicide thoughts — they brood and dwell on suicide. Grief, like any stress, also can trigger mental illness in susceptible people.

Normal grief in children is a special case, according to Richard Obershaw, mortuary science counselor at the University of Minnesota. Five to eight-year-old children often grieve by running and jumping wildly, talking very loudly, losing their appetites and developing an upset stomach. "Parents should not punish children for behaving this way," Obershaw said. "This acting out can help the child work through his grief."

By age 10 or 13, children begin to reach the adult realization that death is permanent.

Of course, normal grief patterns in both adults and children vary a lot, Brantner said. Some deaths are much harder to take than others, such as a prolonged suffering death, a sudden unexpected death, the death of a young person and the death of a child.

In his own experience as psychologist, Brantner has found that two kinds of death are most difficult for the survivors. One is the angry suicide directed at you. "A suicide like this kills two people," Brantner said. The other is the death of a parent's 18 to 25 year-old child. "Parents seem to feel that they had launched a child this age into adult life, to live after them. It is normal never to get over a death like this completely — in the sense that some serious sadness remains, though you can lead a normal life."

Nonsmokers And Smokers Tell Feelings

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Almost 6,000 letters have swamped the Civil Aeronautics Board since it requested public comment on whether smoking should be banned on commercial airliners.

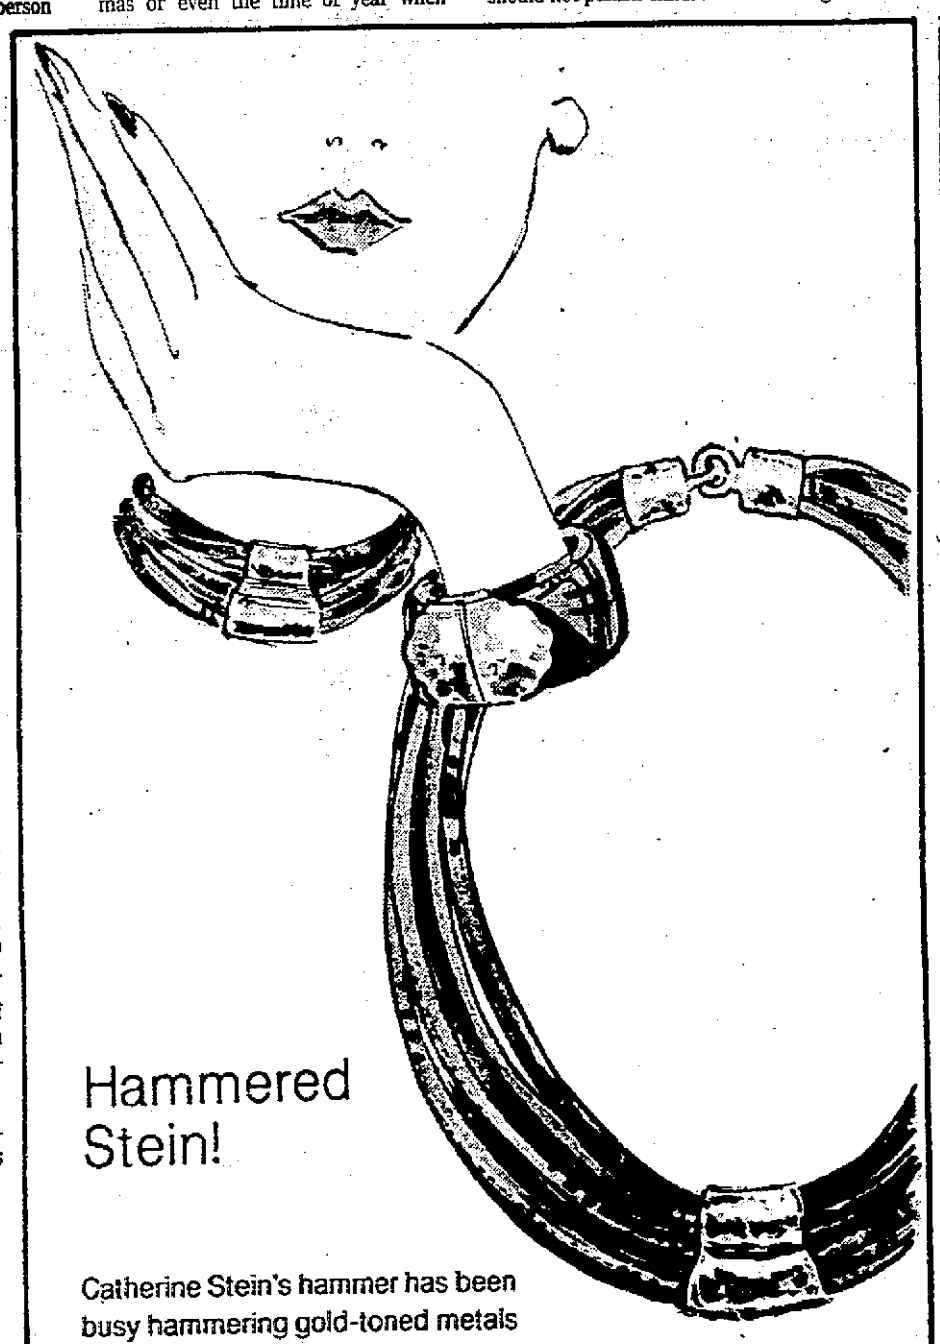

An unscientific sampling found that after about a month, the comments were fairly evenly divided. In almost identical terms, smokers and nonsmokers alike expressed strong feelings that their rights were being infringed upon and they were tired of being pushed around

Phobias: Fearful Names For Numerous Fears

By Betty Stevens

Are you afflicated with acrophobia? That's fear of heights. Or astraphobia? That's fear of storms. Or maybe mysophobia? That's fear of germs.

According to research, agoraphobia — the fear of open spaces — is the most common phobia persons are afflicted with.

In any case, none of them are as common as you might be lead to believe, according to Dr. Henry Balters, clinical psychologist specializing in behavior modification.

And there are few absolutes.

How you get abnormal fears, to what degree they affect your life, and how you can get over them are as varied as the people afflicted, Balters said.

"Maybe your parents trounced the bejesus out of you and sent you to bed in the dark. That's one way of developing a phobia," Balters said.

Or maybe you develop a phobia after some great stressful time in your life although the subsequent fear is not related to the stress.

Sometimes they seem to come on people spontaneously.

Balters humorously tells about demonstrating to students how to handle snakes to help people overcome that fear. The snake got away from him and slithered over his shoulder. And now he is apprehensive about snakes.

Or once he had gradually worked with a patient to get the patient over his fear of high places. They were on a second story ledge when the wind suddenly came up. The patient was okay, but ever since, Dr. Balters feels uncomfortable in high spots.

"I'm a real banana myself," Balters said laughingly.

Are you afflicted with domatophobia? That's fear of being confined in a hourse. Or erogophobia? That's fear of work.

Conquering Phobias

When you want to help a person conquer his fear, you offer a "supermarket of shrinkology," Balters said. "That is, you offer the consumer what he wants. Everybody has a certain measure of quirks. If you have a phobia that is not too bothersome, maybe it's not worth treating.

Dr. Henry Balters

"If the patient wants to conquer the fear, I need to convince the patient of the rationale of regaining that part of his life that fear is taking away from him," Balters said.

About 77 persons out of 1,000 have a phobia, but only two or three percent are severely incapacitated, Balters said.

One method of treatment is called systematic desensitization. That calls for identifying the fear and constructing a plan of increased items toward anxiety.

If the patient is afraid of dogs, for example, in a relaxed state, the patient may be asked to picture a dog at a great distance. Over a period of weeks the patient is brought face to face with the worse cause of anxiety related to dogs such as opening a door and having a dog rush out at him. Simultaneously, while the patient is experiencing these things verbally with the psychologist, he is encouraged to come in contact with the same actual stimuli.

Another method is called flooding, where the patient is thrown into the pinnacle of anxiety related to his fear and forced to deal with it.

Another method is to have the patient watch a person who has normal anxieties about the same kinds of fears handle them in the patient's presence.

For example the model might with apprehension touch a snake, then handle a snake, and demonstrate to the patient how fear is overcome through exposure.

On Their Own

If you just leave persons with phobias alone, some get worse, some stay the same, but 43% rid themselves of the phobias spontaneously. "So when you talk about helping persons overcome fear, you have to do better than 43%," Balters said. "That many would have recovered without you."

Balters is a native of Omaha. He took his undergraduate degree at San Jose College, his doctorate from the University of Nebraska and has been in Lincoln since 1969.

There are people who need psychiatrists because they may need, in addition to mental help, medicine or hospitalization that medical doctors provide. Clinical psychologists are help-providers with their own set of skills for persons who need mental or emotional support without medicine, Balters said.

And those persons might be afflicted with anthrophobia. That's fear of people. Or botanophobia. That's fear of plants. Or gynephobia. That's fear of women.

Time of Your Life

By Jack Smith

Boon Companionship

I frequently have advised those of us who are older to maintain contact with those who are young, and I am not changing that advice.

But I do want to emphasize that it isn't enough. There's still a great vacuum in an older person's life if he or she doesn't enjoy companionship with at least one other person of comparable age.

This is because it isn't possible to share experience with those who are too young to have the experience.

We all need someone to reminisce with, laugh with, regret with, deplore with and cherish with. You can do all of this alone, of course, but it just isn't as satisfying if there's no response.

Fortunate is the older person who has all this companionship in a spouse, where the panorama of shared experience potential is at its height.

But for those who are living single-style — or for those who do not have true companionship in their marriages — the boon companion may have to be sought.

What to Look For

Here are some specifications on what to look for:

1. A similarity somewhere in the background of each person. This can be geographical, such as a home town or an alma mater. It can be professional, such as a line of work or the same corporate employer. Or it can be avocational, such as an interest in music or sports.

Whatever the similarity, it has to be broad and deep to be sustaining. You can't build a long-time companionship on one common trip abroad, because there isn't enough shared experience to last.

2. A similarity in point of view. It does no harm to deplore young people's fashions or what has happened to the railroads as long as you just shake heads with your friend and don't write endless letters to the editor about it. In fact, it's better to have a sympathetic outlet with whom to discuss your frustrations and fears.

You need someone with whom you can read the newspaper (in separate sections, of course) and compose the same conversational editorial comments on almost every item. There's a great deal of satisfaction in knowing that someone else agrees with you.

3. A similarity in politics. This may not seem too important, but it is — because you don't want someone else to argue with.

When you're young, argument sometimes can be a stimulating form of emotional exercise. When you're older, argument can be a nuisance, interfering with your true enjoyment of another person's company.

Political views are often more inflexible than are religious ones, because there's no "call for charity" in the framework of your belief. You tend to consider your opponents malevolent or stupid instead of just misguided.

4. A need that you can help to fulfill. Most of us receive a far greater satisfaction from giving than from getting. The quality of being indispensable to someone else validates a person's sense of importance.

The older we get, the more we tend to wonder whether we count any more. The companion who needs something that only you can supply resolves such doubts.

Swiss and Bavarian Folk Art

Folk arts have cohabited with fine arts in Europe for as long as there have been creative hands Today's projects are inspired by Swiss and Bavarian handiwork As you'll see, designs for the Swiss plate and the Bavarian box are related — both in their motifs and in the colors used to work them

1 Originally featured on a wooden plate, the circular design pictured can be painted on a plain china plate

The heart motif, which is shown on the grid, was taken from an old wooden cigarette box You can work it on a cigar box or on any box

2 Paint the plate and the box with flat white paint (Note When working on china, add a dash of scouring cleanser to the paint This will help it adhere) The white base coat adds clarity to the top colors applied over it

3 Give the plate a brownish red final coating of paint The box should be painted a deep mustard shade

4 The designs for the box and the center of the plate are placed on a boxed network called a grid For this grid, 1 square equals ¼ or ½ inch

5 Draw the grid and the designs on tracing paper Rearrange and elongate the center plate design so that it fits into the curve of the plate's border

6 Rub over the designs on the back of the tracing paper with a graphite-tipped pencil

7 Place the graphite side of the tracing paper over the plate or box, tape down

8 Draw firmly along the lines with a thick pencil to transfer the design

9 The plate's semi-circular rim designs and the inside rings are black leaves are olive green, flowers are light mustard, the rose is brownish red On the box, the small heart is light red, the heart outline around it is a darker red, the center top flower is also done in two shades of red; the daisies are pale mustard with olive green leaves

Beideck came to Nebraska from Russia in 1912 and lived in Lincoln for nearly 50 years. He was a cement contractor here until he moved to Minnesota where he farms and has an apple orchard.

His twelve children are Lillian Berryman, Amelia Lutzi, Catherine Schwartz, George Beideck Jr., all of Lincoln, Marian Savin, Young America, Minn., Margie Holetz, Jackie Beideck, Minneapolis, John Beideck, Montrose, Rudy Beideck, Sacramento, Calif., Martha Schessler, Esther Schuerman, Inez Landsman, all of Chicago.

Fattie Says Quit Nagging

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for "Skinny Winner," the woman who dieted for her husband's sake, went into therapy after regaining her weight the second time, ditched Mr. Turn-Off and lost her 55 pounds again.

I'm a 16-year-old girl who weighs about 30 pounds more than she should. I recently decided I am not going to be fat the rest of my life. I can and will get myself down to a size 8 dress and stay there.

So far I've lost ten pounds. Both my father and boyfriend are anti-fat. Daddy fought the weight battle last year and lost 50 pounds. A few years ago I dieted and lost 30 pounds but I gained it back because I had done it for the man in my life. This time it's for me.

I have accepted full responsibility for my fatness. No one puts food into my mouth. And no excuse is good enough to be fat. It's not only unattractive but a health hazard.

Listen, men with fat wives or girlfriends, mothers with fat daughters. Get off their backs. Leave them alone. I know from experience if you lay off they'll do something about it eventually. Let it be for themselves, not for you. It's the only way they will keep the weight off forever.

Thinner Now Than A Month Ago

Dear Thinner: Beautiful! What an upper for those fatties out there who need emotional support. Let me know when you hit size 8.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 31 years old and have been dating the same man for five years. His parents would like us to get married. My parents would like us to get married. I want to get married. Our friends think we make a wonderful couple. The only person who isn't in favor of the idea is him.

I've talked to the guy several times about setting a date. All he does is shrug his shoulders and say, "I'm not ready yet." He doesn't want to break up, either. I've suggested it. I could use some advice, Ann.

Not Getting Any Younger

Dear Not Getting: Are you willing to go with the guy for the rest of your life? If you are he'll let you do it.

If it's marriage you want, make a clean break and tell Speedy Gonzales not to call you unless he is ready to set the date. In the meantime, go out with others and let the chips fall where they may. (P.S. I'm betting Speedy comes through.)

Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, NOV. 8

Your birthday today: All experience this coming year implies some service rendered, directly or indirectly. You get nothing for yourself until others receive benefits from your activity. Circumstances are just difficult enough to insure that you learn further adjustments beyond what you've achieved so far. Today's natives are hard workers, often in some form of art or the chronicles of art. Those born this year will have exceptional integrity; concern with philosophy beginning early but maturing rather late.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Reconnoiter the week ahead; don't spend money on iffy programs. Give priority to checking facts, figures. Let makeshift plans at home stand momentarily.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Doing things in person is better than persuading others to act for you. Resistance to progress requires tact. Mate, rivals alike take unexpected lines.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Temporary curbs allow you to build up pressure and assemble materials. You're at peak form, can convince almost anyone to join you in realistic projects.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Listen to friends for information. Don't accept their guidance on financial matters or explain much of your own affairs. Taper off on self-indulgence.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Change of status will be lastingly beneficial. Let friends help share work and credit. Be selective; there's little time to get in all essential details.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Try to play it cool. If you let the world get to you, today can be frustrating. Obstinate people at business and home are no picnic to deal with.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Speak up if you have something at stake. Conservation measures introduced today have an excellent future. Be sure to tell loved ones of your feelings.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Awkward decisions must be made. Your responsibility for others' resources is greater than usual. Go easy; associates have problems you know nothing of.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Negligence is your most extreme risk. Despite inconvenience, don't skip any crucial feature. Rash statements prove impossible to sustain later.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Solve current difficulties by hard work and personal effort. Some enterprises are overorganized, others too uncertain. Choose which direction to go.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Creativity rises. Assert yourself within reason. Liquidate losing ventures. Sell or give away white elephants; get clear while a chance exists.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Hobbies demand attention while more important matters suffer. Get free at the earliest feasible instant to concentrate on healthy self-interest.

Communication Key To Good Marriage

Madison, Wis. (AP) — Most married couples don't listen to each other, and many get into fights as a result, says a professor who helps couples learn to communicate better.

"The one thing that's real important is accuracy," said Jeff Edelson, a University of Wisconsin social scientist.

"Very often one person will say something to the other when the other is busy, they'll both assume something on that basis, and as a result nobody did the shopping when each of them thought the other would do it," he said.

Edelson, who oversees "couple communication" classes aimed at easing marital strife, said husbands and wives often misunderstand each other by trying to work out major decisions in piecemeal conversations.

"You should not try to decide whether to buy a new car or something like that by talking about it a little bit, now and then," he said. "You should set aside a time to talk about it, like after dinner, to spend as much time as you need going over all the details involved in the decision."

Convention Set For Fellowship

Grand Island — The Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship chapter here will host the Nebraska regional convention Thursday through Saturday at the Ramada Inn. Cohosting the convention will be chapters in Hastings, Kearney, Loup City, Broken Bow and York.

Speakers will include Hymie Rubinstein, evangelist and author; Fr. Gregory Battafarano, Roman Catholic priest, and Tommy Ashcraft, Full Gospel vice president from Houston, Texas. Officials expect nearly 1,500 people to attend the three-day meeting.

State Assembly Set

Grand Island — The Christian Church in Nebraska (Disciples of Christ) will hold its 1976 state assembly here Thursday through Sunday at First Christian Church.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. James A. Moak, moderator of the Disciples of Christ in the United States and Canada. Evangelism workshops will follow his Thursday and Friday addresses.

Other speakers include Dr. Joe R. Jones, dean of the graduate seminary of Phillips University, Enid, Oklahoma; the Rev. Alva S. Brown of Dallas, Texas and the Rev. Emmett G. Haas, pastor of East Lincoln Christian Church and president of the Christian Church in Nebraska.

First Service Today

Grace United Methodist Church, 27th and R Sts., holds its first service in Grace Hall today at 10 a.m. The recently completed multiuse hall replaces Grace's traditional-style sanctuary, which burned in 1973.

Pastor Is Called

Trinity Lutheran Church, 724 So. 12th St., has voted to call as pastor the Rev. Daniel J. Ondov, who currently is serving Bethany Church in Omaha.

Charisma Talk Set

Doug Wead, author of "Charismatic Catholics," has researched the Catholic pentecostal movement from the streets of Belfast, Ireland, to the living rooms of Wellington, New Zealand. He will tell his story at a special conference Thursday through Sunday at First Assembly of God, 56th and R Sts. Meetings start at 7 p.m.

Post Given to Seay

Bill Seay was elected chairman of Immanuel Lutheran Church, 11th and Plum, at its annual meeting. Other officers elected for two-year terms include: Glenn Friendt, secretary; Dale Schmidt Jr., youth chairman and Larry Briggs, treasurer.

Five new elders were elected: Terry Lyman, Dale E. Schmidt Sr., John Miller, Eugene Eggert and Wayne Garrisson.

Music to Be Heard

Free Spirit, a group of 10 Christian musicians, will perform at Brownell School, 60th and Aylesworth Sts., Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the Free Methodist Church of Lincoln, Free Spirit also brings a ministry through puppets. Twelve 18-inch hand puppets are used to present Bible stories and dramatic sketches.

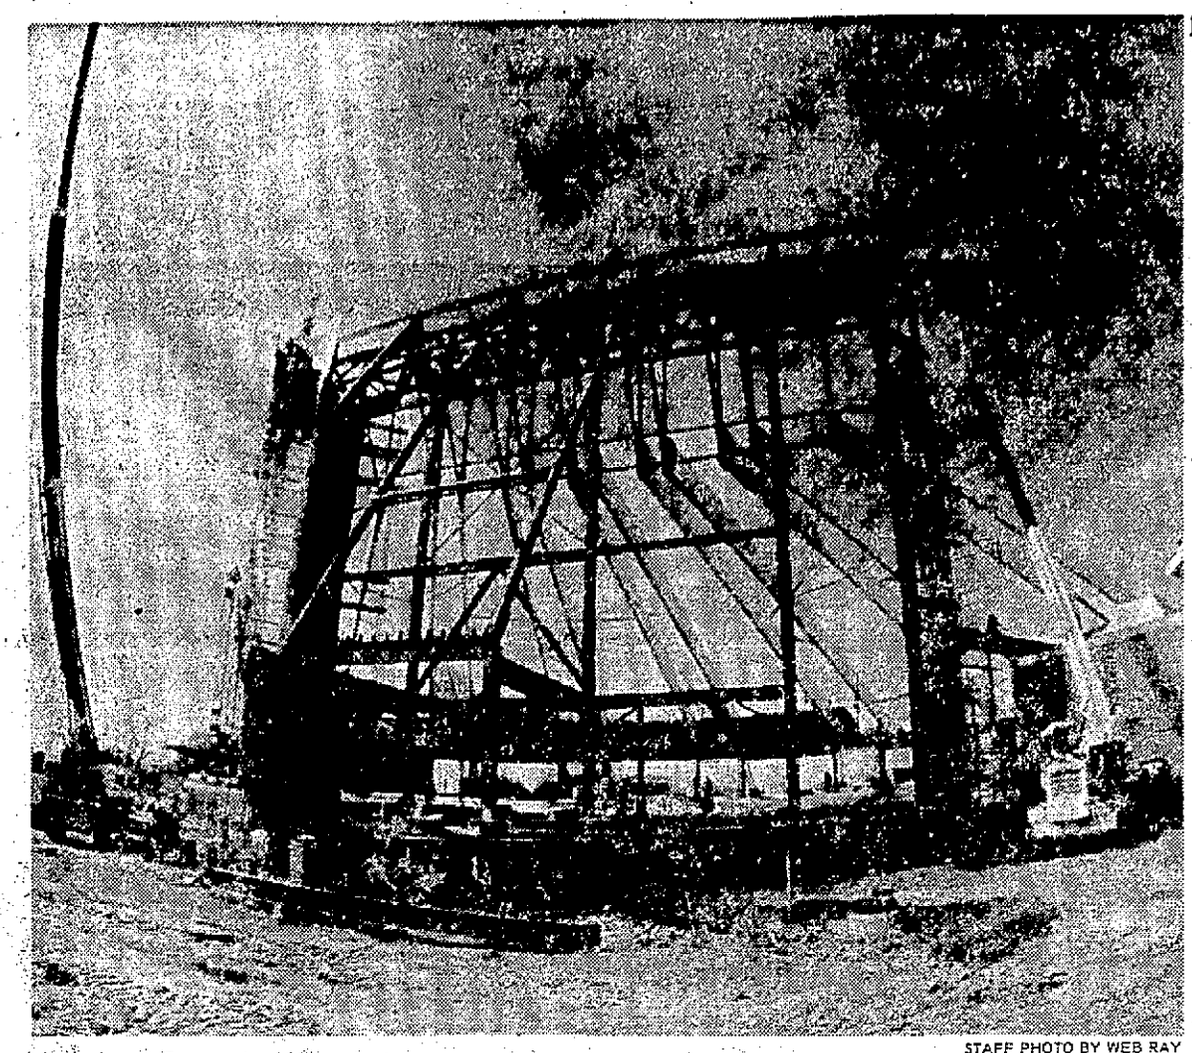

Cantata Scheduled

A Don Hustad cantata, "Celebration of Discipleship," will be given today at 4 p.m. at First Baptist Church, 14th and K Sts.

Hustad is the brother of First Baptist minister, the Rev. Wesley P. Hustad. Lowell Hagen will lead the First Baptist choir in the performance, which will be accompanied by a London symphonic orchestral tape.

Action Meet Planned

The Nebraska Assn. for Christian Action, Lincoln Chapter, will hold its November meeting at the State Federal Savings and Loan Bldg., 4000 So. 27th St. at 8 a.m. Friday. Topic for discussion will be "The Pro and Con of the Right to Die." The public is invited.

New Episcopal Bishop Defers Policy Decisions

The Very Rev. James D. Warner, bishop-elect of the Episcopal Diocese of Nebraska, says he will make no policy decisions for a year after taking office.

"I want to know what I'm dealing with" before setting diocesan policy, he said, including ordination of women to the priesthood.

After years of conflict and controversy within the church, a majority of bishops, priests and lay persons at the recent Episcopal General Convention in Minneapolis voted for admission of women to the priesthood, starting in 1977.

But some bishops have said they will not ordain women in spite of the vote. Bishops hold power of ordination in their dioceses.

"When the occasion comes," said Warner, "It will be prayed about and decided then, but at this point, I have to learn my job."

Warner explained that bishops-elect usually work for two or three years assisting in a diocese before they take over as bishop. "With an absentee bishop, I'm going to have to learn from the diocese — I have to learn with no bishop to teach me about Nebraska," he said.

In spite of this, Warner said he is excited about the new opportunities he says in Nebraska and grateful for the "fine priests and warm-hearted people" he has encountered so far.

He will be installed Nov. 30 at a 7 p.m. service in St. Cecilias Roman Catholic Cathedral in Omaha.

Churches Focus On Families At Thanksgiving

Nebraska churches will focus on the family during Thanksgiving week, according to Leonard L. Gregory of the Mormon Nebraska Stake.

"Our life-styles have changed considerably from our forefathers, but the dedication of the family unit will still be the key to our future," said Gov. J. J. Exon in supporting the effort.

Lincoln Fellowship of Churches Director Edith Svoboda added that churches will emphasize open communication between parents and children.

Movie of Christ Is The 'Real Story'

By Victor L. Simpson

Rome (AP) — "I'm not trying to convert anyone," says Franco Zeffirelli of his latest and certainly most controversial work, a television epic on the life of Christ portrayed as "Jewish from head to toe."

With an ecumenical cast and Christian and Jewish religious advisers, Zeffirelli and crew have spent $12 million in what is billed as an attempt to strip away the legend and separate the man Jesus from the myth.

"I'm offering what we think is the real story," said the Italian director, who shot to international fame with his "Taming of the Shrew" and "Romeo and Juliet."

Entitled "The Life of Jesus," Zeffirelli's epic will be televised next year in the United States (NBC), Britain and Italy as starters, serialized in six episodes concluding on Easter Sunday.

Zeffirelli hopes his epic breaks new ground in portrayals of Christ as seen in more than a dozen films made on his life ranging from "King of Kings" to "Jesus Christ Superstar."

This new version, for instance, pictures the Virgin Mary, played by Olivia Hussey, suffering labor pains. It also shows a graphic, bloody crucifixion scene.

"The crucifixion was a shattering, gruesome act, offensive to human life. And we have pictured it so," the director said.

To tell his story, Zeffirelli cast some of the world's leading film stars as disciples and in other supporting roles. They include Lord Laurence Olivier as Nicodemus, Rod Steiger as Pontius Pilate, Anne Bancroft as Mary Magdalene, Peter Ustinov as Herod the Great.

But for Christ, Zeffirelli cast a relatively unknown British actor, Robert Powell, who jumped from the rock musical "Tommy" and "Mahler" to the role.

Zeffirelli emphasizes that his version is an attempt to weave an historical tapestry, not simply a Christian legend, and therefore depicts Christ as Jewish, something obviously known but not always stressed.

"Christ was born and died an Orthodox Jew," said producer Vincenzo Labella, who produced another religious epic for TV on the life of Moses.

Zeffirelli's Christ is pictured as a victim of the Jewish establishment because he threatened the status quo, although actually put to death by the Romans.

Zeffirelli said the two rabbis who served as advisers had no complaints with the version, although some Roman Catholics have objected to the scene of Mary in labor. Zeffirelli is a Roman Catholic.

The man who played Christ, 31-year-old Powell, said he hopes they were successful in touching on areas ignored in previous versions.

"Christ did not go up elegantly onto the cross. He went up in pain. I hope we got this across."

The TV viewer will find the version as spectacular as the film company hopes it is innovative.

Carter Discussed His Beliefs More in Final Campaign Days

From News Wires

Plains, Ga. — Ten days before the presidential election, President-elect Jimmy Carter stood in the doorway of the Plains Baptist Church with his Bible in his hand and talked with reporters about religion and segregation by sex and race.

He said he doesn't believe the world was created in seven days; that the Bible is not sexist, and that his strong religious convictions are nothing for the American people to worry about.

Several months ago, Carter declined to discuss politics or national issues on the church grounds each Sunday. But this Sunday he seemed anxious to respond to reporters' questions about his personal beliefs and the separation of church and state; his southern Baptist faith and the way it is practiced in his small hometown.

"I can't explain it," he said when he was asked why his Bible class is restricted to men and the congregation he sits with is all white.

But he said things have changed in Plains since the height of the civil rights movement a decade ago, when his congregation voted against integrating its services because there were demonstrators trying to attract headlines.

Carter voted then to admit the blacks.

He was asked if blacks would be admitted if they sought membership in Plains Baptist Church today. Carter replied, "I presume so."

But last Sunday the church's board of deacons canceled services rather than admit a controversial black minister and three black companions. The Rev. Clennon King of nearby Albany, Ga., had applied for membership to test a 1965 resolution which bars blacks and "civil rights agitators."

The deacons also asked for the resignation of the church's pastor, the Rev. Bruce Edwards, who disagreed with their decision. Edwards has called for a Nov. 14 meeting for the 25-member congregation "to decide whether I will be pastor of this church."

Carter said he will attend the meeting but he refused to say how he would vote. Edwards called on him Thursday, Carter said. "We're working on the problem, he added.

At the earlier press conference a reporter asked Carter if he believed in the literal word of the Bible — that sin originated with a serpent in the Garden of Eden.

"I can't disavow it," he replied. "I have no way of knowing."

Then, grinning, he said, "I don't believe the earth has four corners — that it's square," as described in the Bible.

"The Bible is obviously written in allegories," he said. Then, breaking with the fundamentalist tradition, he added, "I don't believe that many Christians today believe that the earth was created in seven days."

He explained that the Bible may be referring to seven stages "or periods of time" instead of 24-hour days.

He was asked if he believes, as the Bible teaches, that woman was created from a rib of Adam.

Carter responded that the reference to "man" in the Bible "was obviously referring to mankind, and not meant to discriminate against women."

Carter said Christ was "committed on an equal basis to women," and added: "Whether God created man first or woman first is not something I try to explain."

A European radio reporter said many Europeans are puzzled about his religion.

"It's not just Europe," Carter replied. "I think there's nothing to be frightened of. It's a religion that's accepted by millions in this country."

He also said he knows of "no denomination on earth that has a stronger dedication to the separation of church and state than the Baptist church."

Aces Team Captain

Today's exciting hands were played in a Vanderbilt Knockout tournament between The Aces and a team headed by Bud Reinhold of Chicago. Match your opening leads with those made in the match and see if you can avoid disaster.

Question No. 1: You are South and hold:

♠ A
♥ K Q J 7 4
♦ J 3
♣ K Q 10 8 5

11/4-A

What do you lead after?

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1♦	1♥
Pass	2♥	2♠	4♥
5♦	Dbl.	All pass

Answer: The ace of spades is a loser. Any other lead will do unless you hold your cards so that declarer can see them. The entire hand:

11/4-B

	NORTH
	♠ Q 10 8 5
	♥ A 9 8
	♣ 9 6 4 2
WEST		EAST
♠ 9 4 3		♠ K J 7 6 2
♥ 10 6 5 3 2		♥ —

	SOUTH
	♥ K Q J 7 4
	♣ K Q 10 8 5

In the match, Ace Bob Wolff opened the ace of spades with hopes of reaching partner's hand for a quick ruff. The ace of spades cashed, but the heart ace didn't. Declarer (Dick Katz of Los Angeles) ruffed the heart, drew trumps and had no problem in playing the spade suit to bring in the doubled game contract. In the replay, The Aces defended four hearts doubled by North-South, beat it one trick and lost a net of 450 points on the deal.

Question No. 2: You are South and hold:

11/4-C

♠ 10 8 7 5
♥ K Q 6 4
♣ 10 8 6 3

What do you lead after?

West	North	East	South
1♦	Pass	3♣	Pass
3♥	Pass	4♣	Pass
4♦	Pass	5♣	Pass
6♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Answer: A heart is a winner; all other leads pay off to a loser. The entire hand:

	NORTH	11/4-D
	♠ K J 6 4
	♥ A 3
	♦ 10 9 8 5 4

	SOUTH
	♠ 10 8 7 5
	♥ K Q 6 4
	♣ 10 6 3

In the match, Dick Katz led a spade and Bob Wolff ran off with the unmakable slam. Naturally, he refused the spade finesse and took the first 12 tricks via seven clubs, four diamonds and a spade. The last trick was conceded sheepishly, and the slam was chalked up for a large Aces gain (a routine no-trump game was the limit in the replay).

Dear Mr. Corn:
In the Sequence:

Opener	Responder
1♦	1♠
1 NT	3♠

Why should opener ever raise since he has already shown a minimum hand?

Minimum-Minimus, Merrick, N.Y.

Answer: Because there are different types of minimums. Responder's jump to three spades is invitational and asks opener to differentiate between a suitable minimum or one that is unsuitable for game. For example, opener would probably pass with hand "A", but should definitely bid four spades with hand "B".

"A"	"B"	9/5-A
♠ 7	♠ K 7
♥ Q J 8 3	♥ Q 8 3
♦ K Q 10 9 8	♦ K Q 10 9 8
♣ K J 10	♣ K J 10

Dear Mr. Corn:
What was the result of the "Bridge Match of the Century" between Culbertson and Lenz?

Missing Records, Knoxville

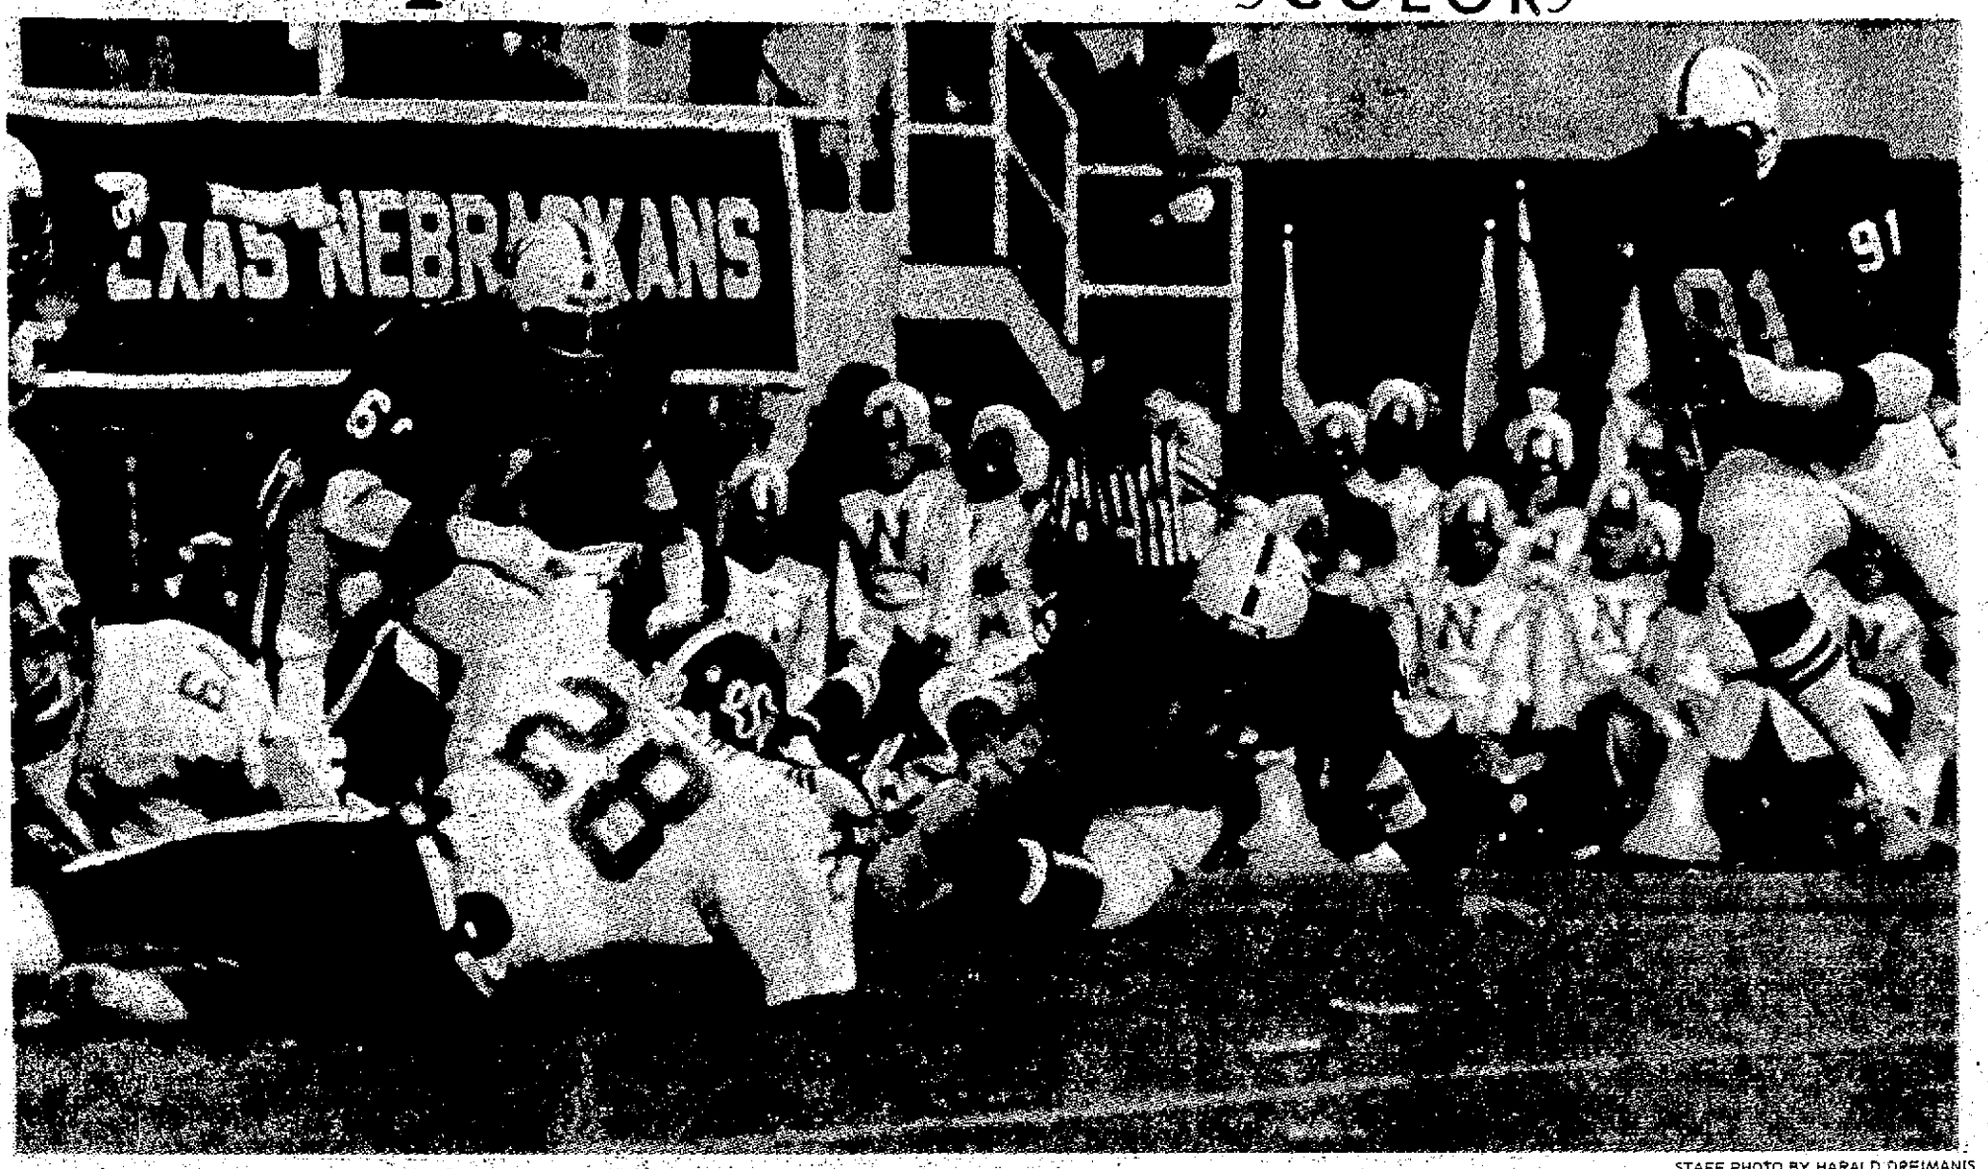

Answer: One hundred and fifty rubbers were played. Culbertson won 122,925 points to 113,945 and 77 rubbers to 73. Distribution of high cards was virtually even.

NU Hopes Rise as Huskers Deflate OSU

A fumble by the Cowboys' Skip Taylor (28) late in the second quarter on the NU 5 was good news for Nebraska. Three Husker Black Shirts — Jeff Pullen (66), Kerry Weinmaster (42) and Ron Pruitt (91) — go after the ball, but Pullen recovers.

For 41 minutes of action Saturday afternoon, Nebraska's Big Red football fans wondered if the gas in their helium-filled balloons would last until the Cornhuskers scored.

Finally, when a touchdown came, the fans wondered if the Huskers would have enough gas left to hold off the Oklahoma State Cowboys.

They did. Barely. The 14-10 Husker victory was another typical Nebraska-Oklahoma State matchup — a heart-throbing struggle that was a hard-fought, physical battle. And close to the end.

Coupled with a 16-7 Missouri win over Colorado, Nebraska is alone atop the Big Eight standings. The Huskers, OSU and Colorado were tied for the lead with one loss. Now five teams — all but the two Kansas schools — are deadlocked for second place with two defeats.

Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne's troops had to fight from behind twice before claiming the triumph. And the 41 minutes the fans faithfully held on to those balloons was the longest wait in eight years to celebrate a score.

"I was really pleased the way the kids fought back in the second half," Osborne said with a sigh of relief. "We got off to a great start. But we took the momentum away from ourselves with mistakes and turnovers."

Nebraska took the opening kickoff and made three first downs on as many plays, starting with an 18-yard pass from quarterback Vince Ferragamo to split end Bobby Thomas.

"Coach Osborne made that decision and it was a great call," Ferragamo said. "We usually open up with a running play and they were bunched up to stop the run."

"We have great confidence in our passing game," Osborne echoed. "Oklahoma State has a fine defense against the run. We wanted to loosen them up. And we did. But then we killed ourselves with mistakes. The only difference between this and the Missouri loss was the fact that Oklahoma State made some errors too."

Nebraska made seven first downs on its first two possessions, yet failed to tally a point. The first drive ended with a pass interception, the second at the OSU two yardline on a Thomas fumble following a 23-yard reception.

In all, the Huskers had the ball five times in the first half. They were five-for-five in the error department — two fumbles, a pass interception and two clipping penalties.

In the second quarter, Oklahoma State had the ball for 27 offensive plays, Nebraska just nine.

The Cowboys' devastating ground game got in gear late in the first quarter. OSU ran off 18 straight plays. Ten of them gained either four, five or six yards. Nebraska's Black Shirt defense finally held on a fourth-and-one play at the 13, but three plays later, the Huskers fumbled the ball back again.

This time, Oklahoma State settled for a 37-yard field goal by Abby Daigle to take a 3-0 lead.

The Cowboys threatened to increase their first-half advantage. They ran 16 more plays on the next possession — none for more than nine yards — getting to the Nebraska three in the closing seconds before intermission.

Skeeter Bites Bugged Cowboys All Day

By Dave Sittler

Praise the Lord and pass the ball to Chuck Malito.

That was the ammunition Nebraska used at Memorial Stadium Saturday afternoon to uncork a staggering offense and stage a dramatic, white-knuckle 14-10 comeback win over Oklahoma State.

Malito, Nebraska's senior split end who is a deeply religious young man, had the sellout congregation of 76,272 Nebraska fans singing his praises as he came up with clutch catch after clutch catch.

With quarterback Vince Ferragamo throwing the bullets, Malito time and again sneaked through enemy defensive lines to snare four passes good for 80 yards and one touchdown.

The scoring play was a 34-yard work of art. Malito, who had beaten the OSU defender, latched onto the aerial over his right shoulder deep in the right corner of the end zone with 4:02 left in the third quarter.

"I knew I was going to catch up with it (the ball)," said Malito, who is nicknamed Skeeter because of his spindly stature, "but I didn't know if it would be in the end zone or the bleachers."

Malito said the play, which saw him make a simple move inside and then blow to the outside past the defender, was just a routine move.

"It was a takeoff pass," Malito said. "We finish every practice with Vince throwing us at least four or five of those takeoffs on each side of the field."

Malito said a halftime conversation involving himself, fellow split end Bobby Thomas and Nebraska receivers coach Jerry Moore set up the scoring bomb.

"We just felt that Oklahoma State is such a run-oriented team on offense that their defense starts thinking the same way," Malito explained. "We knew we could blow right by them."

Malito, who had some ups and downs his first three years at Nebraska, credited his newfound faith as the major contributing factor to what has been a fine senior season.

"I feel so much better this year because I know I'm walking with the Lord and doing things for him," the Lakewood, Colo., native said. "I've finally found myself and my concentration is so much better."

Malito's joy was shared by a Nebraska locker-room scene that was about as emotional and spirited as any in recent seasons. Hugging, backslaps, dancing and shouts of glee dominated the Big Red dressing room.

An obviously relieved Coach Tom Osborne greeted the press with a sigh and said: "That was rather tight."

The Husker boss, who made the rounds congratulating his players, admitted the outcome of the Big Eight battle could have gone either way.

"I was scared to death they were going to give the ball to Miller (halfback Terry) and he would pop one," Osborne said of the exciting finish. "There were times where it looked like we were going to throw the game away."

Noting he was displeased with Nebraska's tackling effort in the first half and the offense's inability to score, Osborne shouldered much of the blame.

"I don't think I adjusted well when we were having trouble running the ball," Osborne said.

When one reporter asked Osborne if he is surprised that Nebraska has such great success throwing the ball, the Husker boss said "We think we can pass on anybody."

To a man, the Nebraska coaches and team praised Oklahoma State's running backs and offensive line, which gained 291 yards rushing.

"Their backs start as quick as any I've seen," Osborne said.

Said defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin: "we hadn't faced the veer offense for a couple of years and that bothered us. And they came up with some blocking assignments we didn't expect."

Defensive tackle Ron Pruitt labeled Terry Miller "the best running back I've seen this season. I'd compare him with Joe Washington (Oklahoma's all-American last year)," Puritt continued.

"I have a lot of respect for Miller," Puritt said. "He was hurting out there and we were giving him some great shots. But he kept coming back. He knew it was a championship game."

Reflecting on the Big Eight Conference race which saw the Cornhuskers enter Saturday's game tied for first with Colorado and Oklahoma State, Osborne said he thought Nebraska has the roughest road to the conference title.

"I think we had the toughest schedule going into today's game," Osborne said. "To win the Big Eight, it's going to take a good team that has to stay healthy and have a little luck. We still have two tough games with Iowa State and Oklahoma."

Talking on a radio show after the wild contest, Kiffin was passing out good news to Nebraska listeners.

"People keep asking me if we are going to the Orange Bowl," Kiffin said. "You bet we're going. These kids are great."

Asked if he knew Missouri had whipped Colorado, Kiffin replied: "I'm so tired and excited right now I don't care a bit about Missouri. Are you sure we won? Is the game really over? I just want to enjoy this one right now."

Amen, coach!

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — All Purdue's Boilermakers wanted Saturday was to regain their respectability.

Instead, they shocked the college football world with the biggest upset of the season — a 16-14 thriller over No. 1 ranked Michigan on Rock Supan's 23-yard field goal with 4:20 left to play.

A week ago, Purdue was blasted at Michigan State, 45-13 for its third consecutive loss in what Coach Alex Agase called a "lousy" performance.

This past Monday the MSU embarassment had been forgotten.

"We won't have any problems getting our players 'up' for Michigan," Agase said Monday. "We're out to regain our respectability."

The "intensity" which was missing in the Michigan State game was apparent from the opening whistle Saturday and even when Michigan grabbed a 14-13 lead in the third period, none of the more than 57,000 fans went home. A tense feeling of excitement prevailed in Ross-Ade Stadium. The home fans were not disappointed.

"We couldn't have gained back our respect any better than by beating the No. 1 team," said a grinning and perspiring Agase in the jubilant and steaming dressing room. "This is the happiest moment of my lifetime. It was a great, great team win."

Although he refused to single out any one player, Agase called veteran tailback Scott Dierking, who scored Purdue's two touchdowns, "still the best back in this Big Ten Conference, one of the best in the country."

"We came to get our respect back," Agase said. "We took a step backward last week but went 99 steps forward Saturday. Thank God our guys believed in themselves and the things they're doing. I wouldn't trade this win for anything."

Dierking said Purdue "had to win the game for Coach Agase. He's the greatest guy I've ever been associated with." Supan said he didn't have time to get nervous before his game winning field goal, his fifth of the season. "I just went out and kicked the ball, and the feeling I had was the best in my life," Supan said.

The loss wrecked Michigan's bid for an unbeaten season and the 5-1 Wolverines now may have to beat Ohio State in their season finale Nov. 20 to qualify for the Rose Bowl.

It was the first time since 1969 that the Wolverines lost to a conference rival other than Ohio State and the first time in their last eight meetings that Purdue has beat Michigan.

Dierking, who missed the last two and one-half games with a sprained ankle, scored two touchdowns and gained 162 yards in a school record 38 carries.

Michigan, fighting the clock, had one more shot at pulling the game out but the drive fizzled on the Purdue 19 and with 14 seconds left, Wood missed a 37-yard field goal attempt.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Steve Pisarkiewicz became Missouri's all-time passing leader Saturday, but Pete Woods replaced him amid a savage defensive struggle and directed the Tigers to nine fourth-quarter points and a 16-7 victory over Colorado.

The loss was Colorado's second in Big Eight competition and knocked the 14th-ranked Buffaloes out of a first-place tie with Nebraska, which defeated Oklahoma State for sole possession of the top spot.

After exchanging first quarter touchdowns, the two Big Eight powers battled scoreless through the next two periods. Woods, coming in with three minutes remaining in the fourth quarter, zipped the Tigers' 73-yard in 10 plays for the go-ahead touchdown.

Colorado appeared to have halted the drive, but a pass interference on Odis McKinney on fourth and goal revitalized the drive and Curtis Brown plunged over from the one with 12:28 remaining in the game.

Missouri cornerback Rob Fitzgerald intercepted Jeff Austin's pass on the next play and Woods, with an 26-yard pass play to Kellen Winslow, brought the Tigers to the five. Three plays later, Tim Gibbons booted a nineteen-yard field goal.

Colorado immediately marched downfield but was halted on another turnover, when the intended receiver Billy Waddy tipped the ball into Jim Leavitt's hands.

Colorado, with less than one minute to play, drove to the two yard line but was stopped on fourth down.

Although choked with disappointment over losing to the Tigers, 16-7, and being knocked out of a first-place tie in the Big Eight, Colorado coach Bill Mallory was magnanimous.

"It was a typical good, clean, hard-fought Big Eight football game," he said. "They wanted it and we did, too. We were just beaten today."

"It was obvious we couldn't get moving on offense," Onofrio said concerning his quarterback change. "Steve had played almost three whole quarters and couldn't get anything going. With Steve, their defense was thinking primarily of pass. But with Pete came the hope of doing some other things. They didn't rush so much."

"It was a smart move to put Pete in," Pisarkiewicz agreed. "No one wants to come out but we weren't moving the ball and it was a key point in the game. I was a little rusty."

"I wanted to play just as much as I wanted to see Steve do well," said Woods. "But I knew if I came in it would be under adverse conditions."

Holding the 14th ranked Buffs to their lowest point total of the year delighted and somewhat surprised the Missouri defenders.

"As a team I would say that this was by far our best defensive effort," said tackle Don Cole. "We had a lot more gang-tackling than last week. Everyone was working together well."

Hastings — Dave Dirrim's 44-yard punt return and his fabulous catch on a 35-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Louis Myers helped the Hastings Broncos top the Nebraska Wesleyan Plainsmen 24-7 here Saturday afternoon and deadlock the two teams for the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title.

The loss, Wesleyan's first in its last six games, kept the Plainsmen from finishing the NIAC season undefeated and tied the Broncos and NWU at 4-1. Midland also gained a share of the title by beating Concordia 55-0 Saturday.

"It was just one of those nightmares you hope not to have," said NWU coach Harold Chaffee. "We had them beat and then gave up six turnovers."

Wesleyan jumped to an early lead when the Plainsmen capitalized on a Hastings fumble at the Bronco 34-yard line. Eight plays later NWU Quarterback Dan Klaus dove in from the one-yard line and NWU led 7-0.

Shortly after this Dirrim returned a punt 44 yards to the NWU 22, and a facemask penalty against the Plainsmen moved the ball to their 11-yard line, as the time quickly turned.

Two plays later quarterback Myers hit Steve Harms on 10-yard pass to tie the game at 7-7 with 5:33 left in the first quarter.

"I think that they were down after we scored on our first possession, but that punt return and touchdown really pepped them up and then we were down," said Klaus.

The Plainsmen bounced back with Byron Stallworth running nine straight plays, carrying the ball from the NWU 27 to the Bronco 17. But two tackles behind the line by Webster VanValkenberg and Dale Ocker stalled the Plainsmen's drive. NWU kicker Mike Burcham then failed on a 32-yard field goal attempt with 13:52 in the second quarter.

Hastings' Steve Wendell succeeded on a 32-yard field goal kick after Scott Sinner picked off a halfback pass by Stallworth, and the Broncos took a 10-7 lead.

Brad Tophoj then intercepted a pass on NWU's next possession at the Wesleyan 35-yard line, to set up the Bronco's next score.

On the first play after the interception Myers threw to Dirrim in the endzone and the 6-4, 188-pound senior, stretched to make the reception and put Hastings ahead 17-7 at the half.

"I didn't think I was going to catch the ball, but I just leaped for it," said Dirrim. "And when I got it, it knocked the wind out of me."

Wesleyan suffered through six fumbles, losing two, and two more interceptions in the second half, with Tophoj getting his second of the game and linebacker Jack Blum picking one off. Hastings intercepted five passes last week against Doane.

Bronco halfback Ted Schroeder iced the game with a 49-yard touchdown run late in the final quarter.

"We were playing without our top rusher, Jim Doty (leg injury) and our number one linebacker Jim Weber, but the whole team came together and made up the difference," said Hastings coach Wendell Maupin, who has already posted his best season in five years.

"I think the fact we were picked to finish last in the conference gave us the enthusiasm we needed," said Maupin, whose team is now 6-3. Hastings finishes the season at Sterling, Kan., Saturday.

"We didn't make any changes in the second half, but we told our players the difference was going to be a third place finish in the conference or a tie for the title," said Maupin. "I think they got the message, because we just beat them one on one."

"Losing our quarterback Myers in the third quarter was another sign of just how good we are all-around," said Maupin. "It shows we don't rely on individuals but rather the complete unit we've had all season."

Stallworth, who finished the game with 111 yards on 24 carries, gained just 15 yards in the second half, while NWU could manage just 68 yards total offense and three first downs in the second half. This was the first time in six games Stallworth failed to score.

"They got gassed up after that punt return and we lost control of the game, when we should have been putting it away," said Chaffee.

"This was one of the few games this year we scored first and I'm not sure but maybe that had something to do with us letting down," Chaffee said. Wesleyan closed the season 6-3.

O. Royals Tab Sullivan

Omaha (AP) — General Manager Bill Gorman said Friday John Sullivan will manage the Omaha Royals of the American Association in 1977.

Sullivan, a catcher, played for Omaha in 1970. Remaining in the Kansas City system, he managed the Royals' Rookie League team at Kingsport, Tenn., in 1973.

He has managed Kansas City's Waterloo, Iowa, team in the Class A Midwest League the last three seasons.

Iowa State Gymnasts Win

By Ryly Jane Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Iowa State won the Big Eight Invitational gymnastics team title at the NU Sports Center, but only one Cyclone won an individual event title during the Saturday evening competition.

Mark Tripple, who won the vaulting title in the ISU-NU dual meet two weeks ago, won the title with vaults scoring 9.4 and 9.3.

Tripple's second vault involved a cartwheel back with a full flip.

"I think potentially it's a 9.5 vault," Tripple said. "But my legs were loose and I'm sure it was a form deduction. This is an early meet, and we know we have certain potential. We just keep trying to keep the progression positive."

Nebraska gymnasts collected three individual titles. Senior Gary Jeurink won the high bar title with an 18.150. His evening performance was a 9.15 in the optionals. Jeurink also was second in the vaulting.

"We all worked for this weekend. If we could have been more consistent, it would have helped," Jeurink said. "But now we have a list of things to work on. This was the first meet with the new compulsories." After the Olympics were over, a new set of compulsories were issued for the 1980 Games, which will be used by the NCAA in competition.

Jeurink was performing with a sprained thumb, and freshman teammate Mark Williams had a dislocated thumb.

"Mark told me he had hurt his thumb and I asked him what he wanted to do this morning. He said, 'Oh, maybe just put a little tape on it and I'll worry about it when I get to the high bar.' That really shows what a competitor he is," NU coach Francis Allen said. Williams flew off the bar at one point in his routine, but promptly finished his routine with a difficult dismount.

ISU coach Ed Gagnier was pleased with the performance of his team, which won Saturday with a score of 410.30. Nebraska was second with a score of 400.10 and Oklahoma was third with a 399.95.

"I was satisfied. Both Nebraska and Oklahoma were missing their top performers, and they're worth at least 10 points to their teams, so I figured we'd need to win by at least that much to really know where we are," Gagnier said. NU's Larry Gerard and OU's Bart Connor were on a tour with a national team in China and missed the meet.

Although his team scored a convincing win, Gagnier was disappointed that defending NCAA still rings champion Doug Woods didn't win his specialty. NU's Kurt Mackie bested him with a score of 17.950 and an optional score of 9.05.

"Doug made a foolish attempt at something that's not even in his routine," Gagnier said. "The mood wasn't right and I think he was just playing games instead of trying to win the event. After the team title is finished, I sometimes become lax in discipline and allow more freedom. Doug just made a wrong decision. I hope it will make him a better gymnast for having made a mistake. Now he can learn from it."

Allen also admitted to a possible error in judgment. Allen assigned freshman Jody Raymond to the all-around although he can't compete in the vault or floor exercise and decided to use Jeurink only in his strongest events.

"You try to outguess and sometimes you're wrong," Allen said. "We would have been better off with Jeurink. We'll switch back to him for the Windy City," referring to the Huskers' next meet Nov. 29-30 in Chicago.

Other individual winners were Nebraska senior Duane West in the floor exercise with an 18.850 total, for the best total of the all individual titles. Oklahoma's Garry Beasley won the pommel horse with an 18.450 total and teammate Mike Wilson won the parallel bars with a 17.900 total.

Tiger Taylor, who won the all-around title during the morning compulsories, was second in floor exercise and third in vaulting and parallel bars. He qualified for the individual competition in all six events.

N-Michigan Hits UNO, 82-7

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Defending NCAA Division II national champion Northern Michigan pounded out an 82-7 football victory over Nebaska at Omaha Saturday night.

Three players scored twice for Northern Michigan and five others hit for touchdowns.

Steve Mariucci scored twice on short runs and passed for another TD. Ricky Jackson ran over twice from the 3-yard line and Reggie Webster also scored twice on plunges.

Northern Michigan, which has now won 18 in a row, scored in every period including a 39-yard scoring pass in the last 30 seconds.

Kearney State Trips Foe, 20-9

PITTSBURG, Kan. (AP) — Safety Marlin Johnson intercepted two Pittsburg passes to help Kearney State to a 20-9 football victory Saturday night.

The interceptions, along with two others, helped to blunt two Pittsburg drives and set up the go-ahead touchdown scored by slotback Jeff Bolin on a 34-yard run in the second period.

Kearney also marked up two field goals by Paul Waggoner, one for 30 and one for 36 yards, and a 3-yard touchdown leap by tailback Gregg Baker.

Pittsburg's lone touchdown came in the second quarter on a 1-yard run by Dale Dellasega.

Kearney is 7-1 for the season and 4-1 in the Central States Conference. Pittsburg is 3-5-1 and 1-4 in the conference.

Seward — Midland defeated Concordia 55-0 here Saturday to earn for itself a share of the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference football championship.

Hastings defeated Nebraska Wesleyan 24-7 in another Saturday contest to establish a three-way deadlock between Midland, NWU and Hastings. Each team ended the conference schedule with 4-1 records.

UNO Corrals Harrier Win

YANKTON, S.D. (AP) — The University of Nebraska-Omaha won its maiden run of the North Central Conference cross country competition here Saturday.

UN-O won the meet with 65 points, followed by defending champion South Dakota State University with 67 points.

Team Results

University of Nebraska-Omaha 65, South Dakota State 67, Mankato State 70, Northern Iowa 73, University of South Dakota 97, North Dakota State 128, Augustana 185, University of North Dakota 219, Morningside 280.

Individual Results

1. Charlie Cvrk, USD, 31:19; 2. Brad Lakin, UN-O, 31:31; 3. Lane Weiker, Mankato; 4. Mike Bills, SDSU; 5. Lee Anderson, Mankato; 6. Bob Friedman, Northern Iowa; 7. Mark Bills, SDSU; 8. Dave Hodgens, UN O; 9. Dan O'Brien, USD; 10. Mike Bollmann, NDSU.

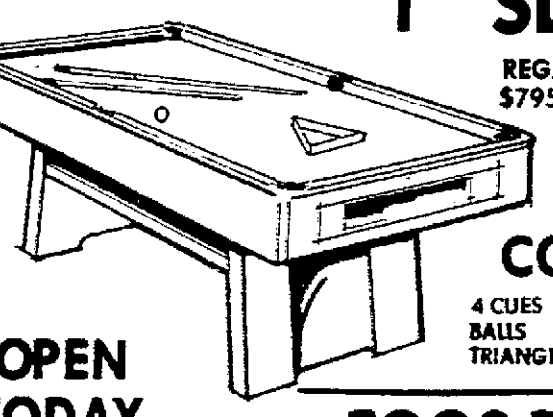

Kearney Spikers Stay Undefeated

Kearney remained undefeated for the year while successfully defending its Nebraska Small College Women's volleyball championship Saturday at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Kearney stopped host Wesleyan 15-5, 15-10 in the semifinals and then downed Concordia 15-4, 15-0.

In the other semifinals game Concordia downed Wayne State 15-7, 15-12. In the consolation finals, Wayne defeated Wesleyan 15-12, 15-11.

I May Be Wrong

By Virgil Parker

Football Programs

If you've been buying the "official" University of Nebraska football program the past couple of seasons, you've noticed the addition of many background stories on the gridiron game.

Writers from all over the country have done articles on the origin of the game; the changes in equipment since the turn of the century; offensive and defensive strategy; and the role and duties of players at various positions on a team.

The idea for adding such stories to college programs acorss the country — presumably to make the program a more attractive buy, giving the fan something to peruse while waiting for the game to get underway — was the brainchild of Touchdown Publications of San Francisco.

Athletic departments had long been able to sell a program which contained little more than a roster and lineups, pictures of the players and coaches, maybe a little story about the two schools involved in the game and a bunch of ads.

But along came cut-rate competitors. Student newspapers started publishing special editions with the lineups and selling them for a dime. Thus the desire to upgrade the product. At Nebraska, the profit from the more expensive official program goes to bolster the athletic scholarship fund.

Saturday's Goof

Frankly, I was flattered when the San Francisco folks requested "a technical article on the duties and responsibilities of a defensive cornerback" which would appear in the nation's college programs.

The article should be supported, they suggested, by diagrams which would show how a cornerback "reads" the offense and thus knows whether to protect against the pass or come up to support against the run.

Other diagrams would show what his basic coverage responsibilities are on sideline, hook, crossing and fly patterns by the opposing split end.

The story appeared in the Oklahoma State program Saturday — just as it did in stadiums all over the nation — without the diagrams!

Can you imagine? ". . . falls back into the 'hook' zone. See No. 1." Then, there was a big No. 1. Nothing more. Later the article said, "Some of the other major coverage problems a cornerback regularly faces include:" And that was followed by the numbers No. 3, No. 4, No. 5, No. 6 and No. 7.

Golf In December

Golf and football don't often mix for Nebraskans. By the time the gridiron season gets under way, it's too darn cold to get out on the links.

But if you're headed to Hawaii, don't put your sticks away for the winter. Take 'em along. Lincoln Tour and Travel has three big planeloads headed for the islands of Maui before moving over to Honolulu for the game.

I'm on one, so guess who got nominated to organize a one-day golf tournament for Wed., Dec. 1. Somebody with a short name had better win. By the time we get "Lincoln Journal and Star Newspapers/Lincoln Tour and Travel Hawaiian Football Open Golf Tournament" on the trophy, there won't be much room left.

The Royal Kaanapali Golf Course will make a super site, I'm told. Water comes into play on many of the holes with 96 sand traps thrown in for good measure.

The back nine keeps winding higher and higher, affording a marvelous view of the ocean. If you're going to be on Maui that day, give me a call. We'll get all the tee times together and add golf to the list of memories you'll bring back from the trip.

Chadron Tops Panhandle

GOODWELL, Okla. (AP) — Chadron gained 313 passing yards to defeat Panhandle A&M 23-8 Saturday.

Brad Fults tossed 16 yards to Dale Drahota for the first score after Chad Emanuel had kicked a first quarter 37-yard field goal.

John Burns, who turned over quarterbacking to Fults after suffering a thumb injury, ran over the second touchdown from the 1-yard line and linebacker Kent Woodhead intercepted a Panhandle pass for a 20 yard score.

Panhandle notched one touchdown in the second period on a 36-yard run by Robert Blue.

Chadron ended its season with a 4-6 record.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Quarterback Wayne Stanley and Buddy Hardeman directed Iowa State to three quick touchdowns in the second quarter, and the Cyclones went on to defeat Kansas, 31-17, Saturday in a Big Eight conference football clash.

Hardeman fired a 12-yard pass to Luther Blue in the left corner of the end zone with 8:37 left in the half to give Iowa State a 7-3 lead, then Stanley crossed the goal line on an 11-yard scamper moments later, following a Kansas fumble.

Iowa State, alternating Stanley and Hardeman, moved the ball freely in the second half as well, but was unable to get on the board again until Scott Kollman booted a 27-yard field goal with 2:47 left.

With Iowa State players talking of bowl games and their upcoming game with Nebraska, Iowa State coach Earle Bruce praised his offensive line, his team captains and the maturity of senior quarterback Stanley.

"He keeps our team in gear," Bruce said of Stanley, who is at the controls most of the game Saturday.

OU's Lott Impresses Switzer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — "Thomas Lott looked like the best wishbone quarterback I have ever seen," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said Saturday after his Sooners trounced Kansas State, 49-20

"He got 195 yards rushing, three touchdowns and he executed the option well," the beaming coach said of the fleet sophomore.

Lott's 195 yards was the most ever racked up rushing by any Oklahoma quarterback, but Lott didn't know it until the game was over.

"I wasn't aware I had that many yards until Coach Switzer told me at the end of the game," Lott said. "You don't worry about that. You're just thankful to win the game.

"I kept the ball several times today when I could have pitched, but I wanted to hold down the errors. Our offensive line played great today."

Switzer and Lott both agreed that Oklahoma will have to put out extra effort the final two games of the season. OU goes against Missouri next Saturday and Nebraska Nov 26.

And Switzer noted that his squad was now in a five-way tie for second place in the Big Eight Conference.

"This gives us the opportunity to take it down to the finish playing Nebraska," he said. "Of course, we have a great challenge. We play the two best teams in the Big Eight Conference. I would rather have it that way than any other. If we do do it (win the title), I want to do it against Nebraska."

Two of Lott's touchdowns came in the second half after the Wildcats, led by the passing of sophomore quarterback Wendell Henrikson, wiped out big deficits to trail only 28-20 midway in the third period.

Lott pulled the Sooners ahead, 35-20, at the end of the third period on an 11-yard touchdown run. He had runs of 12 and 17 yards in the drive. The San Antonio, Tex., product, whose second quarter touchdown gave Oklahoma a 28-7 lead, got his third touchdown from three yards out early in the final period to put the game out of reach.

The victory, which ended a two-game Sooner losing streak—their longest since 1970—left Oklahoma with a 6-2-1 over-all record and a 4-2 mark in the Big Eight. Oklahoma is now in a five-way tie for second place in the conference and could gain a share of the title with wins over Missouri and Nebraska.

Kansas State dropped its eighth straight game despite Henrikson's passing for 283 yards—the biggest Wildcat aerial total since Dennis Morrison was quarterback in 1971.

Halfback Horace Ivory also scored three touchdowns in the rout.

Terry Miller (43) versus Clete Pillen (61). It was a star-studded confrontation repeated many times during Saturday's thriller. Miller's on the go (1) but Tony Samuel (98) is closing in. It looks as if Samuel has the OSU swifty in range as Pillen fights off (2) Bruce Blankenship (83) while being ignored by Ron Baker (66). Pillen sheds the blocker, attacks (3) and makes a solid hit (4). The tackle was one of 30 recorded by the NU linebacker who counted 14 unassisted stops among his total. Miller's short gain was part of his 149 yards rushing.

When you're after Terry Miller (43) you often have to take what you can get. Clete Pillen (61) uses a thin shred of Miller's jersey to bulldog the Cowboy star to the artificial turf.

Just Doing His Job Says Modest Pillen of Effort

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

You couldn't get Clete Pillen to blow his own horn if you jammed a trumpet mouthpiece down his throat.

Of course, trying that with the 6-0, 206-pound linebacker is not advised. Especially after the rugged performance he turned in Saturday against Oklahoma State.

Pillen was credited with a staggering 30 tackles. Fourteen of the stops were unassisted against the Pokes while he pitched in with another 16 assists.

"You can't do it without everybody else's help," Pillen said of his effort. "One person does not make or break a team."

Modest Man

The modest Pillen approach is nothing new for the soft-spoken farm boy from Monroe. It's his nature and probably has a lot to say about why his teammates elected him co-captain this season.

"Everybody doing their job, that's our philosophy on defense," Pillen continued. "I was just trying to do my job."

He did his job so well that Pillen should be paid time and a half for overtime.

Clete Pillen
30 Tackles

Big games are nothing new for the Cornhusker walk-on. He was voted National Defensive Player of the Week last season by the Associated Press for his 27-tackle output against Oklahoma.

Nebraska linebacker coach Bill Myles praised Pillen, noting, "Clete did a terrific job.

"Against the veer, the linebackers are very important," Myles said. "They have to be conscious of the backs, the quarterback and the pitch man. If the linebacker overplays or if he just reacts to the play too quickly you can find yourself in trouble."

Veer Headache

Pillen acknowledged the Oklahoma State veer gave Nebraska headaches all afternoon.

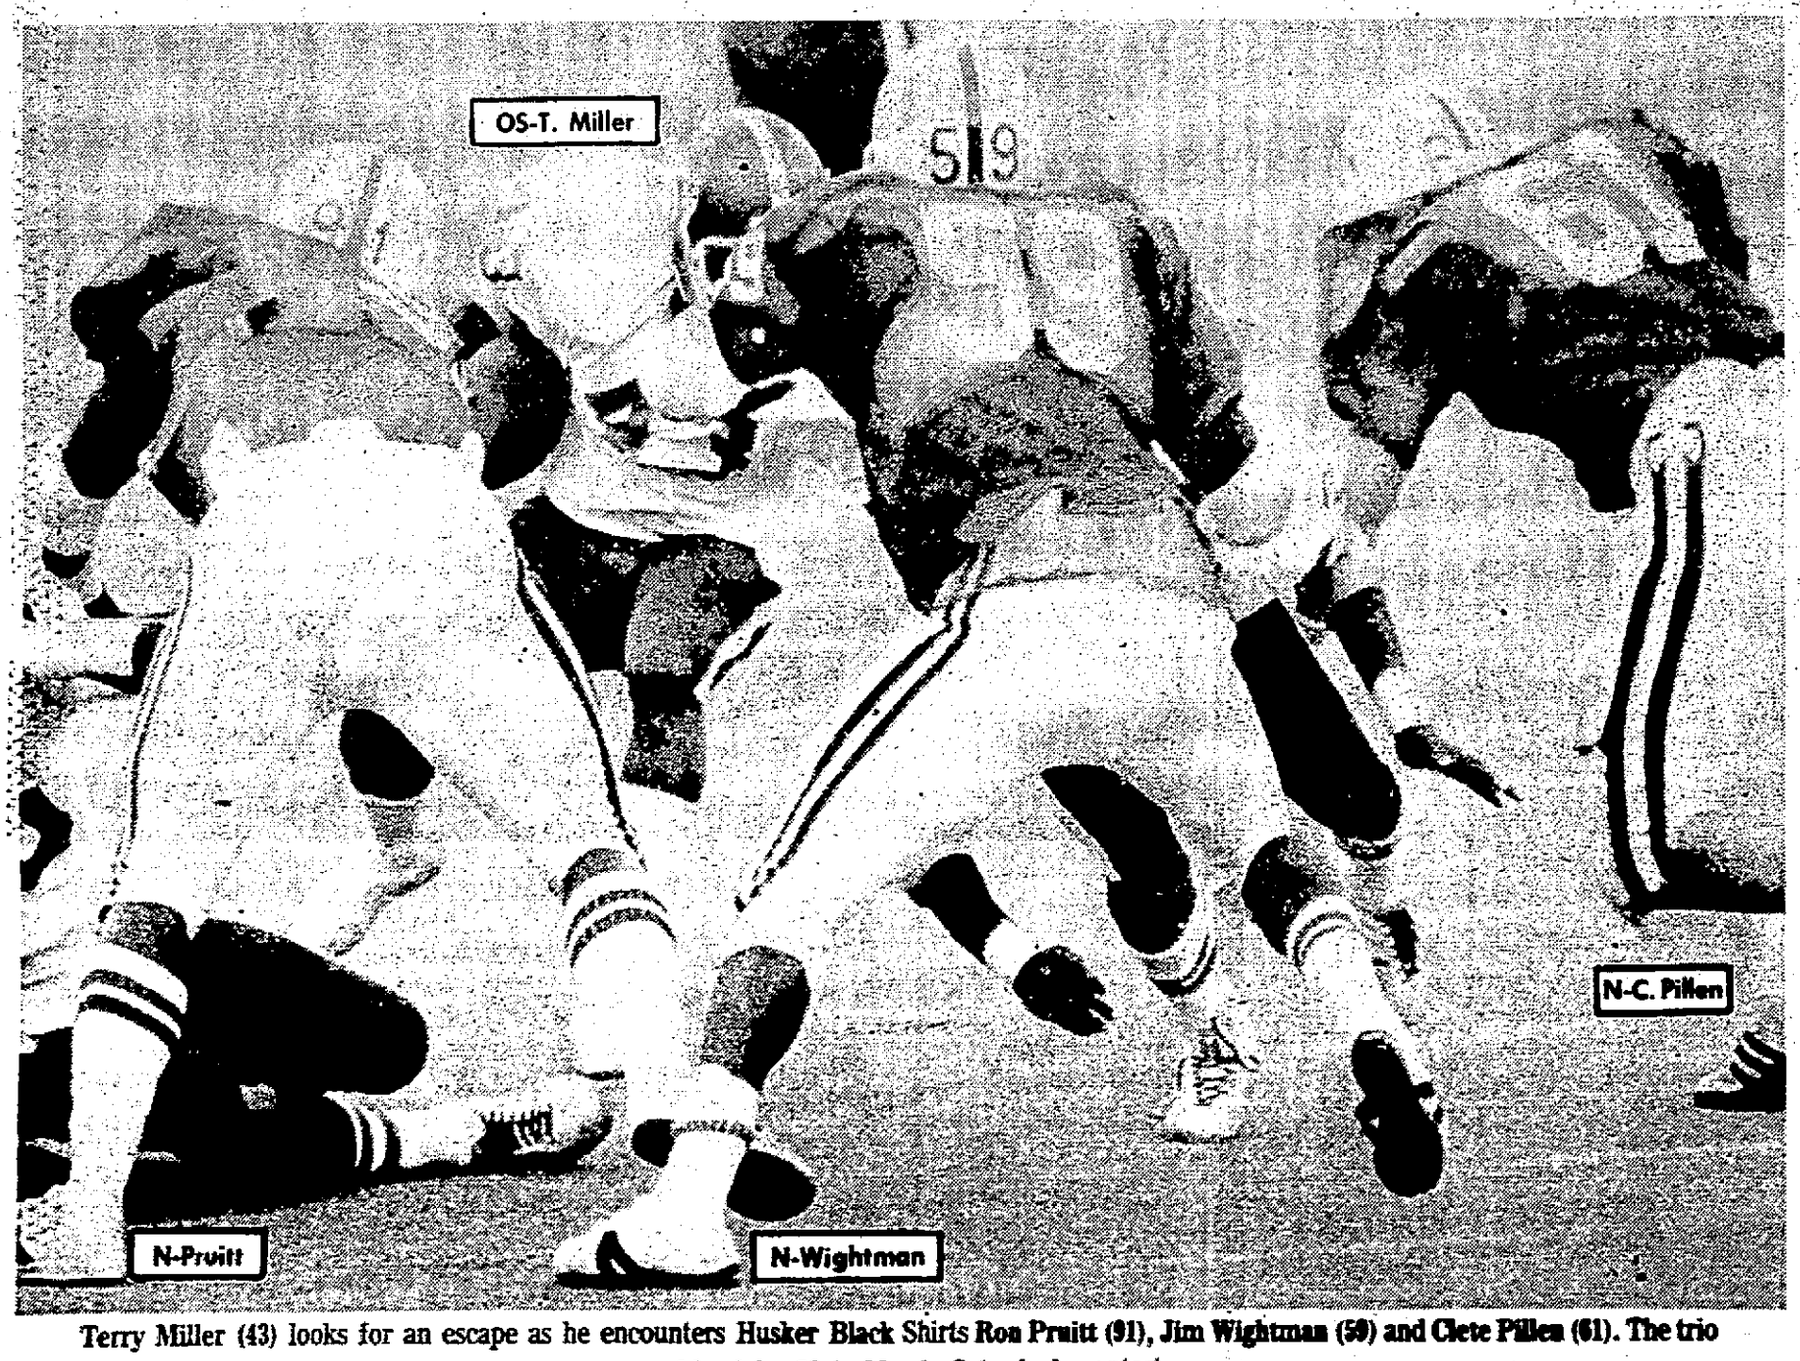

"Their backs just exploded off the ball and their line was very quick," he said. "They are the best offensive team we've played this year.

"Our tackling was a little mushy at times," Pillen continued, "but Oklahoma State is the most physical team we've played."

Pillen credited the momentum factor as a big key in the brutal Big Eight battle.

"I remember last year they (OSU) had the momentum and it was tough," he said. "But when things are going your way it seems like you can do nothing wrong."

Clete Pillen did little wrong Saturday, even if he wouldn't admit it.

Terry Miller (43) looks for an escape as he encounters Husker Black Shirts Ron Pruitt (91), Jim Wightman (59) and Clete Pillen (61). The trio combined for 53 tackles in Saturday's contest.

Chuck Malito (89) stretches out and concentrates on the descending football as he scores the Huskers' first touchdown on a play that covered 34 yards. For the day, Malito made four receptions for 80 yards.

OSU Secondary Remains Confused by NU Passing

By Randy York
Staff Sports Writer

Oklahoma State's secondary Saturday was just as confused after the game as it was during a 14-10 Big Eight Conference loss to Nebraska.

The Cowboys' two cornerbacks and two safeties, who entered the game with the league's stingiest pass defense, yielded 235 yards to Vince Ferragamo.

Perhaps post-game viewpoints depended on individual responsibility.

Confused Pair

Cornerbacks Willie Lester and Milton Kirven appeared the most confused by NU's passing attack. Likewise, they remained confused in the locker room.

"I don't know my name today," muttered Kirven, the defensive back beaten on both Cornhusker touchdown passes.

Kirven did not get the chance to explain his statement. An Oklahoma State aide sitting next to him, said: "I think you better leave him alone."

Lester allowed that Nebraska "has pretty good receivers with average speed and an average quarterback."

Irions, a 6-4 sophomore letterman, thought otherwise. "Ferragamo is the finest we've faced this year," he said. "We were in a zone and he would just sit back there and wait.

"We didn't have a real good pass rush today," Irions said, "but when we did get one, Ferragamo would still sit back there with a lot of poise and find the right receiver."

Coppola, a junior letterman, said: "I think Ferragamo is the best in the Big Eight. I thought he was the best last year. He can do the most and he can run a club the best."

While Nebraska's passing attack drew praise, defense was the name of the game in the showdown and OSU offensive coordinator Gene Henderson paid his respect to the Black Shirts.

"Obviously," he said, "they have one of the best defensive teams in the country. Monte Kiffin has a great football mind and good kids who play hard. Everything Nebraska does on defense has a purpose. They don't just line up and play.

No Weaknesses

"Nebraska didn't do anything special that I could see today to stop Terry Miller," Henderson said. "They have no weaknesses you can pick on. They just play their normal defense, don't give up anything big and hope you'll choke yourself down the drain. Basically, that's what we did.

"We moved the ball on them, but eventually, we hurt ourselves. It seems like Nebraska lets you make enough yards to keep you running. Today, we played as well as we're capable. We just should have opened up quicker with the pass. That was a strategic mistake on our part."

Head coach Jim Stanley was tight-lipped following the loss, which left the Cowboys in a five-way tie for second place in the Big Eight standings behind Nebraska.

Standing shirtless with his arms folded in the coaches' cramped dressing quarters, Stanley broke a lengthy silence by offering some rather general observations.

"We lost to a real good football team," he said. "We had obvious chances to win and failed. I guess that's the Big Eight Conference. Every week, there's a bowl game in the Big Eight.

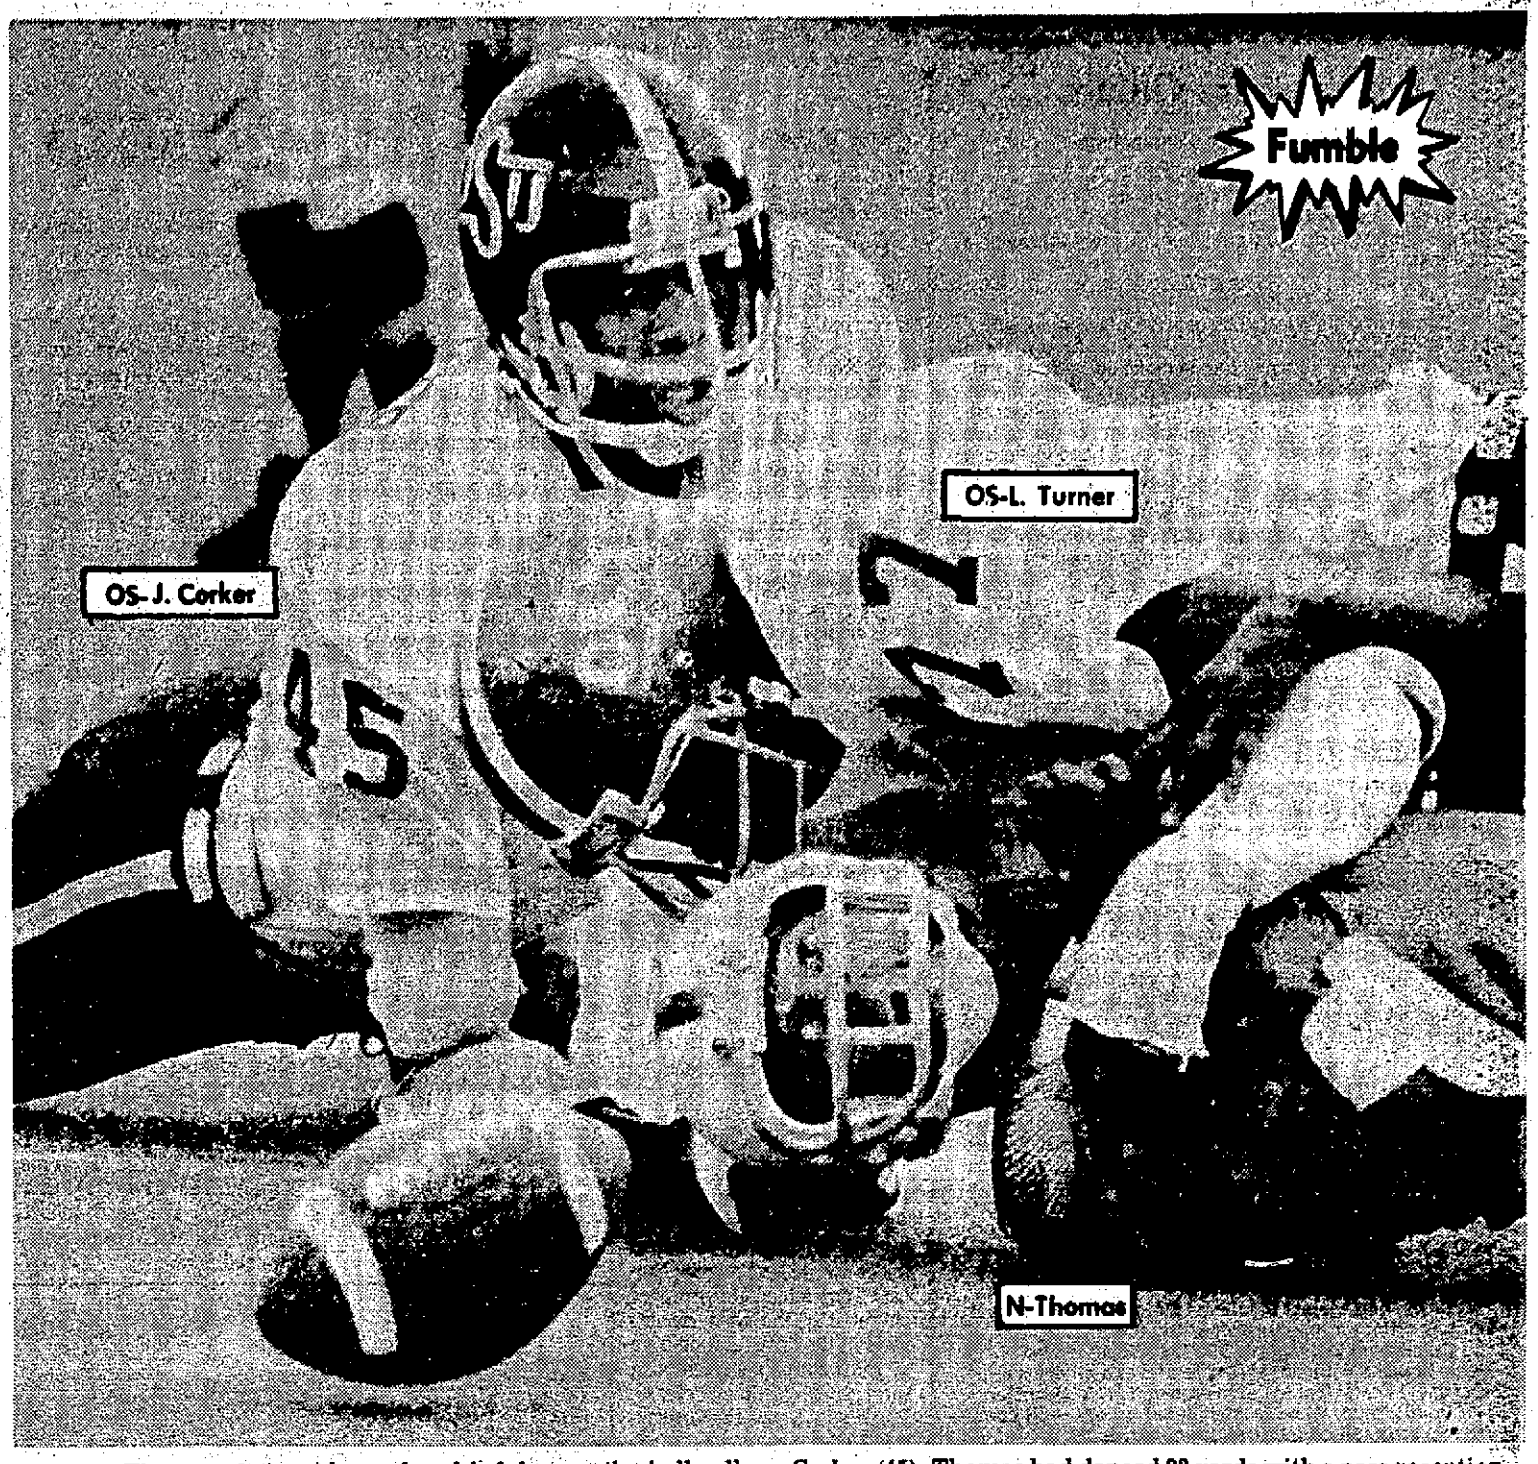

No Concessions

"With Colorado losing at Missouri today," added Stanley, "this thing could still end up in a five-way tie for first place. The most important thing in our life right now is our last three games (at Kansas State, Iowa State in Stillwater and at Texas-El Paso).

"Today's loss was very similar to the Colorado loss (20-10)," Stanley said. "But we've got enough pride to overcome it. I'm not worried about that."

Stanley wasn't ready to concede the title to Nebraska. Neither was offensive coordinator Henderson, but he analyzed what he considered the reality of the situation.

"Being realistic, I'd have to say Iowa State will not beat Nebraska," he said. "OU has a real shot at them though. If Oklahoma gets some defensive backs back, look out. They're good. They might get the job done for the rest of the league."

Comeback Gives NU Sole League Leadership

Fortunately, for the Huskers, the 16th play was a fumble which middle guard Jeff Pullen recovered.

Nebraska had started the game in impressive style, driving to the OSU 14 and two yard lines, yet — because of its errors — was lucky to be trailing by only three at halftime.

It didn't appear Nebraska's fortunes were going to change in the second half. A 41-yard Ferragamo to Dave Shamblin pass helped get the ball to the OSU 18, but a potential tying field goal by Al Eveland was blocked.

The next time the Huskers got the ball, a second Ferragamo aerial was picked off.

Nebraska got its offense untracked the next chance, however. The Huskers covered 75 yards in seven plays — 60 of those yards on three passes to Chuck Malito. The last was a spectacular 34-yard over-the-shoulder grab in the corner of the end zone. Eveland's extra point boot put the Huskers on top, 7-3.

But not for long.

Oklahoma State took the ensuing kickoff, surprised everyone with a 34-yard pass play of its own, then turned things over to hard-running halfback Terry Miller. Miller carried on seven of the eight running plays in the drive, scoring from 15 yards out on a sudden burst through a goalline defense. Daigle's PAT gave the Cowboys a 10-7 edge.

Back came the Huskers.

Nebraska took the kickoff and scored the game's final points on an eight-play drive that covered 57 yards after Richard Berns returned the kickoff from the four to the 43.

Ferragamo had four straight completions in that march, the longest a 21-yarder to Malito. The most important was one to tight end Ken Spaeth which covered the final six.

"I didn't know if I was in or not," Spaeth said of his grab at the goalline. "When I went down I saw that orange thing under my feet, (the pylon which is in the end zone), so I figured I was okay."

Oklahoma State had one more golden opportunity. Nebraska punter Randy Lessman, who had one 62-yard boot, averaged 44 yards despite his only bad effort of the season. He shanked one off the side of his foot. It traveled just 10 yards and the Cowboys had the ball at the NU 31.

The Black Shirt defense held, however, and Daigle missed a 44-yard field goal attempt.

With three minutes left in the game, Oklahoma State had the ball at midfield. A clipping penalty had pushed the Cowboys back, and they faced a fourth-and-19 situation. They tried a tricky play, rather than punting, and it backfired.

"That really surprised me," Ferragamo said. The NU quarterback felt that a deep punt might force another Nebraska punt into the wind and give the Cowboys another scoring chance.

As it turned out, OSU got the chance anyway. Berns fumbled with 44 seconds left, but NU cornerback Ted Harvey picked off a desperation pass to ice the victory.

The partisan red-clad crowd of 76,272 went limp and relaxed for the first time all afternoon.

"It's nice to be the only team in first place," Ferragamo admitted, "but we can't sit on the lead. We're not going to stop now. There's too much at stake. We've got two tough games left to play."

Iowa State at Ames is next. The surprising Cyclones are among the fivesome tied for second place in the league standings, and are a clearcut second among the conference teams on a season-long basis with an overall 7-2 record.

The Huskers came out of the game with a wide assortment of bumps and bruises, but should be at full strength for Iowa State.

Linebacker Clete Pillen understandably has a sore shoulder after making a record-setting total of 30 tackles, while defensive end Ray Phillips, I-backs Monte Anthony and Berns all suffered back spasms. Linebacker Jim Wightman strained a knee and fullback Dodie Donnell suffered a strained neck.

Cornhuskers Quotes

Compiled by Jim Cunningham

Linebacker Clete Pillen

On OSU running back Terry Miller: "He's great. I would say he's like Tony Dorsett and Ricky Bell. I haven't played against them but from what I've seen, I'd say he's like them."

Cornerback Ted Harvey

Comparing his late, fourth quarter interception with a play earlier in the game which OSU completed en route to its touchdown — "I knew I had to make up for it. On that first one, the reception, I got turned around. The ball was thrown short and I couldn't get back to it. On the interception I saw it was underthrown and I went for the ball. It felt good. I was thinking, 'don't get beat.' I had to be sure on that one."

Split End Chuck Malito

On limping off the field following the touchdown — "I have a hyperextended knee. It hurts whenever I come down on it."

On the Cornhuskers' victory — "What can you say. It was a great team effort."

Tight End Ken Spaeth

On his touchdown reception — "I run a pattern where I go seven yards deep. On this play that took me just into the end zone. Vince reads their defense and hits the receiver that's open.

On what caused him to get up slowly after the touchdown — "I just got the wind knocked out of me."

On the Cornhuskers' victory — "This is a great win for us. We showed a lot of character out there. We never gave up.

Linebacker James Wightman

On defensing the Oklahoma State Veer offense — "It's a hard job trying to contain runners like that. They use a 'rocker step.' It's a step to try and throw your timing off. It's probably tougher against the Veer than any other offense. "The coaches tell us if you can beat the linebackers you can beat a defense, so we must have done a pretty good job today."

Punter Randy Lessman

On punting against OSU's Cliff Parsley — "I was not concentrating on having a battle with him. I was thinking about it on those first two punts. They felt good. But on that shank late in the fourth quarter, I felt terrible. I think it was the worst punt of my career. On that next punt, (a good kick that took the Huskers out of their own territory with less than five minutes remaining) I was really concentrating on it."

I-back Richard Berns

On playing against Oklahoma State — "The game was not any different than any other Big 8 Game."

On his fumble that gave OSU it's last possession of the game in the last minute of play — "I was a bit down after that one. I don't want to get the reputation as a fumbler."

On his injury when tackled out of bounds — "I came down on my tail on the first down marker."

Cornerback Dave Butterfield

On the Big 8 race — "This win and Colorado's loss puts us alone at the top but we've got two tough games left. Today's hard game isn't going to take anything away from our attitude for the rest of the season. We'll probably be fired up more because we're back on top."

"It was a very typical game against Oklahoma State. Every time we get in against them it's a helluva ball game. It was no different today."

"We have to be more conscious of the run when we play against a team like Oklahoma State but you can't forget about the pass. It's a reading type defense."

Visitors Views

Quarterback Charlie Weatherbie

On OSU's fumble at the NU three a minute before halftime: "We should have gone in 10-0 at the half. It was a bad pitch on my part, it's just one of those things."

On the chin strap problem that caused confusion and a brief change of quarterbacks during an OSU first half drive: "The rules say you have to have two snaps on each end of the chin strap, I only had one; I've only had one snap since I was a freshman, and this is the first time it's been called."

"Coach Osborne was yelling about it to the officials and they were looking all around to see who had just one snap. I tried to hide, but Osborne kept yelling Weatherbie! Weatherbie! The official told me I had to call a time out or sub another player in."

"Harold (sub quarterback (Bailey) came in and he had just one snap too, but they didn't call it on him."

On whether it hurt (the confusion and delay) the drive OSU was mounting at the time: "I don't think it helped us any, because we were driving pretty good."

On OSU's fourth and one situation shortly after he re-entered the game: "I thought I made it but I guess the officials saw it different."

On OSU's failure to convert a 10-yard Lessman punt in the fourth quarter into an OSU score: "We should have scored off the short kick, but we just couldn't move the ball. I tell you what, they (NU) played a good game.

Safety Gary Irions

On Ken Spaeth's game winning touchdown reception: "He was Kervin's (cornerback Milton) assignment, but I broke my assignment to help out. When I saw him come off the line of scrimmage across my face, I looked at Ferragamo and he was looking right at him. So I broke my pattern. I said I guess I better go with him, he was going to throw the ball to him, and he did. We just didn't get there quick enough. I didn't think he (Spaeth) was in the end zone myself, but we'll see on the films tomorrow."

Defensive End Lorenzo Turner

Turner had been recruited by Nebraska and signed a Big 8 letter of intent which was later proved invalid. He then signed with OSU: "This game meant a hell of a lot to me. I really wanted to beat those guys. Me and coach Melton (Nebraska coach John) have been having these little feuds where we shake our fingers and say we're going to get each other. I guess I can't get Nebraska any more.

"I take that back. We're not out of it yet. We can still come back and win the conference with only two losses. It would make me real happy to sneak past Nebraska and win the title. I'd love to send a letter to coach Melton when it's all over."

Defensive tackle Philip Dokes

"We're not out of it by any means. There is no dominant team in the Big 8 anymore. I think just about any Big 8 team can go to another conference and win it."

On Nebraska's passing success: "They hurt us with so much play action on their passes. He (Vince Ferragamo) would hold us with the fakes, and we would have to strip the backs to find out if they had the ball. By that time, he had the passes off."

"Missouri was more physical than Nebraska, but Bob Lingenfelter was plenty physical against me. He'll probably go high in the pro draft. But I think I will, too."

Running back Terry Miller

On his constant confrontations with NU linebacker Clete Pillen: "He's a good linebacker. He was always standing right in the hole, so there wasn't much I could do but meet up with him.

"Nebraska has got a great defense. But we were still able to move the ball on the ground. We've moved it on the ground against a lot of good defenses this year."

Safety Pete Coppola

On the NU passing game: "Personally I thought he (Ferragamo) is the best in the Big 8. He can do the most and he can run a club the best. I thought he was the best last year."

"We knew we were in for a rough day. We expected them to throw a little more out patterns to the strong side, but they didn't."

Cornerback Willie Lester

On the NU pass game: "They (NU) have pretty good receivers. Average speed. Average quarterback."

Cornerback Milton Kirven

Beaten for both touchdown passes: "I don't know my name today."

NU Women Nip Buffs

Cozad — The University of Nebraska women's basketball team won its opening game against Colorado here Saturday, 81-80 on the strength of freshman Laura Tietjen's free throws.

Tietjen hit two free throws following two technical fouls on Colorado to give the Huskers a 79-76 lead, then seconds later sank two more free throws to give Nebraska an 81-78 lead.

Nebraska shot 49% in the game, while Colorado hit at a 52% clip. The Huskers were hampered by 36 turnovers caused by a full court, man-to-man Colorado press.

Nicodemus termed the play of five freshmen as most encouraging. Nebraska received 33 points from freshmen, with Tietjen and Jeanne Boller tallying 24 points.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida thought its first ever Southeastern Conference championship and a Sugar Bowl bid was in the bag at halftime Saturday — but the Gators failed to reckon on Georgia quarterback Ray Goff.

Goff, with an assist from teammate Kevin McLee who rushed for 198 yards, ran and passed for five touchdowns to rally the eighth-ranked Bulldogs to a nationally-televised 41-27 come-from-behind victory over the 10th-ranked Gators.

The Georgia senior ran the veer-option to perfection, keeping himself for 124 yards and three touchdowns when the Gators didn't take the bait and pitching out to McLee when the Florida defense closed in on him.

Two of Goff's touchdowns came in the final period when the Bulldogs took the lead for the first time since early in the first period and then added some insuranc. He also completed all five passes he threw, two of them for touchdowns.

The Gators appeared to have the game well in hand when they took a 27-13 lead with only nine seconds left in the first half. But the aroused Bulldogs outscored Florida 28-0 and outgained the Gators 280 to 65 in the second half mismatch.

Florida can still tie for the SEC championship by beating Kentucky next week. But if Georgia beats Auburn, the Bulldogs will not only have a share of the league crown, but also the coveted the coveted Sugar Bowl berth which goes automatically to the top team in the conference.

The Gators had been saying all week how anxious they were to get revenge for last year's meeting when a 10-7 Georgia victory knocked Florida out of the SEC title.

For 30 minutes it looked as though the Gators were as good as their word. But then Goff took over.

Pitt to Join Dorsett at Top

From News Wires

While the nation has considered Tony Dorsett No. 1 among rushers this collegiate football season, the rest of the Pittsburgh football team was like that No. 2 auto rental agency — trying harder but just not making it to the top.

But after the smoke had cleared Saturday — and Purdue had shocked No. 1-rated Michigan 16-14 — Pitt fans began savoring with anticipation the No. 1 position their favorite team is sure to hold in this week's major news service polls.

Dorsett and his Pitt teammates smashed Army 37-7 Saturday as the all-time rushing leader galloped for 212 yards and three touchdowns while smashing his ninth NCAA record.

"Speaking for myself and my teammates, we're going to be hard to beat," said Dorsett, who wore a gold chain around his neck proclaiming him "No. 1" in honor of his status as the king of the ground-gainers. "We want that national championship and we're going after it."

In other key games Saturday Georgia defeated Florida 41-27, Georgia Tech upset Notre Dame 23-14, UCLA blanked Oregon 46-0, USC tripped up Stanford 48-24, Texas Tech had trouble with TCU before winning 4-10, Maryland blanked Cincinnati 21-0, Alabama dropped LSU 28-17, Houston routed Texas 30-0, and Arkansas and Baylor tied 7-7.

Fullback Johhny Davis bulled through the Louisiana State defense for touchdowns of 13 and 58 yards in Alabama's victory as the 15th-ranked Tide were watched by scouts from eight bowls.

Houston quarterback Danny Davis scored once and hit a crucial fourth down pass to set up a touchdown and Lennard Coplin kicked three field goals as the 19th-ranked Cougars defeated the 20th-ranked Texas team.

It was Texas' first home-field loss in 43 games

Senior quarterback Mark Jackson sneaked the final yard for a touchdown on a tense 80-yard fourth-quarter drive as Baylor gained its tie with 12th-ranked Arkansas.

James Brown and Wendell Tyler each scored two touchdowns and Frank Corral kicked a scpool record 55-yard field goal to lead third-ranked UCLA to its victory over Oregon. Corral also had field goals of 49 yards and 37 yards.

Senior quarterback Vince Evans doubled his season touchdown total with four scoring strikes and freshman tailback Charles White added two more scores in leading USC by Stanford.

Taking a look around the nation at other Saturday games:

Midwest

Wisconsin spotted Iowa a 14-0 first quarter lead, then rallied behind two touchdowns by Ira Matthews and three field goals by Vince Lamia to defeat the Hawkeyes 38-21 in Bit Ten football.

Jim Perkins, Minnesota's designated scorer, blasted for three touchdowns of one yard each and the Gophers rolled to a 38-10 victory over winless Northwestern before a disappointed crowd of 15,183, smallest in modern Northwestern history.

The defeat was the 15th straight for the Wildcats, who are shackeld with the longest losing streak among the nation's major colleges.

Eddie Smith's 19-yard touchdown pass to flanker Kirk Gibson with 1:47 left in the first quarter established a Michigan State scoring record and led the Spartans to a 23-0 victory over Indiana.

Fullback Pete Johnson scored four times to become the fifth player in college history to score 50 career touchdowns, leading eighth-ranked Ohio State to its 18th straight Big 10 football victory, a 42-10 rout of Illinois that gave the Buckeyes the conference lead.

Bob Harris rushed for 107 yards and a touchdown as Temple ran over Drake 31-7 in intersectional football.

Southwest

Cornerback Eric Felton intercepted Steve Bayuk's desperation pass with one minute remaining to halt a last ditch Texas Christian drive and preserve fifth-ranked Texas Tech's 14-10 victory. Tech led 14-0 before TCU rallied.

Quarterback Tommy Kramer, the nation's leading passer, led Rice to two touchdowns in the final four minutes of the game to rally the Owls to a 41-34 Southwest Conference victory over Southern Methodist.

Wyoming fullback Robbie Wright rushed for 144 yards and scored his first two touchdowns of the year as the Cowboys kept their Western Athletic Conference championship drive alive with a 26-24 victory over Arizona.

Air Force quarterback Dave Ziebart connected on a 22-yard scoring pass to Paul Williams with 10 seconds left in the game to give the Falcons a 31-30 victory over Arizona State Saturday night.

South

Wingback Stanley Morgan scored twice on runs of one and six yards as Tennessee defeated Memphis State 21-14. Coach Bill Battle's Volunteers took advantage of a Tiger fumble early in the third period to turn what had been a Memphis State victory celebration into a wake.

Cornerback Henry Davison galloped 40 yards on a fumble return to launch Mississippi State toward a 28-19 Southeastern Conference football victory over Auburn.

Derrick Ramsey accounted for 202 yards total offense, scored one of two touchdowns and won most valuable player honors as he led Kentucky to a 14-0 Southeastern Conference football victory in the Wildcats' homecoming game.

East

Senior tailback Mike Voight scored touchdowns on runs of one, 18 and 84 yards and North Carolina withstood a miserable third quarter to beat Clemson 27-23.

Quarterback Mike McGlamry tossed two touchdown passes to tight end Steve Young to lead Wake Forest to a 38-17 Atlantic Coast Conference rout of Duke.

Penn State's defense set up three touchdowns and a field goal with three fumble recoveries and an intercepted pass as the Nittany Lions thundered past North Carolina State 41-20 for their fifth straight victory.

Quarterback Mark Manges threw a pair of touchdown passes and engineered a 52-yard scoring drive in Maryland's victory over Cincinnati. With scouts from the Orange and Gator bowls in the stands, Maryland defenders dominated the game, keeping the Bearcats beyond their 29-yard line until late in the game.

Quarterback E. J. Baker, after a shaky first half, threw a five-yard pass to Woody Bennett for one touchdown and ran 17 yards for another Saturday night to lead the Miami (Fla.) Hurricanes to a 13-6 victory over Boston College

Far West

Senior fullback Tom Newton, who fumbled away a potential California touchdown in the first half, waltzed in from two yards out early in the fourth period for a TD that lifted the Bears to a 7-0 Pacific-8 Conference victory over Washington.

Washington State quarterback Jack Thompson engineered a 65-yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter to give WSU a 29-24 homecoming victory over Oregon State.

ATLANTA (UPI) — David Sims scored second half touchdowns on runs of 10 and 16 yards Saturday to lead emotionally high Georgia Tech to a 23-14 homecoming upset of 11th-ranked Notre Dame — Tech's first victory over the Irish in 17 years.

Sims ran for 123 yards to key an explosive Tech offense that gained tough yardage up the middle when it was needed and struck on long-gaining plays around the outside to set up the Yellow Jackets' second half comeback.

Tech, 3-5-1, took a 3-0 lead on 31-yard second quarter field goal by Danny Smith. Then the Notre Dame offense got untracked and the Irish moved 67 yards in eight plays with halfback Al Hunter scoring on a two-yard run.

The Irish, now 6-2, took over on the Tech 35 after the Yellow Jackets were unable to a punt away a d jhunter scored a second touchdown from the three.

Tech roared back with an 84-yard drive with freshman quarterback Gary Lanier running through the left side for the final eight yards. Big plays included a 17-yard run by Sims and a 46-yard end around by Drew Hill. A personal foul put the ball at the eight and Lanier carrie i.

The Tech defensive line stopped the Irish cold after the second half kickoff and Tech moved 80 yards in five plays to go ahead 16-14.

Bo Thomas sprinted 45 yards to start the march and Sims made a 20-yard dash before taking a pitchout for a 10-yard scoring run.

In the fourth quarter, Tech controlled play between the tackles, moving continually up the middle. Sims finally dashed 16 yards ovsr tackle or the third Tech touchdown.

Eddie Lee Ivery gained 78 yards for Tech to pace a ground attack which rolled up 368 yards. Quarterback Rick Slager completed eight of 19 passes for 71 yards for the Irish.

The victory was only the fifth for Tech in the 26-game series. It was the first win by the Yellow Jackets over Notre Dame since 1959.

Youth Wins D.C. Race

Laurel, Md (AP) — Youth shot into the lead at he head of the stretch, won by 10 lengths and then withstood a foul claim to give France its fourth straight victory in the Washington, D.C. International.

The Maryland-bred 3-year-old also produced the third International victory for owner Nelson Bunker Hunt and trainer Maurice Zilber. Jockey Sandy Hawley was winning for the second straight year.

No sooner had Youth crossed the finish line at Laurel Race Course than the stewards flashed the inquiry sign. Jockey Alfred Gibert, who rode On My Way II to a second-place finish for France, claimed foul against Youth and Hawley. The patrol films showed that Youth cut in front of On My Way II and made Gibert check at the head of the stretch.

But after the stewards deliberated for several minutes, the order of finish was allowed to stand.

On My Way II was a nose in front Ivanjica of France as the 25th International became the second straight 1-2-3 sweep for France. The victory was the ninth for France, two less than the United States who for the first time was not represented in the International.

Ferragamo's Passing Spurs Huskers Past Cowboys, 14-10

Quarterback Vince Ferragamo tossed touchdown passes in the third and fourth periods to lead No. 9 Nebraska to a 14-10 Big Eight Conference football victory over No. 13 Oklahoma State in a tough but turnover-plagued game.

Ferragamo hit split end Chuck Malito with a 34-yard TD pass with 4:02 remaining in the third period to give the Cornhuskers a 7-3 lead. Oklahoma State bounced back on the next possession, marching 80 yards in nine plays to score with seven seconds remaining in the period on a 15-yard run by Terry Miller.

Ferragamo then guided the Huskers on a 57-yard, 8-play drive, capped by his 4-yard scoring pass to Ken Spaeth with 11:57 remaining, giving Nebraska its 14-10 victory margin.

After a scoreless first period, Abbie Daigle put the Cowboys ahead 3-0 with a 37-yard field goal at 9:35 left in the half.

John Corker intercepted a Ferragamo pass on the Cowboy 12 to halt a first period Husker scoring threat, and Husker weak back Bobby Thomas fumbled a pass reception at the Cowboy 2, thwarting another NU scoring drive.

Late in the second quarter, Cowboy Ricky Taylor fumbled on the Nebraska 5 and the Huskers recovered to stop an Oklahoma State scoring drive.

Hunters, Nonhunters Make Grand Go

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Columbus — Since its very first days, originator Dr. Bruce Cowgill has been heading the Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt toward the awareness of all aspects of hunting.

Hunting is more than killing. It's a conservation tool, a device of game management, he would point out. Many a nonhunter in Columbus, the new home of the Grand National as of this year, are believers in Cowgill's ways.

"Nonhunters?" repeated publicity chairman Jim Jaworski. "Not many, but, yes, there are a few of us helping out. I personally don't hunt. In fact, I don't even own a gun."

Jaworski is one of a handful of the 115 hardworking volunteers under coordinator Bud Ament who pulled off this year's Grand National Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The community effort brought hunters and nonhunters together in the name of conservation.

"It takes a lot of people to do something like this," said Ament of the three-day hunt which began its annual thing four years ago in Silver Creek. And it was for that reason, too few people to help in Silver Creek, that the instigators there asked the town of Columbus if they would accept the responsibility.

"The reason we turned it over to Columbus was we were short of manpower," said George Van Winkle, one of the leaders of the Silver Creek Grand National organization. "The idea is a tremendous idea, too good to let die, and keeping it in Silver Creek was limiting its opportunity to grow."

So Cowgill, Larry Meyer and Van Winkle asked Columbus if the townfolk were interested. The people eagerly accepted and immediately started adding a new twist of its own.

"We call it the Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt and Conservation Days," said Jaworski, who said the addition was made to further promote the overall theme of Cowgill's brainchild.

"This is not a kill-type hunt," said Ament. "If it was, we wouldn't be here. We are interested in conservation and that's what this is all about.

"Sure we want to get people out to the river to get some shots at game, but we aren't bringing celebrities in just to get their limits like some other hunts around. That's not our bag," Ament continued. "We want to show our celebrities and the onlooking public that we hunt with conservation in mind. A hunter sometimes gets bad publicity and we want to show everybody all hunters don't deserve it."

Through the hunt and its activities, the Grand National organizers try to highlight the best side of hunting — the meeting of new people, the inspiration of wildlife art forms, habitat improvements through brushpile building, improvement of landowner relations, companionship, good food and an opportunity to see and pursue different types of game.

"Even though I don't hunt, I still really enjoy seeing a flight of ducks on the river, geese flying over, birds in the field, that's important to me," Jaworski said. "That's part of the reason I'm involved in the Grand National. We have some high hopes for the

Jim Jaworski

Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt and Conservation Days. We'd like to form a past shooters' association, incorporate more youth activities and start doing a few more things along the promotional end.

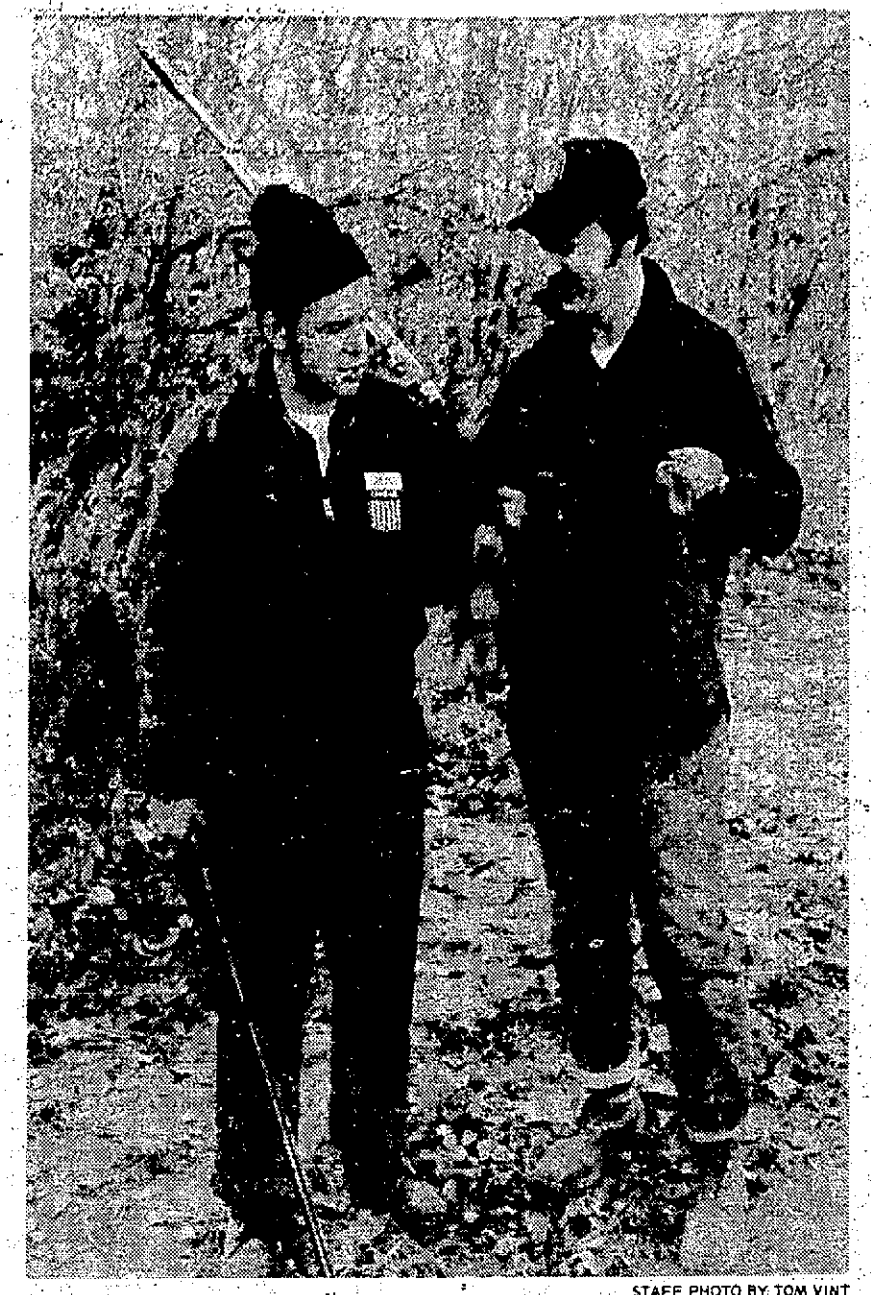

"We think the youth activities, like this year's scout brushpile building, are well worth expanding so we can get more kids involved," Jaworski added. "We feel if you can reach the youngsters and get them interested, we'll have conservation in mind for years and years to come."

In addition to the brushpile building for youngsters, day-long displays, exhibitions and instruction, the Grand National also featured a youth essay and poster contest again this year. The contests were set aside a year at Silver Creek due to lack of manpower for the judging and coordination.

Some of the celebrities in this year's Grand included U.S. Olympic gold medalists John Satterwhaite (won skeet competition in 1972 Mexico Games) and Capt. Lanny Bassham (won smallbore rifle competition in Montreal Games), Kansas City Royals baseball players Fred Patak and Roger Nelson, Minnesota Twins Tom Burgmeier and Dave Goltz, Outdoor Women Joan Cone and Kathy Farmer, Winchester/Western's Jerry Lambert and Lincoln's all-American trapshooter Frank Hoppe, to name a few.

Norris assistant football coach Gale Breed and his Auburn brother-in-law Charlie Knipe, look over early morning results of Saturday's statewide quail opener.

Quail Opening As Good As Shot

"Bob White schools the wing-shot as severely as the wily trout tries the angler. Like the trout, he has habits which we must be acquainted with in order to find him, and when found, we ourselves may be found — wanting. Am I not a convicted boaster? Was it not only yesterday when I said to myself: 'I'm a crackshot? For deeply hast sunk the lesson thou has given, and shall not soon depart.'"
Dr. Coues, American ornithogist, 1880

Auburn — How many quail hunters today live those same moments of frustration brought to them by the darting game bird known as Bob White? Frustration of, after finding the coveys, leveling the shotgun and shooting a load of eight-shot into a tree just as the birds take a sharp left to safety.

It happens many times. Perhaps it is the drawing power of quail hunting. Perhaps the hunter feels the target game knows more of this sport than does he. Quail sometimes are geniuses of escape in heavy cover.

A good dog and a good marksman don't guarantee quail hunting success but it certainly helps to have one and be the other if there is to be a dinner of fine Bob White eating this season.

Quail hunting opened Saturday, one week behind the pheasant opener. And there is a big difference between the two types of upland game bird hunting. Like night and day to the died-in-the-wool quail hunter.

"We do mostly pheasant hunting, but we'd probably do more quail hunting if we had the dog to do it," said Norris assistant football coach Gale Breed. Breed opened the season with his trusty golden retriever and his brother-in-law Charlie Knipe.

The pair, with Lincoln Journal and Star sportswriter Chuck Sinclair and me tagging along, netted nine quail and two rooster pheasants in an early morning hunt near here.

"I'd really like to see a good dog work on quail," said Breed. "Mine isn't too good when it comes to them. Probably if I had a good pointer. I'd get into quail hunting more because I sure find it fun."

Generally in the avid hunting circles there are quail hunters and pheasant hunters. The more avid the hunter, the more likely he or she is to be an avid quail hunter.

"There's generally more shooting involved with quail," one Lincoln veteran hunter used to say. "And you can usually follow the covey around most of the day, picking up singles as you go. You can't do that pheasant hunting."

That's likely what has Breed's interest kindled. But he wouldn't pass up some good pheasant hunting, either.

Although no actual statewide survey was held on the quail opener, pheasant hunters last week reported seeing good numbers of quail throughout most of the southern regions of the state. Quail in some isolated areas blossomed over a year ago. Generally in the southeast and southwest, where heavy cover remains, quail are doing well.

Deer Opener Approaches

Nebraska's most popular big game season is approaching, with more than 26,000 hunters preparing for a go at the state's white-tailed and mule deer on the next Saturday firearm season opener.

All of the available permits have been issued for sometime and most were taken during the first two application periods. The firearm deer opener will mean a nine-day halt for archery deer hunters, who will get back into action Nov. 22.

A small group of 100 hunters however, will have a special later season on the DeSoto National Wildlife Refuge. Only muzzle loaders will be allowed for that hunt, which runs Dec. 18 through 22.

Openings Left For Ski Trip

There are still openings for the Christmas Ski Trip to Park City, Utah scheduled for December 29-Jan. 2 sponsored by the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Department for junior, senior high and college students.

A fee of $258.00 covers round trip flight fare to Salt Lake City, insurance, four nights lodging, rentals and lift tickets.

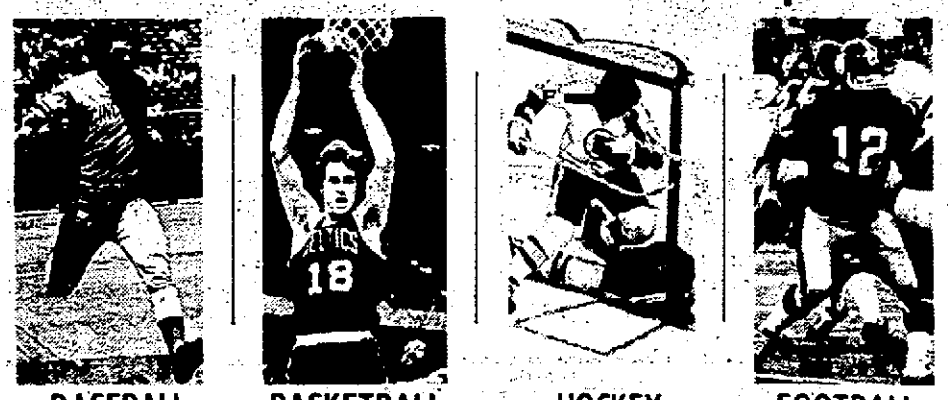

To register, call or come to the Parks and Recreation office at 2740 A Street by November 11.

Road Closures

Firearm deer hunters on the Nebraska National Forest at Halsey will be asked to help protect wildlife habitat and prevent soil erosion by using their vehicles only on certain surfaced and gravel roads.

The U.S. Forest Service has designated a network of roads within the forest which should give sportsmen adequate access to forest lands.

One Man's FB Playoff Plan

Prep Panorama

By Randy York

Talk in the last couple weeks has centered on what is wrong with Nebraska's state high school football playoffs. Criticism has been abundant. Solutions have been few.

That is, until Bing Ward came along. The Grand Island police detective maintains there are three fundamental problems with the state playoffs:

— There are not enough teams, leaving many top contenders out of the running.

— The present playoff system doesn't distinguish between a losing team and a very losing team or a winning team from a great team.

— There is no way to assess the toughness of a schedule.

We're convinced Ward offers one of the best plans yet to cope with playoff problems.

First, he suggests adopting an eight-school playoff in each class, involving the four district winners and the next four highest point averages in the state regardless of which district they represent.

If there are five tough teams in one district, Ward reasons, all five would qualify for the state playoffs.

According to Ward, no exceptional football team is likely to be left out under his proposal. To go unbeaten and still not have one of the eight best point ratings in the state, a team probably would have played an extraordinarily weak schedule.

Ward points out an expanded playoff field could be completed in the same two-week time span. The first playoff games could be played on a Wednesday. The second round could be the following Monday with the state championship games that Friday.

Three games would be played in a 10-day period, similar to the tight schedule Lincoln East played early last fall when it went 2-0-1 against the opposition en route to the state championship.

Ward told Brennan a new system of points is needed to solve which teams are good and better, average or bad and worse.

Right now, a team receives 50 points for beating a team with a winning record, 40 points for beating a team with a losing record, 30 points for losing to a team with a good record and 20 points for losing to a team with a poor record.

As complicated as that sounds, Ward says, the system is too simple. It makes a team with an 8-1 record the same as a team with a 5-4 record. It also doesn't distinguish between a team with a 4-4-1 record from a team with an 0-9 mark.

Ward suggests a system that would break down the system into "per win or tie" values.

A team would be awarded 10 points per win over the team it defeated, eight points per win over a team tied and six points per win over a team to which it lost.

The team also would receive eight points per tie with a team it defeated, six points per tie if the teams deadlocked and four points per tie if it lost to the team.

There would be no points per loss credit for beating or tying a winless opponent.

Brennan illustrates the point. This fall, Grand Island earned 40 points for beating Fremont (4-4-1) because the Tigers didn't have a winning record. Grand Island would have earned the same number of points for beating McCook (0-9).

Under Ward's proposal, Grand Island would receive 38 points for beating Fremont (10 apiece for the wins, eight for the tie and none for the losses). For beating McCook, Grand Island would receive no points.

"That's where I suspect Ward's system might run into some opposition," admits Brennan. "Some might fear that a winless team could capsize chances for the state playoffs if no credit is given."

Ward argues a team doesn't prove anything by beating a winless team and doesn't deserve points. A no points per loss system would work with eight playoff teams, he insists.

Ward's system also advocates awarding bonus points to unbeaten teams, beefing up point totals of truly deserving teams.

The next problem is the disparity of playing teams in different classes.

The more sophisticated fan would know that teams gain five points for playing up a class and lose five for playing down a class under the present system.

Under the proposed system, a team would gain a point for a class above and lose a point for a class below. There is less difference in playing below and above classes and more of a difference between records such as 6-1-2 and 5-4. This would be important to teams that schedule teams that fluctuate between classes with enrollment changes.

Of course, there could still be unbeaten and top-rated teams that don't get in the proposed playoff. But it would be more likely that the schedule wasn't really that tough and the team might be overrated.

"Despite the complications, the state football playoffs already have added some magic and excitement to the fall. They deserve a second chance," Brennan says.

"But every team also deserves an even chance to get into the playoffs," he adds. "Only a more sophisticated point-system such as this proposal will really get the job done."

Young Tops Boxer Lyle

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jimmy Young moved a step closer to a possible rematch with "retired" Muhammed Ali or top-ranking in a possible championship elimination series Saturday with a masterful 12-round unanimous decision over Ron Lyle.

Young, ranked No. 3 in the world and loser of a controversial decision to Ali last spring, put together a series of combinations from both inside and out to befuddle Lyle, rated No. 5 in the world.

Young, 210½, failed to register a knockdown against Lyle, an 11th-round knockout victim to Ali, but landed three solid rights that rocked Lyle back on his heels in the eighth.

All three officials scored the fight heavily in favor of the 28-year-old Young, who ran up most of his points with well-placed combinations off left-jab leads throughout the bout.

Lyle, 215, just about eliminated himself from contention with the defeat, particularly since he is 34-years-old.

The win, his 20th in 27 starts, put Young high up in line for a shot at the heavyweight title. It moved him into a contending spot for either a return bout with the champion or serious consideration for a berth in a fight-off should Ali stick to his recent decision to retire.

The bout, carried live nationally by ABC-television, was billed as a matchup between a clever boxer in Young against a slugger in Lyle.

In Young's previous 19 wins he had recorded only seven KOs while Lyle in 31 victories in 36 previous fights had 22 KOs.

However, after the first round which went to Lyle, Young took command with solid infighting and combinations from long range.

Red Sox Sign Campbell

Boston (AP) — The Boston Red Sox announced Saturday the signing of right-handed relief ace Bill Campbell, their No. 1 selection in baseball's historic free agent re-entry draft Thursday.

Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell announced that an agreement was reached with Campbell's agent, Larue Harcourt in New York Friday and final details were worked out Saturday morning.

Campbell was the best reliever in the American League last season. While playing out his option with the Minnesota Twins he compiled a 17-5 record with 20 saves in 78 games.

It's your home . . . YOU decide!

Turn your life and home into magnificent, carefree living with Seamless Steel Siding.

JOINT SIDING

Ordinary siding comes in 12 foot lengths, leaves unsightly joint marks on your home.

SEAMLESS SIDING

Seamless steel siding is formed on the job, just for your home, so there are no joints in the siding.

Seamless steel siding adds beauty and value to your home!

Now, all the elegance and durability of Seamless Steel Siding can make your home and life-style one of beauty and relaxation. That's because you can forget your worry about the "rundown" look that can come with old fashioned sidings.

You can also forget your anxieties about the problems of unsightly flaking, peeling, chipping, warping and rotting.

There is another happy surprise for you: Seamless Steel Siding can now be applied to your home quickly and efficiently in continuous prepainted "boards" without seams or joints. How do we do it? With the "STEEL FACTORY ON WHEELS." The benefits for you? A home of beauty . . . the pride of the neighborhood and at a price you can afford. Best of all, your garden hose will remove most dirt and stains to retain the "new look" for years to come.

The "Factory on Wheels" can come to your home...

House Of The Week

Blend of Materials 'Tasteful'

By Andy Lang, AP

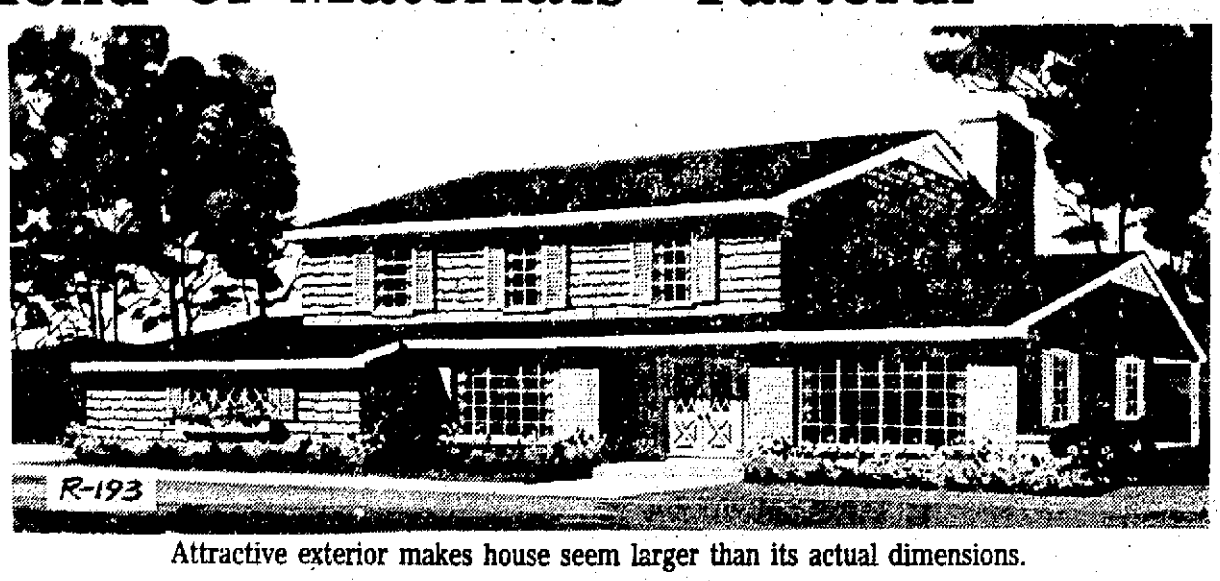

An interesting play of one and two-story wings, tending to enlarge the impression of size, has given this house an appealing exterior.

Traditional materials are used to achieve a tasteful blend. Wood shingles predominate, with touches of brick veneer and board and batten siding.

Charming as the outside of this two-story, four-bedroom house is, it must take second place to the almost perfect floor plan designed by architect Samuel Paul.

A quick glance shows that every room can be reached from the foyer without crossing any other. There is never a need to use any room as a passageway.

A recessed front portico provides for a sheltered entry. A double-door entry leads to the spacious foyer. Part of the foyer ceiling is two stories high, creating visual drama, particularly in the area of the main stair leading to the second floor.

Attractive exterior makes house seem larger than its actual dimensions.

Immediately to the right of the foyer is a sizable formal living room. This room is in a wing to itself, with a beamed cathedral ceiling, windows on two sides and French doors leading to a rear covered porch.

A separate formal dining room is located to the left of the foyer and includes a niche for a built-in cabinet.

To the rear of the foyer is a charming family room which features a large window overlooking the rear yard, a brick fireplace and a door to the covered porch to the rear. This porch, accessible from both the family and living rooms, could be screened and jalousied if desired to create an all-season outdoor room.

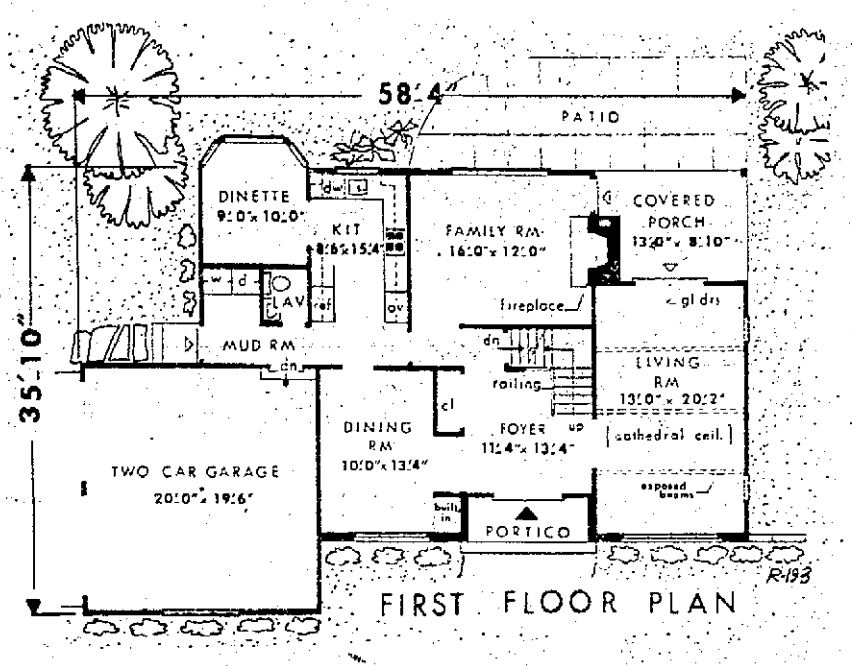

At the end of the foyer is an efficient U-shaped kitchen with a large window over the sink and an abundance of cabinets and countertops. A bay-windowed dinette adjoins the kitchen, providing a delightful place for informal meals.

Immediately adjacent to the kitchen is the first-floor lavatory and mud room. The mud room has space for laundry equipment and has a side door which is just a few steps from the driveway. Inside access to the side-entry two-car garage is located here as well, and is just a step off the kitchen for maximum convenience.

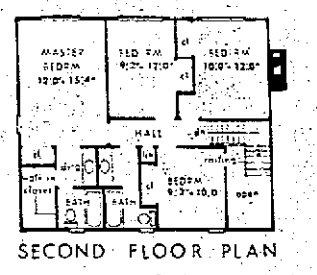

The second floor has four bedrooms, two full baths and ample closet space. The two-story-high foyer creates a dramatic access to the second floor. The master bedroom suite features cross-ventilation, a dressing room, private bath and walk-in closet.

There is a basement under the entire first floor excluding the living room and porch. The side-entry two-car garage could be made into a front entry if lot conditions require.

Design R-193 is a well-balanced two-story house of excellent design.

Jot Notes on Yard Problems While They're Fresh in Mind

- Two-, three- and four-year-old pine needles may turn brown naturally in the fall.
- Caladium and amaryllis normally rest in winter.
- Time to clean up bird houses and reactivate feeding stations.
- Continue to mow fall-seeded lawns if they exceed the normal cutting heights.

By Brent Hoadley

District Extension Specialist (Horticulture)

Outdoor gardening may be the thought furtherest from your mind, but a few notes jotted down now could save you time and money next year.

It's easy to forget a problem area that was a thorn in the side during last year's garden program. One or two branches kept hitting you in the face while mowing; an isolated flower bed or planting was hard to keep watered; the yellow hoses you bought keep clogging up the sprinkler with algae. These an many other items may be remembered next year only after the problems occur again unless you make a record of them now.

Make note of the vegetable varities and annual flowers that performed best. Note the time of insect, disease and weed problems. Indicate where mulches are needed to cut down on watering problems. Evaluate the trees, shrubs and other landscape items while they are in the barest form. Indicate areas where soil fertility and organic matter could be increased. List tools which are deficient or lacking and include expendable garden supplies.

All is not lost if you can supply someone with a few Christmas gift ideas and avoid getting something you already have. These notes will come in handy, too, during late February and March.

Your Nurseryman Speaks

Mechanical Tree Spade Brings Trouble to Nursery Business

"A revolution is not a tea party. People get hurt. But revolutions are necessary. Without them, there is little progress."

Of course, when Chairman Mao of the Chinese Communist Party spoke these words he was thinking of a political revolution such as the one he started in China. But the same could be said of an agricultural or industrial revolution. People do indeed get hurt.

During recent years a revolution has been taking place in the nursery business and, right today in Lincoln, people are getting hurt.

The new mechanical tree spade that digs large plants in minutes has put thousands of experienced ballers and burlappers out of work across the country. Many of these men had bent their backs and worked with a hand spade for a decade or more to acquire the speed and proficiency that would bring them a respectable income for their families. Now, alas, they can't find jobs.

New Spades Cause Problems

In Lincoln, this in itself has not created a major problem because many of the ballers and burlappers dug trees only part time. Other jobs produced most of their income. Lincoln's problem has arisen because of the number of these new spades.

They have been purchased by two groups: nurserymen, who sell and move trees they've grown, and custom tree movers, who move trees from a nursery — or anywhere else.

These new spades are expensive. If a custom tree mover isn't moving trees regularly, he begins to worry about the idle machine. He must feed his family and, in most cases, make payments on the tree spade. With more spades coming into the city every season there is, of course, less work for those already here.

The custom mover has to scratch for new business and this brings us to the subject of Clark-Mc Nary trees.

In 1924 a federal law was passed, aimed at encouraging planting trees on farms for "windbreaks, shelterbelts and wood lots." The law specifically stated that these trees would not be used in ornamental horticulture — that they not be planted in cities to beautify homes because this would, of course, put nurserymen out of business.

Wildcat Movers Sell Cheaply

You guessed it. Now wildcat custom tree movers are taking Clark Mc Nary trees from the country and planting them in the city. And of course since these fellows have not had to plant, weed and spray the trees for five or ten years, they can sell them much cheaper than any nurseryman could.

Nurserymen are howling because they've got hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in trees that have taken a decade or more to grow.

And to complicate the whole situation, many who originally bought Clark Mc Nary trees and signed the pledge not to use them in ornamental horticulture have sold their land. The trees they once planted are now owned by persons who may or may not know of the restrictions originally placed upon sale of the trees.

The whole situation is a mess. Both nurserymen and custom tree movers are upset. Everyone wants a law to protect his own interests. (See why there are so many news laws?)

Real Estate

REALTOR® Austin Realty Company

GREAT OPPORTUNITY

It has been stated that real estate will be one of the great glamour industries during the remainder of the twentieth century. But so will the computer industry. The difference is that the small investor can share in the great profits to be made in real estate. To be personally convinced, consider these vital factors.

Other investments (such as stocks) show broad price fluctuations, but real estate prices have gone generally steadily upward.

Other investments require large amounts of ready cash, but leverage and pyramiding enable the real estate investor to control large holdings by using a small amount of his own money and much larger amounts of other people's money (mortgaging the property).

Real estate, through its incredible tax benefits, allows you to keep more of what you earn through depreciation allowances, capital gains, refinancing, tax sheltering, etc.

And finally, real estate has real value in that it generally increases faster in times of inflation and descends slower in times of recession. Thus it protects its owner against both inflation and recession.

Santa's Train Can Stop at Your Pad

By Steve Ellingson
Special Writer

Few Americans realize that the very first portrait of Santa Claus was painted at West Point Academy (of all places!) in 1837, by a faculty artist named Robert Weir He patterned his portrait of Santa after poet Clement Moore's description, and gave the world the well-known countenance Since then, Santa has appeared in many forms, but we thunk one of the cutest is our Santa Train project

Construction of the lawn display train is simple Just glue the three large, full-size pictures onto plywood, saw them out, and paint by numbers We tell you exactly which colors to use, how to glue the pictures and all other information you need The display should last many seasons because it's all done with waterproof materials

To obtain the C-5 Santa Train, send $4 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order To see our full selection of easy-to-build Christmas displays, write for a free brochure Send all orders to Steve Ellingson, c/o The Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Pattern Dept P O Box 2383, Van Nuys, CA 91409

What can be done?

Be Wary of Cheap Trees

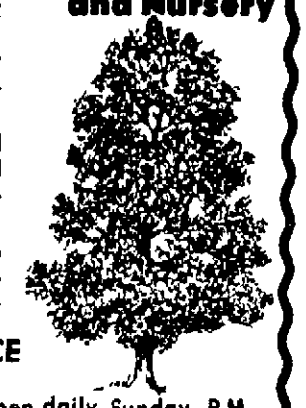

First, if you're buying trees, be wary of the cheap tree — one that's well below established market prices Present laws are fuzzy on your liability if you purchase a wildcat tree, but obviously you don't want to place yourself in a position where you've scouted for trouble

Moreover, ask to see a nursery agent's permit. Every authorized tree seller in this state must carry one. Insist on knowing where the tree you're buying is coming from! Nursery trees are government inspected for disease every year Wildcat trees could obviously be diseased

Responsible parties are trying to bring both nurserymen and custom tree movers together to solve this problem amicably. If you belong to either group and would like to participate in this discussion, please write "Your Nurseryman Speaker," c/o The Sunday Journal and Star, Box 81689, Lincoln, NE, 68501

Talbot Tops Local Bowlers' Efforts

Cheryl Talbot's big 645 series highlighted local action in bowling during the past week.

Talbot, bowling at Hollywood, recorded games of 230-179,236 to gain her first 600 series and top three other 600s shot by local women bowlers during the week.

Other 600s were shot by Bette Roth (612, Plaza); Lorraine Schaffer (610, Plaza) and Liz Huff (607, Briarpark). Top women's game for the week was 245 shot by Wilma Barry at Hollywood and Debbie Foster at Bowl-Mor.

Paul Portsche and Monte Steenson shot 279 games to top local men's scores for the week. Portsche ended up with a 701 series with his game, while Steenson had 695. Max Jensen also had a 690 series. All three were shot at Hollywood.

In other news, Wally Tubbs earned a century patch by shooting 255 on a 154 average at Parkway; Lee Dondlinger had his first 600, a 605, at Hollywood and Bob Moyer picked up the 7-10 split at Parkway.

Also, three triplicates were shot including Dick Kruger (171, Hollywood); junior bowler Laurie Paulsen (165, Parkway) and Tom Trosper (144, Parkway).

AAA Softball Meeting Set

The Lincoln AAA Fast Pitch Softball League will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday at the American Legion Club at 7:30 p.m.

League president Ken Grosenbach noted all teams interested in joining the AAA loop in 1977 should have representatives to the meeting.

Field Hockey Team Wins 2

Nebraska's field hockey team captured two victories Saturday in Lincoln.

In the first game, NU topped Graceland, Iowa, College, 3-2 and in the second contest the Cornhuskers bested the Kansas City, Mo., Field Hockey Club, 2-1.

Husker Bowl Day Changed

The Husker Bowl to determine the City Recreation Department's flag football champion, has been switched from Sunday to Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The game will match up the Brass Rail against the Salem Oilers.

Ski Trip Slated

The Lincoln Parks and recreation Dept. is sponsoring a ski trip to Steamboat Springs, Colo.

The trip is limited to adults and will leave the Lincoln airport Friday, Feb. 18, and fly to Denver.

METRO-AREA

Pro-Am Spots Still Available

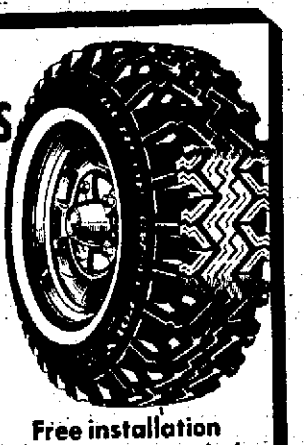

Spots in the adult portion of the Ebonite Magnum Central Region Professional championship Pro-Am are still available, according to meet director Jim Dill.

The junior Pro-Am portion of the meet, however, is full. Dill noted times available for the adult Pro-Am are at 7 and 9 p.m. on Saturday.

Dill also said he needs scorekeepers for the event. Anyone interested may contact Ruby Dill at Hollywood Bowl.

World's Top Test Pilots Are Part of Very Special Breed

Sunday Journal and Star
NATIONAL
November 7, 1976 1E

By Kay Bartlett

Beverly Hills, Calif. (AP) — They milled around the lobby of the hotel, waiting for the Gray Line bus just like any other conventioneers.

They wore leisure suits and sports jackets, shook hands with old friends and were introduced to new ones. Tall and short, some balding, some with glasses, they could have been insurance salesmen, bank tellers or Fuller Brush men.

But among this group, there was the first man who ever flew the Boeing 747, some of the men who will fly America's space shuttle for the first time, and a man who survived when his 2,000-mile-per-hour reconnaissance plane broke apart at 78,000 feet.

That's not to mention the first man to fly faster than the speed of sound, the first man to take the B-1, the controversial supersonic bomber, into the air, and the German test pilot whose job it was during World War II to take every captured allied plane into the air to see what it would do. The German, Hans-Werner Lerche, no longer a test pilot, worked on pure instinct, of course, with no manuals.

These ordinary looking men — the world's top test pilots (past and present) — gathered here recently for the 20th annual meeting of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots (SETP), a very special international club with 1,400 members.

Meet, for instance, Bill Weaver, a rather good-looking 47-year-old blond who is at the moment discussing how to sell one home and buy another. Weaver, a test pilot for Lockheed, is also one of the luckiest men who ever lived.

He was testing the SR-71, America's super reconnaissance plane nicknamed "The Blackbird," about 10 years ago when it suddenly flipped onto its back — at 2,000 miles an hour flying at 78,000 feet.

Weaver was simply thrown from the plane as she broke apart. "I blacked out. I thought it was a bad dream. This couldn't possibly be happening. If it had really happened, I couldn't survive.

"Then I thought I was dead. I was slightly euphoric. I remember thinking that I didn't know why everyone worried about death. It was sort of nice.

I was Alive

"Finally, I realized I was falling. I was alive. I didn't even know what state I was over. I was making a turn when it came apart."

The Blackbird can easily gobble up five states as it turns, can go from California to Florida in 45 minutes and shuttle from London to New York in an hour and a half.

The mask on his pressurized astronaut's suit had iced over. He could see nothing. Finally, his parachute popped at 15,000 feet and Weaver floated down — many miles from any sign of civilization.

"I was convinced I wouldn't be discovered for a long time," said Weaver.

But he was thrilled when he saw another parachute floating down — that of his systems controls analyst, the man who operates the sophisticated spy equipment.

Weaver mentally reviewed his survival training, and frightened an antelope as he came down in what turned out to be a remote corner of New Mexico. As he was fighting with his parachute, a voice said: "Can I help you?"

"There was this guy in this cowboy hat, straight out of a Marlboro ad," recounts Weaver. "If I had told Edwards Air Force Base I was going to crash at such and such a place at such and such a time, they couldn't have gotten there faster."

The rancher had been branding colts when he heard a tremendous explosion too high to see. But he kept watching the sky and when the parachutes popped open, he jumped in his helicopter and went to greet them.

Weaver had a cut on his nose. The other man, however, had broken his neck on the way out of the Blackbird and had drifted lifelessly to the ground.

The rancher insisted upon taking Weaver to a hospital.

"I don't know anything about helicopters, but I could see the red line, the safe mark, was 85 miles an hour and we were going well above that."

A test pilot thinks long and hard about a man who is killed when he is at the controls.

No Time To Warn Him

"Afterwards, I kept thinking of what I could have done differently that would have saved him. But I knew there was nothing. I didn't have time to warn him."

And the difference between test pilots and you and I is that Bill Weaver was back in the cockpit one week later, thundering another Blackbird into the atmosphere.

Times have changed, but test pilots are still a special breed. In one breath they deny it. They boast that they are pretty dull, that they spend most of their time on the ground laboriously working with the flight engineer on design and construction. They say it's not all that dangerous anymore, although the insurance companies don't buy that story.

The test pilots all know a close friend or a colleague who has bought it while flying. And when one of this elite group goes down, the word flashes through this international community before it ever comes out in the newspapers.

In the next breath, they admit that they are the cream of the aviator crop. It's a highly competitive field and no matter how good you are, if you are out for a few years, chances are you will never get back in. This kind of flying, these reflexes, these nerves to react, must never be allowed to dull.

They are far removed from the days when men in goggles and white scarves — the fastest and bravest men on the race circuit — were paid top dollar to try out new planes.

Now, almost all test pilots have engineering backgrounds, many with advanced degrees in aeronautical engineering. They have almost all come up through the military, and they know everything there is to know about a plane before they ever take it up.

They have even adopted their own aphorism.

Sheer Boredom. Panic

"To be a test pilot is to spend hours and hours of sheer boredom, followed by one moment of sheer panic."

And their own gag definition of the ideal test pilot: "He should have 5,000 hours in the air, a masters degree in aeronautical engineering and be 21 years old." Most are in their late 20s before they have the experience and training to qualify. Many continue as test pilots into their 50s.

And their own philosophy of life is something called the "guts to brains ratio," but then you would have to be a test pilot to understand it.

Test pilots earn from $25,000 to $70,000 a year with good fringe benefits. The first men to take the big planes off the ground — thereby proving that the engineers were right — also get nice bonuses.

Jack Waddell, the first man to pilot the massive 747 down the runway and up and away, was rumored to have received $100,000. He says it wasn't that much.

"Just say it was substantial. That would be accurate," says Waddell.

That bonus is not just for the first flight — it's for the rest of the testing, too, things like seeing how the plane recovers after a stall, how much faster it will go than the engineers say it should, and how many engines can be shut down in mid-flight without losing altitude.

Bus Drivers

Most of them could make more money by becoming commercial airline pilots, but that's not what they want to do. "The commercial airplane pilots are bus drivers compared with us," says Hank Hoffman, an Air Force major.

Test pilots in private industry say they pay 50% more for insurance than the man who lives next door. Often, however, the companies pick up the difference or insure them heavily during their take-off to landing moments.

Hollywood's top stunt pilot, Frank Tallman who was in attendance at the convention here, beat the system by insuring himself well before the insurance companies were quite so careful.

Tallman, who is 57 and has a wooden leg, was seriously injured while doing the stunt flying for "The Great Waldo Pepper." But he lost his leg from an accident with his son's go-cart, not in a plane crash.

The pilots downplay fear, preferring the word apprehension. An exception is ex-NASA test pilot Milt Thompson, 50. He was frankly scared when he tested the X-15, a 4,000-mile-a-hour number that is more rocket than plane.

He qualified his fear, saying he had not been in on the early testing and design and he felt he didn't know enough. "At that speed, it's a 15-minute flight," said Thompson. "I just told myself it's all going to be over one way or another in 15 minutes."

Everyone here has a good story, but one of the best belongs to Fox Stephens, whose name is synonymous with testing the Blackbird. The Fox, now a consultant in Washington for a German engine company, was flying one day down to Mexico in a single engine four-seater ... without enough fuel ... and a Standard Oil Road Map as his chief navigational aid.

This is the man the Air Force chose to test its most sophisticated reconnaissance craft, a tough, reliable, stable man, a man who plans ahead. Usually.

On this flight, he was heading for an unknown airport and presumed there was a city nearby. Wrong. He also figured that it would stay light a little longer. Wrong.

The night was moonless and starless and the Fox couldn't find the gravel runway. "Not to sweat," the Fox told his companions. He said it was always possible to put the plane down on the beach where there is more light.

The Fox alone knew just how low on fuel they were running.

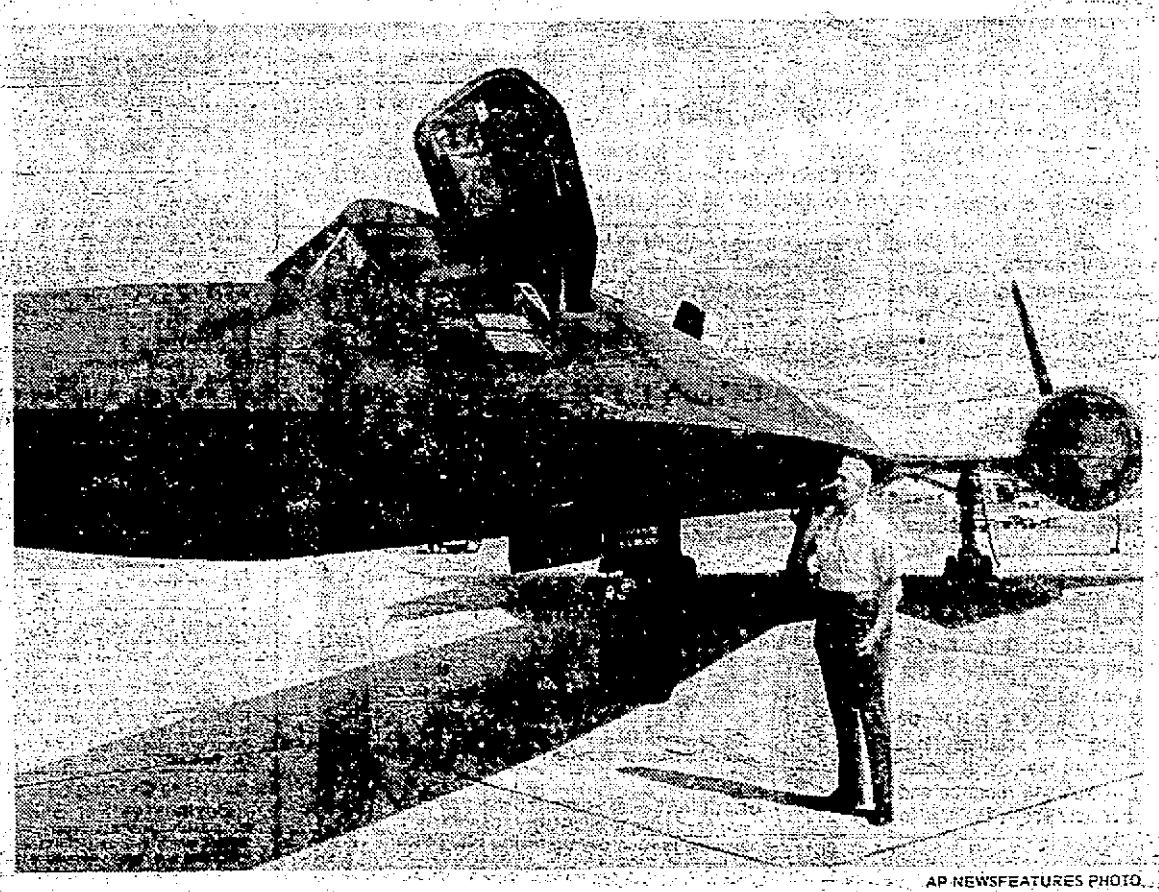

"Not to sweat," he kept repeating, fooling no one since his shirt was soaking wet. A buddy on the ground turned on the landing lights on his plane and then he talked the Fox down, with five minutes of fuel left.

Fox maintained they still could have made it to the beach. They went to see the beach the next day. Sheer granite cliffs rise straight up from the sea.

Crossing Guard Keeps Traffic Light

Drexel, N.C. (AP) — Drexel's police chief, Bill Lippard, began his career in law enforcement as a crossing guard outside an elementary school. And when the state replaced Drexel's four traffic lights last August, Lippard bought the one that winked at the school crossing at Main and Burns for 39 years.

It was installed in Lippard's front yard, and it blinks when the chief flips a switch inside his home.

Said Lippard, now 52: "I worked the crossroad when some kids I know started the first grade. I've seen those same kids graduate and get married. This light just reminds me of all that."

Priest Tired Of Turning Other Cheek

Los Angeles (UPI) — The Rev. Peter O'Sullivan, 66, a Catholic priest faced with a greedy robber, first turned the other cheek, as the Bible advises. But when he ran out of patience and cheeks to turn he clobbered the bandit.

Father O'Sullivan was awakened in the rectory of St. John Baptist De La Salle church by a burglar who held a knife to the priest's throat and said "Give me all the money — I've killed before."

Father O'Sullivan handed over $47. The robber demanded more, so the priest took another $647 out of the church safe. The bandit wanted still more, demanding the priest open an inner safe.

The exasperated priest turned and attacked the robber.

The noise of the fight awakened a housekeeper, who ran into the street where a police car was passing.

Jeffery Welch, 20, was arrested on suspicion of robbery and treated for bruises.

Government Awards Contract to Study Building Solar Power Station in Orbit

Washington (UPI) — The government is spending almost a million dollars to look for the best way of building solar power stations in orbit and beaming vast amounts of electricity back to earth.

The multi-agency contract awarded to Boeing Aerospace Co. launches the most serious study yet of how to tap the sun's energy 23,000 miles out in space, beam it earthward by microwave and use it to power the fuel-hungry.

If the dream turns to reality, bright new constellations of power satellites may sparkle in the night sky sometime near the end of this century.

Boeing experts say space power stations would be immensely expensive — so much so, in fact, they hesitate to predict the multi-billion dollar cost.

A single orbiting station might be up to nine miles across, generating as much electricity as several nuclear power plants, and ultimately there might be up to 30 such stations in space, they say.

But the experts also believe power satellites could pay for themselves if, as Boeing predicts, conventional fuel costs increase more than 30% in the next decade and more slowly after that.

"I am not going to tell you that power satellites are feasible," Boeing vice president Richard Taylor said earlier this year. "We think they may be, but this must be proved and it is no easy job."

The $970,000 study is financed jointly by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which awarded the contract, and the Energy Research and Development Administration. Boeing won over two other firms — Rockwell and Grumman — to get the award.

The contract is split into two phases.

During the first five months Boeing will examine the selection of solar energy conversion techniques and the location of their construction in space.

In the final seven months the company will try to compute as precisely as possible the costs of space power programs and seek ways to reduce the size of equipment that would be put in orbit.

Boeing and other aerospace firms have developed several concepts in the past several years for gathering the sun's boundless energy in space and beaming it to earth for use as electricity. Two of them:

— Orbiting a series of huge reflectors, covering perhaps 25 square miles, which would focus sunlight into a central furnace, heating gas to drive a turbine generator and produce electricity.

— Orbiting a huge field of solar cells that could transform sunlight directly into electricity.

Both concepts call for putting the satellites in orbit about 23,000 miles in space, where each would hover over a single spot on earth. Satellites would appear motionless when viewed from the ground and would be in sunlight 99% of the time.

Electricity generated by the satellite would be turned into microwaves, beamed to antennas some five miles in diameter on earth, turned back into electricity and fed into the normal power grid.

"Space-based solar energy never will be the entire energy answer," Taylor said. But, he said, one day people on earth may gaze up at "a string of power satellites twinkling in the night sky."

Cavett Returns Indian Museum Artifacts, New York Drops Suit

By Fred Ferretti
(c) New York Times.

New York — Dick Cavett has returned to the Museum of the American Indian four artifacts that the state attorney general's office charged he had obtained unlawfully from the museum.

The pieces — a beaded Sioux war shirt and buffalo robe, an Oto buffalo robe and a buffalo-hide shield with eagle-feathered deerskin covers — were the subject of a State Supreme Court motion for a summary judgment against Cavett that was sought by Atty. Gen. Louis J. Lefkowitz's office last July.

The court action grew out of the office's two-year investigation of the museum's deaccession, investment and financial policies.

The investigation has resulted in the dismissal of the museum's former director, Dr. Frederick J. Dockstader, the resignations of six trustees and an inventory of the museum's four-million-piece collection.

Last July, in demanding the return of the Indian pieces, Asst. Atty. Gen. Joel Cooper, who directed the state investigation, accused Cavett of "a reckless indifference to the legality of his transactions when the law clearly requires a much higher standard of conduct."

Cavett, through his lawyer, resisted until Thursday. Then he returned the pieces. They were picked up by a museum representative at the former Nebraskan's apartment and taken to the museum's Bronx research annex.

On Monday, as part of the return agreement, the attorney general's office and Landers will exchange stipulations in State Supreme Court — Cavett will attest to the return and Cooper will agree to drop the motion.

A spokesman for Lefkowitz refused to comment on the arrangement, except to confirm that the four items had been returned and that a court appearance was scheduled Monday.

Landers also confirmed the return and said: "Next week Mr. Cavett will have a full statement on the matter."

Investigation Continues

Meanwhile, the investigation of the museum goes on.

The inventory, was begun in January and is estimated to cost $100,000, is about one-third completed. It marks the first attempt to catalog the vast collection of Indian art and artifacts brought together early in this century by George G. Heye, an engineer who built a fortune out of his Standard Oil Co. investments.

The collection, which includes hundreds of thousands of arrowheads, as well as priceless pre-Columbian gold statuary, is regarded by art historians and anthropologists as the most comprehensive in its field. No attempt has ever been made to assess its monetary value.

According to court papers filed by the attorney general's office, Cavett's dealings with the museum and Dockstader went like this:

Dockstader would show interest in a piece that a dealer had — usually an item of pre-Columbian art — and would notify Cavett's accountant.

Value Hiked

The dealer would deliver the piece to the museum and pick up a check from Cavett's accountant. A clay figure was bought for $800, the attorney general said, and once it had been given to the museum it was valued at $2,000. Later, Dockstader would ask Cavett which museum pieces he would like to change from so-called "loan" status to "gift" status. This was done in connection with Cavett's income tax reports.

One letter, attached to court papers, shows that gifts which initially cost $17,700 when they were given to the museum, subsequently were valued at $39,735.

The papers charge: "Cavett's arrangement with Dockstader to obtain the artifacts from the museum were as follows: In exchange for 'donating' certain pre-Columbian artifacts to the Museum, Cavett received a full tax deduction on those items, plus four Plains Indian artifacts, i.e. the war shirt, shield and shield cover, and two buffalo hides. This constitutes a double benefit clearly prohibited by law."

Mystery Surrounds Woman's Fall from Ocean Liner

Port Elizabeth, South Africa (UPI) — Margaret Fuller stepped ashore Saturday "happy to be alive" but with mystery still surrounding her fall from an ocean liner into the sea and "million to one" rescue.

"If only I didn't have to face all those people down there," she murmured as she was helped down the gangplank by ambulance attendants. "But it's all over. I am so happy to be alive and home again."

Somehow, the 64-year-old Mrs. Fuller plunged from the deck of the ocean liner Windsor Castle five days ago as the 34,000-ton vessel plowed toward South Africa at 21 knots.

Somehow, she survived three hours in the shark-inhabited waters and 65-foot waves by swimming and floating.

And, in what Capt. Patrick St. Quentin Beadon called a "million to one chance," the Windsor Castle retraced its path and found Mrs. Fuller still treading water.

As she stepped ashore, her only son, Dick, grabbed her and hugged her tightly. Brushing aside reporters, they drove to a local hospital.

The captain refused to say whether Mrs. Fuller jumped or fell overboard.

"I am satisfied she was not pushed," Beadon said. "But that's a subject I will not discuss farther."

Still on board looking after the baggage, Mrs. Fuller's husband, Leslie, 71, irately told reporters not to invade his privacy. He said his wife had suffered a breakdown and "goes to pieces" whenever her ordeal is discussed.

He shook his head slowly as he watched her step ashore. "I don't know why people do things like my wife did," he said.

Friends said Mrs. Fuller was an accomplished swimmer and tennis player and her stamina must have saved her.

According to the crew, she walked out of her cabin Monday morning in a nightgown and robe, apparently going to shower.

Her husband reported her missing an hour later. Within minutes, Beadon had the vessel turned around and retracing its path, aided by bobbing beer cans and garbage scattered in its wake.

"She was about 70 yards from the ship when we found her," he said.

Four lifebelts were tossed out, but she missed them all.

"She didn't lose heart as we passed her," Beadon said. "When the ship was turned once more, it came up to about 30 yards from the victim. A lifeboat was lowered and a rope thrown to her.

"There was a look of utter relief," a crew member said, "and as she was pulled on to the lifeboat naked she fainted."

Her husband said, "It was a nightmare. I don't want to talk about it."

World Bike Trip Ends

RANDOLPH TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Twenty-seven months and 32,000 miles after he began, Robert Morris pedaled once around the Randolph High School football field Saturday to end his solo round-the-world bicycle odyssey.

The band played, the football game crowd cheered and Morris, 22,. was presented a key to the city at halftime.

Morris said he made the trip to "see the world, see the people and to see how they live." He had traveled through 30 countries in Europe, Africa, Asia and Australia. He went on to Hawaii and California and finally traversed late-autumn America in a meandering journey through 31 states.

Wearing a blue cap and blue sweatsuit, Morris dismounted from his bike. "I'm glad to be here," he said. "The worst part was waiting all day to get here."

Morris had spent Friday night in Hackettstown, only 22 miles away.

His mother, Julia, and his sister, Cathy, hugged and kissed Morris as his father, Robert, slapped him on the back.

When asked what he will do now, the younger Morris replied: "Maybe I'll do some bike racing. Other than that, I don't know; just go to work, get a job."

"I wish I could have gone," the elder Morris had said earlier in the day. He had not seen his son since a brief rendezvous last year in New Zealand. "It's hard to say what made him do it," the father said.

"He was in college and I could tell he was getting itchy," he said. "A bunch of his friends were sitting around one day, talking about it, and Robert decided to do it."

Morris said he had "no misgivings at all" about his son's trip. He said his wife, Julia, felt the same way.

To get in shape, the younger Morris bicycled to and from the New Jersey shore, between 80 and 100 miles round trip, before embarking on his solo journey, during which he averaging about 140 miles a day.

At a recent stopover in Harrisburg, Pa., Morris said he was disappointed by the lack of hospitality he received in the United States.

"It was a lot different from traveling across Europe or through some other countries," he said. "I really thought people in the U.S. would be friendlier than they were. But they're not as receptive, at first glance, to someone different. You can be riding along and people will just play with you. They have no respect for you."

Morris began pedaling across the continental United States after arriving in California in late August. A few days later, he received a shock while bicycling through Idaho.

He said, "I was minding my own business on the road when these guys drove up alongside in a pickup truck, put the barrel of a shotgun out the window and pulled the trigger."

The gun, however, was unloaded, leaving Morris more stunned than injured.

But there was good news, too.

"I never knew there could be so many good-looking girls in Montana," he said.

Chicken Lovers Wanted

Portland, Ore. (AP) — The Charles Merten family is seeking a new home for five of its members — after deciding that sending them to the butcher block "was just out of the question."

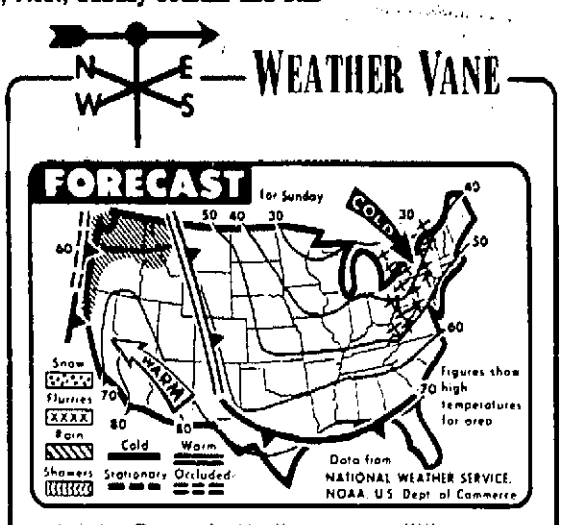

The city council ruled that their five pet chickens had to go. Authorities said the birds violated a city code, and neighbors complained they were noisy and lacked personal hygiene.

"Not so," protested Mrs. Merten. "They're neat and quiet and the children love them."

She said the family decided to put the two Plymouth Rocks and three Rhode Island Reds up for adoption and had already gotten calls from several interested families.

"We're going to spend the day checking out these homes," Mrs. Merten said. "We want to place the chickens in a warm family environment — with someone who will not only give them a good home but love as well."

Palestinians Claim Israelis Sink Boat

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli navy vessels sank a boat carrying Palestinian guerrillas and captured two other craft in a battle off the Lebanese coast Saturday, the military command said.

It reported that one Palestinian was killed and 12 were captured, including two who were wounded. The prisoners were taken to an Israeli navy base, a communique said. It added there were no Israeli casualties.

The Palestinian news agency WAFA reported in Beirut that the clash occurred near the Lebanese port of Sidon when Israeli gunboats intervened to aid two vessels manned by Lebanese Christians that had intercepted a freighter approaching the port. Sidon is controlled by the alliance of Palestinians and Lebanese Moslem leftists who use it to bring in arms and ammunition.

They are opposed by Lebanese Christian rightists in Lebanon's civil war, and there have been reports by battlefield witnesses that the Israelis have supplied the Lebanese Christians with military equipment.

The Israeli military command declined to comment on the Palestinian version of the naval clash. It has stated repeatedly that no Israeli troops are involved in the Lebanese war.

A command spokesman, questioned about the fight, said it occurred "in the north . . . outside territorial waters." That would place it near the Lebanese coast.

The Israeli state radio announced that Israel has started to supply isolated Christian villages in southern Lebanon with food. Israel previously had permitted Lebanese villagers to cross the frontier and buy food at Israeli stores, but the broadcast was the first report that Israel was sending food supplies into Lebanon.

Israel wants the Lebanese Christians to control southern Lebanon and its border zone with Israel to stop Palestinian raids into the Jewish state.

According to the Palestinian news agency, the battle near Sidon began when two patrol boats of the Christian's Phalange party intercepted the freighter and tried to force it to turn back.

Police Chief Might Be A Politician

Los Angeles (UPI) — Police Chief Edward M. Davis says he may go into politics.

Or he may go into business or "just plain loaf" when he retires in about a year, he said.

Davis has attracted nationwide attention in the past for controversial stands, including blaming women's liberation for increasing juvenile crime, and strong opposition to gun control laws and decriminalization of marijuana use.

Misfire

For a while Saturday it looked as if the Cowboys of Oklahoma State would pull off a Big Eight Conference stickup at Memorial Stadium. In the end things misfired for the mean dudes from Stillwater as the Black Shirts came to the rescue and the Cornhuskers prevailed, 14-10.

Chicago Mayor Daley Not Looking Back

By Pamela Reeves

Chicago (UPI) — Like Scarlett O'Hara, Chicago Mayor Richard Daley believes "tomorrow will be a better day," despite evidence to the contrary.

The losses his democratic machine suffered in last week's election were as wounding as Scarlett's loss of Rhett Butler in "Gone With the Wind." Daley appeared to face them with the same outlook she did.

"Dear, you never look back, you look ahead," Daley told a reporter when his defeats began to mount on election night, almost quoting Scarlett. "Tomorrow's a better day than today, my mother used to say."

Things to Consider

He said he would meet reporters the next day but instead flew off to Florida for a fishing vacation. This is what he had to consider in the Southern sun:

—Michael Howlett, the man Daley talked into running for governor, lost to Republican James Thompson by 1.3 million votes, a defeat unparalleled in Illinois history. Howlett lost all but two of the state's 102 counties, and he got only 56% of the Chicago vote.

—Jimmy Carter lost Illinois, even though he carried Chicago with 67.5% of the vote, which was better than the 63.6% John Kennedy got in 1960. The difference is there are fewer voters in Chicago now than there were 16 years ago.

—Edward Egan, the Democratic candidate for Cook County state's attorney, lost to the incumbent Republican. Chicago's Democratic organization considers it more important to win the state's attorney's office than the governor's chair or the presidency.

—Cook County voters removed Judge Joseph Power, Daley's former law partner, from the bench (according to unofficial returns).

—Alan Dixon, a Democrat from southern Illinois who wanted to run for governor this year but backed off when Daley picked Howlett, won election as secretary of state by a plurality of more than 1 million votes. Daley did not mention Dixon's victory in his brief meeting with reporters election night.

If all these losses and political miscalculations occurred under another Democratic leader, his demise would be immediate.

With Daley, a 73-year-old political institution, repercussions are likely to be slower and more subtle.

"Sure, there's a lot of grumbling," one politician said, "but with all the talk, it comes down to who will stand up and take him on. That's the key to it."

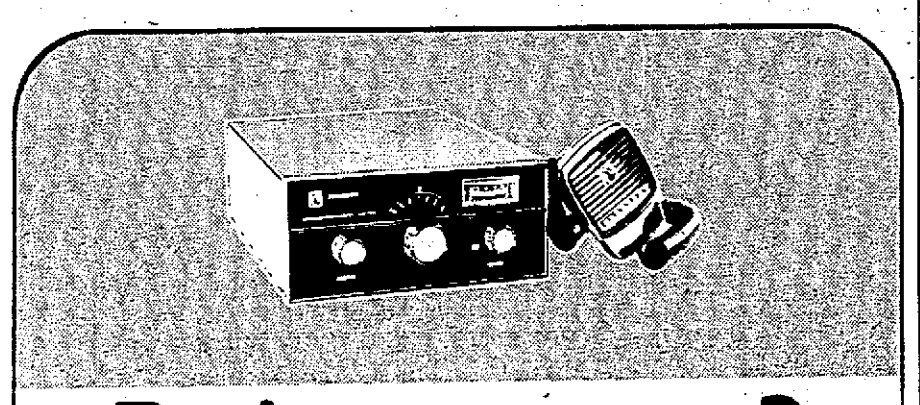

And another top Democrat said, "I just don't see anybody ready, willing and able to challenge Dick Daley."

Daley Minions

The same politicians, however, acknowledge that a major reason for Howlett's loss statewide, and for Egan's loss in the county, was that both candidates were effectively portrayed as Daley minions.

So they say, candidates who must count on votes outside the city of Chicago will think twice before they go with hat in hand to beg for slating from the Cook County Democratic Central Committee, which is Daley's power base.

"The real proof will come when we start reslating fellows for the county offices," one Democrat said. "They'll have to make a determination if they want to be subject to the same criticism Egan and Howlett were subject to. I think this time around you're going to see guys saying, "I'm a candidate' and not 'Dick Daley is my pal and he said I could run.' "

105 In Memoriams

Kabot Agnes, passed away 1 year ago today. The blow was hard the shock severe. We little thought that death was so near. She bade no one a last farewell, she said good bye to none. The heavenly gates had opened, a loving voice said come. And with farewell unspoken she gently entered home. We know our Mother sleeps in peace, but sad and lonely are the hearts that loved her most. Daughters, Grandchildren, Great Grandchildren, Great, Great Grandchildren. 7

WHERE ELSE?

WHERE ELSE can you have the comfort of high and gently rolling terrian away from the pressures of the city with conveniences and schools — elementary, high school and college — within 15 minutes of your home?

WHERE ELSE can you have miles of bridle paths to ride your favorite horse on high and scenic hills overlooking lakes and away from the danger of the highways?

WHERE ELSE can you have all the wonderful opportunities for summer and winter vacation right in your own year-round home?

NO PLACE ELSE are such benefits, amenities and opportunities for healthy family living available — except in ELSNER'S LAKESIDE ESTATES.

Autumn Snapshots

3COLOR3

(c) 1976 Chicago Sun-Times

My most satisfying color pictures of the year are made in the fall. I look forward to shooting the red and gold trees against pure blue skies and the children playing in the bronze-colored leaves.

A rule of thumb, or perhaps of shutter finger, is to include a variety of colors in your color pictures. Have some bright greenery on the ground; use the warm colors of the turning leaves such as red, yellow, or gold — and catch at least a patch of blue sky.

A trio of colors exists almost everywhere you look on a sunny fall day. The panoramic view of colorful trees make scenics filled with visual impact. But don't forget to take close-ups of single leaves, people framed by the colorful foliage, or backlighted single branches.

If you line up a subject for a medium-close fall portrait with colorful leaves in the background on a sunny day, and discover the subject's face is in the shade use a small flashbulb or flashcube. Flash your snapshot at a distance no less than 8 feet and no greater than 12 feet.

The flash illuminates the subject's face to match the brightness of the sunlit background. With the sunlit, backlighted leaves, you get a well-lighted, squintless portrait that is unusually colorful and different.

Before those colorful leaves blow away, brush up on your camera technique. Take time to practice basic procedures such as loading, focusing, figuring exposures, and plotting use of flash. Make proper camera procedure a habit.

Lack of sharpness is the most common fault of color pictures. Learn to squeeze the shutter button gently — don't poke it. Hold the camera steady. Find a comfortable way for holding the camera still. Keep your arms close to your body.

Practically, it is impossible to make sharp pictures at a shutter speed slower than 1-30th second, with a hand-held camera. For slower shutter speeds, use a tripod.

Keep your subjects smiling by shooting quickly once you position them beside colorful fall foliage.

Oscars Campaign Has Begun

By Bob Thomas

Los Angeles (AP) — The 1976 Oscars won't be presented until next March 28, but already the film studios are gearing up awards campaigns.

Sales chiefs are booking choice sites for their December releases — theaters in Westwood and Beverly Hills are preferred because most academy voters live near the area. Publicity departments have reserved the deluxe private screening rooms through January. The nominations will be announced on St. Valentine's Day.

Many Oscar hopefuls will receive mass releases throughout the country this month and in December. If they catch on with the public, a steamroller effect could influence Academy voters; monetary success is often equated with quality in their eyes.

The race cannot yet be judged, since some of the last-minute releases have not been previewed. At this point in the race, "All The President's Men," now in rerelease throughout the country, appears the front-runner.

Warner Brothers is making sure the Watergate film maintains its visibility, it's currently playing in more than 600 theaters and will be playing in some metro areas, including Los Angeles, well into 1977.

"When a film is released earlier in the year, you've got to book it locally to remind the voters," explains a publicity executive.

The year's releases so far offer few possible contenders. "All The President's Men" is likely to be nominated in most major categories, including Stars Dustin Hoffman and Robert Redford, and Jason Robards and Jane Alexander in support.

"The Omen" was a surprise blockbuster for 20th Century-Fox, and it may draw nominations for star Gregory Peck and director Clive Donner. The company's fiscal health was also revived by "Silent Movie," and it could be among the nominees, although the academy often overlooks comedy. Both films are in first release around the nation.

John Wayne appears a sure nominee for his dying gunslinger in "The Shootist," easily his best role since "True Grit." Although the film was not well received, "W.C. Fields and Me" could reward Rod Steiger with a nomination. Another repeater could be Walter Matthau for "Bad News Bears."

As in recent years, the field for best actress and supporting actress appears slender. There may be sentimental votes for the returns of Lauren Bacall in "The Shootist" and Audrey Hepburn in "Robin and Marian." Sarah Miles could get a mention for "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea."

Shelley Winters, already a double winner, seems likely to be in the supporting-actress race again with her Jewish mother of "Next Stop, Greenwich Village." Young Jodie Foster is another good choice for "Taxi Driver."

Robert DeNiro, winner as supporting actor in "The Godfather, Part II," may be competing with himself as best actor. He could be nominated for "Taxi Driver," "The Last Tycoon" or "1990," although it's undecided whether the latter will be released in 1976.

Another self-competitor: Faye Dunaway. She is being mentioned for both "Network" and "Voyage of the Damned."

"Marathon Man" might score for Dustin Hoffman instead of "All The President's Men." And "Network" is being touted for the star performances of William Holden and Peter Finch, and support by Robert Duvall.

December releases with high hopes include: "Bound for Glory," David Carradine, "The Last Tycoon"; "The Seven per cent Solution," Nicol Williamson, Alan Arkin; "Voyage of the Damned," Dunaway, Oskar Werner, Max Von Sydow, etc., "A Star Is Born," Barbra Streisand; "Silver Streak"; "Nickeodeon"; "Rocky."

And don't forget another Christmas release: If "Jaws" can be nominated as pest picture, why not "King Kong"?

Kris Kristofferson and Barbra Streisand in "A Star Is Born."

Modern Jazz Quartet Opens Society's Season

The Modern Jazz Quartet

The Lincoln Jazz Society opens its first concert season ever at 8 p.m. Tuesday with a concert by the famed Modern Jazz. The program will be in O'Donnell Auditorium on the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus. Single admissions are available, and society president Jack Hart said the possibility of a second season depends entirely on the success of this season.

Back together again for their first historic tour since breaking up in late 1974, the original musicians of the Modern Jazz Quarter — Milt Jackson, vibraharp, Percy Heath, bass; John Lewis, piano, and Connie Kay, drums — join in what jazz writer Leonard Feather calls "the best of the best."

Originally the rhythm section of Dizzy Gillespie's big band in the 1940's, the MJ, has had the longest life of any ensemble in the history of jazz. After the Gillespie orchestra disbanded in 1951, the quartet emerged as a formal entity.

In Europe no other American ensemble has so consistently filled concert halls and elicited such moving and enthusiastic ovations. In the U.S., the quartet has appeared at both the Newport and Monterey Jazz Festivals, and has also performed with over 30 symphonies. MJQ has teamed with the Juilliard String Qurtet for a Carnegie Hall concert and with the Fine Arts Quartet in Chicago.

The quartet has been featured on more than 30 recordings, mostly on the Atlantic label.

Lincoln High Vocal Concert

The Lincoln High School concert girls glee club and the sophomore girls glee club will present a free public concert at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the school, 22nd and J. Julie Knowles directs with assistance from student teacher Peggy Cable and accompanist Karen Howland. These groups are joined by the girls ennead and a boys ensemble, led by Joseph Skutchan.

NWU Jazz Concert Today

The Nebraska Wesleyan University Jazz Ensemble will be heard in a free public concert at 3 p.m. today in O'Donnell Auditorium, 51st and Baldwin. The group, directed by Larry Rawlins, will present a program of big band jazz featuring compositions by Artie Shaw, Woody Herman, Dominic Spera and others.

Cuban Film to Be Seen

The Cuban film "Memories of Underdevelopment" will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. today through Tuesday in the Sheldon Gallery film theater for members of the Nebraska Union Foreign Film Society. The setting is 1961 Cuba. A well-to-do intellectual sends his family to Miami but remains out of curiosity more than a revolutionary fervor.

Wesleyan's Orchestra Will Play

Eighteenth century music will be performed by the Nebraska Wesleyan University Orchestra in a free public concert at 8 p.m. Thursday in O'Donnell Auditorium. The orchestra is conducted by Prof. Robert Morrow.

Works to be performed are the "Impressario" overture by Mozart, Concerto Grosso in C Major (from "Alexander's Feast" by Handel, "Air" from "Suite No. 3" by Bach and Mozart's "Divertiment" K. 131 for flute, oboe, bassoon, four horns and strings.

Featured soloists for the Handel concerto will be Linda Bowen of Omaha and Nancy Nicolai of Lincoln, violins, and Barb Oehlerking of Lincoln, cello.

Two Schools Have Musical Shows

East and Southeast high school students are presenting musical shows at their respective schools this week. At East High, 70th and A, public performances of "Bye Bye Birdie" are scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday. At Southeast High, 37th and Van Dorn, there will be public performances of the Lerner-Loewe "Paint Your Wagon" at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

"Bye Bye Birdie" is set in Sweet Apple, Ohio, a locale suited to the humorous story that unfolds after the community turns out to give rock singer Conrad Birdie (who closely resembles Elvis Presley) a sendoff when his draft number comes up. Jeff Ehrlich has the role of Conrad. Jon Peterson and Dan Twarling direct the East High Singers production.

"Paint Your Wagon," set in the California gold fields of 1853, tells what happens when the world learns that prospector Ben Rumson (portrayed by Cameron Hinds) and his daughter (Anne Douville) have found a gold nugget in a creek bed.

Special Talks

Jerusalem (UPI) — Special lectures are offered by experts on municipal, political, economic and cultural affairs for visitors who want to learn more about Jerusalem than they would otherwise discover by visiting the usual tourist sites. Volunteer tourist service attendants at major hotels will advise visitors of the time and location of the lectures.

Students' Music Will Be Heard

The first of four concerts of original music by students of composition in the University of Nebraska School of Music will be presented at 8 p.m. Monday in Kimball Hall, 11th and R. The program includes compositions of Sarah Boslaugh, Warren Shaffer and Brenda Jennings.

The Lincoln Improvisation Ensemble, directed by Randall Snyder, assistant professor of music theory and composition, will play music organized by Warren Shaffer and Bruce Erwin. A multi-media experience entitled "Mew," combining the music of Snyder with slides by Tim Solien and the poetry of Russel Stanford, will feature the NU Percussion Ensemble, directed by Al Rometo, assistant professor of percussion.

The concert is free to the public.

'Iron Mask' Cast Grows

Hollywood (UPI) — Cornel Wilde, Jose Ferrer and Ian McShane have been added to the cast of "Behind the Iron Mask," starring Beau Bridges.

Woodwind Quintet Has Date at Kimball Hall

The Nebraska Woodwind Quintet will celebrate its fourth season by giving its 64th performance, this one at 8 p.m. Thursday, in Kimball Hall. The quintet is composed of University of Nebraska School of Music faculty members David Van de Bogart, flute; Robert O'Boyle, oboe; Wesley Reist, clarinet; David Kappy, French horn, and Gary Echols, bassoon.

The free public program will include Gyorgy Ligeti's "Six Bagatelles," Anton Reicha's "Quintet in E-flat Major, Opus 88, No. 2," Samuel Barber's "Summer Music, Opus 31," and Jean Absil's "Bulgarian Dances."

The Nebraska Woodwind Quintet, formed in 1973, has played for high school and community audiences virtually throughout the state and toured with the 1975 Chautauqua. Its members hold principal chairs in the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra and the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra.

Trio Performs Friday

The Nebraska Trio, composed of three members of the School of Music faculty at the University of Nebraska, will present a free public concert of music by Fanny Mendelssohn, Beethoven and Martinu at 8 p.m. Friday in Kimball Hall.

The Nebraska Trio, Arnold Schatz, violin, Priscilla Parson, cello, and Audun Ravnan, piano, will play "Trio in D Minor, Opus 11," by Fanny Mendelssohn, older sister of the famous Felix Mendelssohn. The program includes the "Trio in D Minor" by Bohuslav Marinu; written in 1952, this piece was performed at the opening of the Haydn Libary in Cambridge, Mass.

The trio will be joined by soprano Donna Harler in the performance of Beethoven's "Five Folk Songs for Voice, Violin, Cello and Piano." The folk songs — Scottish, Welsh, Irish and others — were arranged by Beethoven and were commissioned by Scottish publisher George Thomson.

Road Covers Turkish Coast

(c) 1976 New York Times

More than 300 miles of Turkey's coastline along the southern Mediterranean have now been linked by one continuous stretch of highway. Less than an hour's flight from Istanbul, Turkey's so-called Turquoise Coast is an unspoiled area of deserted beaches, tropical vegetation, Roman ruins and age-old town squares where local artisans practice their crafts.

'Fantastic Symphony' Scheduled

The University of Nebraska School of Music Symphony Orchestra, directed by Dr. Robert Emile, will present one of its popular afternoon concerts at 4 p.m. next Sunday in Kimball Hall. The concert is free to the public.

The symphony's first program of the season includes "The Fantastic Symphony" by the French composer Hector Berlioz. The five-movement symphony, also called "An Episode in the Life of An Artist," is developed around the theme of a young musician who has poisoned himself with opium in a fit of love-sick despair. The narcotic dose does not cause death but it throws the artist into a long sleep accompanied by extraordinary visions, uttered in the form of musical imagery.

Other works that will be performed by the Symphony are "Hansel and Gretel Prelude" by the 19th century German Engelbert Humperdinck, and "First Essay for Orchestra" by the American Samuel Barber.

Toscanini-Philadelphia Worth 35-Years' Wait

By William D. Laffler, UPI

When Artluro Toscanini and the Philadelphia Orchestra were brought together, a great event in musical history occurred. It happened in 1941 and 1942 during a period when Leopold Stokowski was leaving the Philadelphia scene and the young Eugene Ormandy was preparing to lead the noble orchestra into a new era.

Toscanini led the Philadelphia Orchestra as a guest conductor in some memorable concerts. The first complete release of those recordings made in 1941-42 is now available in the form of a five-LP set, "Arturo Toscanini — The Philadelphia Orchestra" (RCA CRM5-1900).

Although stereophonic sound was avilable, its use was not practical because most of the people who were buying records in those days were accustomed to a low-fidelity sound.

Even so, the technicians took loving care in putting the Toscanini triumphs in safekeeping for the future. Thus, the monophonic sound is excellent 35 years later and with Toscanini conducting who needs stereophonic playback?

The set includes Schubert's Symphony No. 9, Debussy's Iberia and La Mer, Berlioz' Queen Mab Scherzo, Respighi's Feste Romane, Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream, Richard Strauss' Death and Transfiguration, and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6.

Tchaikovsky's symphony No. 6, the "Pathetique," also may be heard on "The 3 Great Symphonies" (RCA CRL3-1838), with Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra of today.

This three-lp SET begins with Tchaikovsky's symphony No. 4, followed by the fifth. Those listeners who like to make comparisons may play the Toscanini and Ormandy readings of the "Pathetique," and take their choice.

Ormandy's reading of the fifth symphony is worth the price of the album.

Five Organ Works Commissioned

The second in a series of dedicatory festival programs featuring the new organ at Westminster Presbyterian Church, Sheridan and South, at 3 p.m. next Sunday. This free public vesper concert will feature world premieres of five works commissioned by the church for the festival.

They include: "Praise," a hymn by Erik Routley; "Concertante for Bells and Organ" by Donald Allured; "Teach Me My God and King," an anthem by Gerre Hancock; "Flourish and Voluntary on Sheridan," an organ work by Myron Roberts, and "Rhapsody: Te Deum Laudamus," a poem by Louis Endel.

Routley, born in England, he came to the U.S. a year ago to teach at Princeton (N.J.) Theological Seminary and Westminster Choir College.

Erik Routley

Former head of the organ department at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Roberts has published organ works that have become staples in the instrument's literature.

Endel, high school English teacher, had directed choirs at a number of churches and is in demand as a tenor soloist.

Routley will preach at Westminster's 9 and 11 a.m. services next Sunday and will introduce his own piece and will engage in a dialogue, on worship music, with the Rev. Robert Palmer. Gordon and Helen Betenbaugh, ministers of music and fine arts at Westminster, will conduct and play the organ.

Julie Wilson, 'Night Music' Visit Omaha

Omaha—The Stephen Sondheim musical "A Little Night Music" will have one public performance at 7:30 tonight in the Orpheum Theater here. The production, which includes the famed tune "Send in the Clowns," stars Nebraska's own Broadway actress Julie Wilson. The show's title is from Mozart's celebrated serenade. The story is suggested by the Ingmar Bergman film "Smiles of a Summer Night."

Cap Haitien Is Entry Port

Port au Prince, Haiti (UPI) — The Haitian government has designated the airport at Cap Haitien as an international port of entry, in a move to provide visitors with easier access to the historic north coast city.

The new facility at Cap Haitien, about 70 miles north of Port au Prince, is Haiti's second international airport.

Chicago Dance Group Visits Lincoln, Seward

Chicago Contemporary Dance Theatre opens its fall touring season with a week's residency in Lincoln and Seward.

The group will perform at First-Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D, at 8 p.m. Friday. The group then spends Saturday in Seward with a 1 p.m. workshop for students of dance at the Concordia Teachers College gym and a "body movement for non-professionals" workshop at 7 p.m. in the gym at St. John Lutheran School.

A "Hop, Skip, Run and Dance," presentation for children will be at 3 p.m. next Sunday and a master class in modern dance technique for intermediates will be at 7 p.m. at First-Plymouth Sunday.

On Nov. 15 there will be workshop presentations for school children of Seward County: grades K-4 at 12:45 p.m. and grades 5-9 at 2 p.m. in Weller Auditorium at Concordia College. The troupe will perform at 8 p.m. Nov. 16 in the Weller Auditorium.

Tickets for performances may be obtained at the doors.

Geri Meyer Atwood, orginally from Omaha, is a member of the troupe. She has BFA and MFA degrees from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. She received a Woods Memorial assistantship in 1968-69. During graduate school she started taking ballet lessons in Lincoln with Nancy Standley. She continued to study dance in Chicago with Maggie Kast, director of the Chicago Contemporary Dance Theatre. Ms. Atwood also teaches dance at the University of Chicago.

Geri Meyer Atwood

Two works she has choreographed, the sol. "Self-Portrait" and "Winter Wheat," a piece for five dancers, will be performed in Lincoln.

The residency is cofunded by the Mid-America Arts Alliance, the Nebraska Arts Council, the Seward Arts Council, First-Plymouth Church and the Concordia Concordia (College) Lyceum.

UNP Bison Winners

Rangers, railroads and religion headline the fall-winter list of Bison Book paperback offerings from the University of Nebraska Press.

Leading the roll call is James B. Gillett's Six Years With the Texas Rangers, reviewed on this page Sept. 12. In the days of the Old West, you might tangle with the sheriff and maybe even get away with it, but never, NEVER did you cross the Texas Rangers. Gillett tells why.

Richard C. Overton's Burlington Route is the first paperbound edition of this fine history of the Burlington Lines. Complementing it well is Robert E. Riegel's The Story of the Western Railroads. These two volumes are classics in western railroad history.

O-kee-pa is George Catlin's version of a Mandan religious ceremony and other customs. The illustrations alone make it valuable as a record of this vanished tribe of native Americans.

Two other books dealing with the red man grace UNP's Bison Book publishing schedule: American Indian Policy in the Jacksonian Era by Ronald N. Satz and Corn Among the Indians of the Upper Missouri by George F. Will and George E. Hyde. Serious students of Indian history cannot be without copies of these books on their library shelves.

Books

UNP continues its books about and by Willa Cather with Willa Cather Living by Edith Lewis and April Twilights (1903), Miss Cather's first book of poems.

The Saga of Tristram and Isond, translated by Paul Schach, is the first complete English translation of Tristrams saga, which in turn is a Norwegian adaptation of the French Tristan of Thomas of Brittany.

Ernest William Hornung's Raffles: The Amateur Cracksman contains the eight original Raffles stories, which drew high praise from George Orwell and Arthur Conan Doyle.

If you didn't catch Wright Morris' One Day in hardback, here is your chance to do so in paper. This fine Nebraska author scored another bull's-eye when he wrote One Day. Don't miss it.

Don't miss Mari Sandoz' Son of a Gamblin' Man, either. Within a documented historical framework, this novel re-creates the lives of the gambler who founded Cozad and of his younger son, who, as Robert Henri, became an artist and teacher.

On Reading

The hand of the writer should never be concerned with the eye of the reader.

— Jules Renard

Mediocre MacLean

The Golden Gate. By Alistair Maclean; Doubleday.

For any other adventure writer, this would not be a very good novel. For a writer with Alistair MacLean's reputation, it would be a bad one. But McLean's recent works have been so far below his reputation that The Golden Gate actually is the best MacLean thriller of the last few years.

What has happened to MacLean? Sometimes it seems as if he has forgotten how to write. As his plots have grown more elaborate and far-fetched and his heroes more unbelievable, his prose has become more stilted, almost Victorian.

Remember the crispness, the compulsion of the opening lines of some of his earlier novels? For example:

"If you could call a 10-by-6 wooden box mounted on a four-wheel trailer an office, then I was sitting in my office. I'd been sitting there for four hours, the earphones were beginning to hurt and the darkness was coming in from the swamps and the sea" (Fear is The Key, 1961).

"The wind blew steadily out of the north and the night air was bitter chill. Nothing moved across the snow. Under the high cold stars the frozen plain, empty, desolate, stretched endlessly away, on every side until it vanished into the blurred distance of an empty horizon. Over everything lay the silence of death" (The Secret Ways, 1959).

Now look at the convoluted and forced opening lines of The Golden Gate: "The operation had to be executed with a surgically military precision marked with a meticulousness that matched, in degree if not in scope, the Allied landings in wartime Europe. It was. The preparations had to be made in total stealth and secrecy. They were."

Nothing. No zip. Pretensious.

As for the plot, in suspense fiction, almost anything goes nowadays — the more outlandish, the better. And the kidnaping of a president is fairly commonplace.

In MacLean's version, the president is taken hostage while escorting Arab oil potentates and newsmen in a bus caravan across the aforementioned bridge. A gaggle of expert crooks infiltrates the caravan, cuts it off in midbridge and holds it for $500 million ransom.

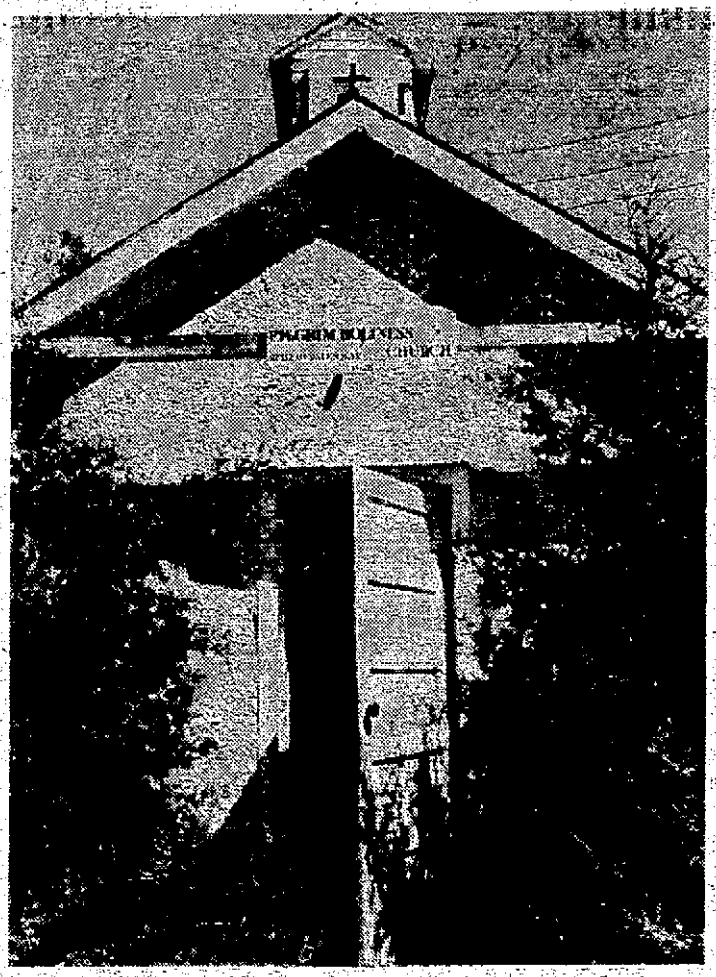

The problem then becomes one of "let me show you how clever I am in getting them out of the impossible mess I have gotten them into."

Of course it can't be done reasonably. Outlandish characters and methods have to be employed. The crooks are so supercompetent that only a super supercompetent cop can counter them, and lo, he is already on the scene among the captives — the next-in-line to head the FBI, disguised as a press photographer — and manages to undermine, outwit and capture the 18 or so kidnapers.

There's no sense going into the unbelievable devices MacLean uses; he also is sloppy with facts. After all the discussion of the actual pardon of Richard Nixon, why must MacLean's presidential pardon be approved by Congress? And the not-very-thrilling scene with a battleship is made even less so when one realizes that the U.S. Navy has no battleships.

Still, The Golden Gate is better than Breakheart Pass or The Way to Dusty Death or Caravan to Vaccares. Or maybe it's just that I'm hoping MacLean has turned the corner and soon will get back to his old style. —Myron Beckenstein

Who? What? Where? When?

Last Week's Picture

This Cass County structure, a landmark for more than 80 years, no longer stands. It was razed in 1968 after a colorful history. Built in Plattsmouth in the 1880's on land once owned by Peter Sarpy, for whom Sarpy County was named, it was built to house an alfalfa mill. During the 1930's it was used by the Hiatt Basket Factory. It was sold in the 1940's to a group planning to establish a roller rink, but that never materialized. It was next occupied for a time by the Sodum Truck Body Factory. Plattsmouth's King Korn Karnival Klub used it as a warehouse before it was sold to C.A. Ruse, the last owner, who also used it for a warehouse.

Skynyrd Encores Southern Though Rebel Flag Folded

By Abe Peck

San Francisco (AP) — With the breakup of the Allman Brothers band, Lynyrd Skynyrd seems to be the No. 1 exponent of rock's Southern Sound.

Skynyrd's aggressive, guitar-dominated music may be as close to the very un-Southern British rockers as it is to the Allman's more lyrical blues-rock hybrid, but its most famous single, "Sweet Home Alabama," defends Dixie's honor.

And "One More From the Road," the band's new two-record album, has won a gold record, although it was released only in September. That's five consecutive golds, more than the total for Marshall Tucker, Charlie Daniels and the Outlaws combined.

Nevertheless, just before a fall show at the 8,000-seat Pavilion, Skynyrd guitarist Gary Rossington remarked that the Southern Sound is just a fad, dying away. He explained. "A while ago, David Bowie and Alice Cooper were doing their crazy thing and music was secondary to the show. Then the Southern thing came out and it was all music. Nobody did a show or got dressed up. Now it doesn't matter where you're from. It's how good you are."

Skynyrd has folded its Confederate flag backdrop but still salutes its roots by encoring with "Free Bird," its tribute to the founder of the Allman Brothers, Duane Allman.

"They were the Beatles of the South," Rossington said of the Allmans.

It was strange to talk with Rossington about the Allmans. After all, Gregg Allman, the last of the Allman brothers, is in disfavor in the world of rock for testifying against his former road manager, Scooter Herring, in a cocaine case. Herring was sentenced to 75 years imprisonment for a narcotics conviction. Angry Allman band members decided that they no longer wanted to play with Gregg. So the band broke up during the summer.

"From the Road" was recorded over three nights in early July at the Fox Theater in Atlanta. The album plays like a Skynyrd Show, containing songs like "Saturday Night Special" and "Free Bird."

"From the Road" also marked the first time in three albums that the band has had the seven-man, three-guitar lineup it enjoyed before Ed King quit in mid-1974.

"We used a session guitarist named Barry Harwood on 'Nuttin' Fancy' and 'Gimmie Back My Bullets,'" noted Leon Wilkeson. "When we were in Europe last fall, he sat in with us. That's when the search for a third guitarist began."

The favorite candidate was former mountain man Leslie West but he was unable to overcome contractual obligations. Skynyrd eventually chose Steve Gaines, whose sister Cissy is one of the group's three backup singers.

"Skynyrd came to Kansas City for a concert," said Gaines, an amiable Oklahoman who at the time was part of a local band called Crawdaddy. "I sat in for a number and they liked it. They flew me down to Jacksonville, and Allen and Gary and I would sit in Leon's living room all night and rehearse. Two weeks after I joined the band, we recorded the album. Now I'm with them full-time. Isn't that amazing?"

Rossington candidly admitted that "From the Road" was not exactly a great creative leap forward. "We only did three songs we'd never recorded. 'T for Texas,' 'Travelin' Man' and 'Crossroads.' It's just us live."

Rossington's remark about Skynyrd "live," brought to mind the band's rowdy reputation. On its early "torture tours" of 250 concerts in 300 days on the road, Skynyrd players let off steam with such niceties as throwing a table out of a London hotel window. Once a guitar launched into a New York theater audience cut the face of a girl seated in the first row.

Asked about the band's reputation, Wilkeson demurred. Rising fortunes, he said, have eliminated the torture tours. "It's not as rowdy as it used to be. But, occasionally you do get pressurized and break up a room."

Puppet Show At Playhouse

The fall session puppet class of the Lincoln Community Playhouse, directed by puppet masters Lee and Sam Ridge, will present a puppet program at 3 p.m. Saturday and next Sunday at the Playhouse, 2500 So. 56th. The demonstration/production will feature "Thumbelina", "The Donkey's Tale" and an Aesop fable, plus one or two short acts that incorporate all types of puppets, from basic hand puppets to string marionettes. Most of the puppets were made by the students in the class.

Budget Travel List Mapped

(c) 1976 New York Times

The latest edition of "America on $8 a night" by Ellen and Robert Christopher contains a fold-out map of the United States that gives the locations of budget-class motels and the toll-free numbers of 13 low-priced motel chains. The compilation is the first of its kind, according to the authors, who have been publishing their guide to inexpensive accommodations and restaurants for the past four years. Inquiries may be addressed to the Christophers, Box 47, Milford, Conn.

Art Show Open Today At Prison

The annual prison art exhibit, sponsored by the Nebraska Penal Art Club, continues from noon to 6 p.m. today and next Saturday and Sunday. The exhibit is at the Nebraska Penal Correctional Complex Training Bldg., 14th and Pioneers. Included are paintings, drawings, woodcarvings, bead and leatherwork by prisoners at the Penitentiary and Reformatory units.

Therien Show, Fair Opening

Paintings and drawings by Robert Therien will be on exhibit at the Sheldon Art Gallery, 12th and R, Tuesday through Dec. 5. The Christmas fiar in the gallery's art shop also opens Tuesday, running through Dec. 23.

Among featured items are soft toys with sculptured faces by Martha Nelson of Louisville, Ky. They are described by Page Spence, shop manager, as "Marvelously ugly."

Also on hand will be cloth figures by Lee Ridge, wooden toys by Larry Schweitzer, hearthside candles made from latex molds from cut glass pieces; ceramics, handwoven items and small Christmas decorations.

Skutchan Work

An exhibit of pen and ink drawings and acrylic paintings by Millard artist Linda A. Skutchan is on display at the Cengas Bldg., 1201 N, through November. Ms. Skutchan, a Doane College graduate, teaches at Metropolitan Technical Community College in Omaha. She's a Crete native.

Scott Batiks

Batiks by Claudine Scott are on display at the Unitarian Church, 6300 A, through November. A graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University, she has since studied at Colorado State University in Ft. Collins and with Matsuo Yanagihara of Kyoto, Japan.

State Exhibits

Grand Island — The acrylic and watercolor paintings by Russ Hamilton of Fremont are to be seen Monday through Dec. 12 at the Stuhr Museum here. In the museum's print room is an exhibit of watercolors by Barbara Saum of Kearney.

Omaha — A 7 to 10 p.m. opening of the second annual all-member show will be held Friday at the Artists' Cooperative Gallery, 424 So. 11th. The show hangs through Jan. 9.

Creek Saving Effort Starts

Boise, Idaho (AP) — An effort is under way to save Idaho's Silver Creek, a favorite trout stream of author Ernest Hemingway.

Under the auspices of a new land conservation program, The American Land Trust, a corporate grant of $100,000 has been made toward the protection and preservation of this fishing and wildlife area 25 miles southeast of Sun Valley.

The American Land Trust is an organization of national leaders in conservation, business and civic affairs.

Answer Was Hardly In Musical Context

The Arts of Living

By Helen Haggie

Puckish Alfred Frankenstein, art critic for the San Francisco Chronicle, not only loves a good story but loves to repeat it.

On the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus recently Frankentstein told this one:

"One of my dearest friends is Shirley Fleming, editor of Musical America. Though she has lived in Nwe York for 15 years, she still has a very thick native Georgian accent.

"Recently she was asked, 'What do you think of Carter?' Her reply, 'I think his third quartet is extremely difficult to listen to.'

"The questioner of course was thinking of the presidential candidate Jimmy. The questionee was thinking of composer Elliot."

But Frankenstein can be serious too. "When a university has a man who can create an opera as great as the one I heard last night (Robert Beadell's "The Number of Fools") that university must have an outstanding music department."

Beadell is professor of music at the University.

The Arts Information Center in the greater Los Angeles area has started a unique service.

An Arts Hot Line has been set up and is available free of charge to the entire public.

Volunteers will man phones from 2 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon to 4 p.m. They will be able to provide specific information on arts events in many disciplines.

Sounds like a wonderful idea for a city to assist visitors.

The work of two Lincoln artists, Olga Stepanek and Louise Shepard, is being displayed in the offices of Dain Kalmain & Quail, in the National Bank of Commerce Bldg. The art can be seen from the lobby.

Ms. Stepanek's handsome metal collage and Ms. Shepard's "Rabble Rousin," an oil, and "Ole Bigfoot," a watercolor and collage are a part of the company's permanent collection.

Harry Ware, vice president, says "We are building our permanent collection with works by Lincoln artists."

Ms. Stepanek proudly announced her 70th birthday in a recent forum talk at Nebraska Wesleyan University. Ms. Shepard, 71, had one of her drawings accepted for the small sculpture and drawing show at Elder Gallery at NWU.

Speaker Site Matters

By Robert C. Marsh

(c) 1976, Chicago Sun-Times

Sooner or later, they had to arrive. We now have loudspeakers that can cope, speakers that fight back in poor acoustical settings, speakers that sound good in situations where other speakers would fail.

The worst thing you can do to most compact speaker systems is to place the unit right on the carpet, some distance from a wall. It happens every day, often because it is the most convenient location. Acoustically it's murder. The carpet soaks up sound, especially the low bass, and the middle- and high-frequency tones, released into the room at a low height, cannot be reflected uniformly through the listening area.

A speaker that sounded grand in the dealer's showroom suddenly becomes rather dreary and thin in quality. It's really your fault, but major complications are introduced by the design of the speakers.

Some recent designs provide three speakers (for low midddle and high frequencies). There are also three environmental controls, one for each frequency band. Put it on the carpet if you wish, and you can raise the level of the bass to compensate. Put it on a smooth floor surface (which boosts bass) and you can make the needed adjustments the other way.

Can't you do the same thing with tone controls? No, tone controls may make the bass seem louder without actually doing much to extend its range. You may end up with some unpleasant peaks in the frequency range of your speakers. (A more complex type of unit called a room equalizer can do the job, but now we are talking about big money.) These speakers are not inexpensive. A pair costs around $850, but you are getting a compact speaker system that can deal with these dreadful situations. Want to save $200? Fine. Lift the speaker up off the floor. Put it against a wall. Then you don't need that bass environmental control.

As some loudspeaker designers see it, much of the problem of speaker placement results from the fact that speakers are rectangular boxes that project sound from the front. Some new speakers are triangular and the sound enters the room at a 45-degree angle to the wall. They stand on the floor, and optimum spacing between the bass driver and the floor surface is built into the cabinet. You can't get it wrong. The result is a phenomenon called room-matched sound. The reflection patterns are well controlled, and the effect is rather like a concert hall. You can sit anywhere and you get a nicely balanced effect without losing stereo qualities of a good recording.

This type of speaker is big and expensive. The line begins around $360 a speaker and descends slowly.

Trip to Europe Buy of Winter

By John Justin Smith
(c) 1976, Chicago Daily News

If you want to see Europe at low cost, think winter — this winter. More and more reasons are piling up as to why this is so.

One very big reason: Those charters-for-everybody fares approved recently by the Civil Aeronautics Board are about to become a reality. When they do, you'll be able to fly to many places across the Atlantic for 40 to 60% less than economy fares.

Another reason for considering a winter trip to Europe: The dollar is in fairly good shape in many countries — and in excellent condition in a few.

Great Britain is one of the few. A year ago, the British pound cost $2.11. Today it's not much over $1.50.

True, prices have risen in England — but not as much as the dollar has increased in value compared with the pound.

The result is that shopping is going to be very pleasant for the winter tourist — so pleasant that British Airways has put together some special tours just for shoppers.

One is a combination shopping and theater-going trip at $130 (plus air fare) for a week's stay. This price includes a hotel room with bath, continental breakfasts, airport transfers in London, four theater tickets, an empty suitcase for the things you buy, a shopping guide, a fashion show, sightseeing in London and a variety of discounts at shops and restaurants.

Now let's take a look at an area where the dollar is not doing as well as in Britain: Scandinavia. Frankly and bluntly, prices are high, but you can get good value for your money.

Scandinavian Airlines (SAS) has many winter packages and we'll cite just one example: You can do a week of skiing in Norway for as little as $619, including round-trip air fare between Chicago and Lillehammer. The price also includes lodging, most meals and airport transfers.

Dimitri N. Vlachos, director of the Greek National Tourist Organization office, put it this way:

"Things are more relaxed in winter. In Athens and south of there, the weather is good enough for you to be able to sit comfortably in an outdoor cafe.

Athens has an average of 24 days without rain in January and the temperatures often get into the 60s.

Paris is less warm and does see a lot of gray skies in winter. But it also has its special joys. A couple of remembrances of a winter afternoon in Paris: Notre Dame had a special warmth and feeling of solitude. The Louvre was nearly free of tourists and you could move where you wanted, when you wanted. The waiter in the glass-enclosed sidewalk cafe smiled and even said, "Hello."

You also can use Paris as a jumping off place to a sunnier spot. Air France has put together a package that takes you first to Paris and then on to Marbella on Spain's Costa del Sol. You do a day and a half in Paris and then six days in the Atalaya Park Hotel in Spain.

Switzerland and Austria in winter sell what they have the most of — snowy mountains. The ski packages to the Alps (and don't forget the French Alps) are almost beyond counting.

Swissair knows that not everybody likes to put sticks on his feet and slide down a mountain. So it has a variety of tours that take you from cities to villages. A typical package offers seven nights in Switzerland and/or Austria and the price is $70 to $140 a week, plus air fare.

Duty Free Shopping

New York (UPI) — The city of Bangor, Maine, is taking a leaf from the book of the famous Louisiana privateer, Jean Lafitte, in its effort to make its $100 million airport a good thing.

Lafitte helped Andrew Jackson defeat the British in the Battle of New Orleans. He also was famous for providing the well-to-do of the Creole City with duty-free wines, perfumes and other luxuries.

That's just what Bangor is getting ready to do for up to half a million transatlantic charter flight passengers who stop at its airport each year. The duty-free shop at Bangor Airport, perfectly legal, bears the name Buccaneer in frank recognition that for centuries trading in duty-free goods was carried on by smuggling pirates like Lafitte.

The Bangor duty-free shop is owned by Intercontinental Trailsea Corp. of New York, which has a string of such shops along the border between Maine and Canada.

Bangor Airport is the former Dow Air Force Base, takeoff point for most of the bombers and fighter planes ferried to Britain in World War II. Bangor, a city of only 36,000, took over the huge airport when the air force pulled out in 1964.

Says airport manager Peter D'Errico, "We have built up a huge transatlantic charter flight business in the past decade. Charter lines find the uncrowded conditions at Bangor save them a lot of time and money and are more convenient and cheaper for charter passengers than the giant airports at New York, Washington and Boston."

Bangor also is building a substantial business as a refueling stop for scheduled airlines from eastern Europe — Poland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, for example.

D'Errico sees a most lucrative future in the Buccaneer duty-free shop. The airport's layout is being reoriented so that departing passengers are a captive market for the shop which sells liquors, perfumes, cameras, watches, sweaters, cigarets and tobacco, games, calculators and other luxuries at prices about 50% lower than they can be bought elsewhere.

The duty-free shopping business, depending on exemptions from customs duties allowed tourists on small amounts of luxury goods, has such shops in 20 U.S. cities now.

Visitor May Be Promoter

Minden — Person-to-person, word of mouth is the most effective promotion that the Harold Warp Pioneer Village here receives. Recent analysis of a survey made of visitors to the tourist attraction showed that 58% learned from friends back home about the recreated village that shows "How America Grew." More than 3 million people have traveled here to see the village and its exhibits.

Old Trails Postmark For Show

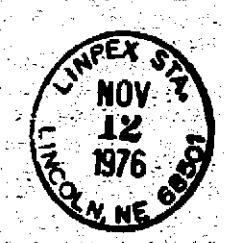

The Lincoln Stamp Club holds its annual philatelic exhibition, LINPEX '76, at the Radisson-Cornhusker Hotel, 13th and M, Friday through next Sunday. In accord with its bicentennial theme, "Ethnic Heritage of the Great Plains", a special show cancellation reminiscent of the 19th century cork cancels has been authorized by the U.S. Postal Service for mailings from the show. It uses an outline map of Nebraska, with a broad band marking the Platte River, route of the Oregon and Mormon trails.

Also in keeping with the show theme, principal awards will be original medals reproducing the design of the 4-cent Trans-Mississippi issue, depicting a mounted Indian hunting buffalo. The Grand award will be a sterling silver medal, 2¾ inches in diameter. LINPEX '76 exhibits will be grouped in categories.

Show hours are 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. next Sunday. The awards banquet is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Saturday. LINPEX chairman is Kenneth Pruess, 1441 Urbana Lane, Lincoln, NE 68505.

Capitol Pictured On a Double Eagle

By Leon Lindheim
Special Writer

Did you know that the Capitol in Washington, D.C., is pictured on a U.S. coin?

The double eagle or $20 gold piece, minted from 1907 to 1933, shows the Capitol in minute size in the lower left-hand corner on the obverse side of the coin.

This is the coin considered by many to be the most artistic ever designed in the United States series.

The position is well-taken, since it is the work of the famous Irish-American sculptor, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, who was commissioned by Theodore Roosevelt to redesign the U.S. eagle and double eagle.

Q: I inherited a set of eight coins of South Africa dated 1934. The envelope they came in says they are "proof." What are they worth? H.S.

A: You have an extremely rare set of coins. According to mint records only 24 sets were struck. I am inclined to agree that this figure is correct since I have not heard of a set offered for sale since 1941. Even the "Standard Catalog of World® Coins" by Krause and Mischler have it unpriced, meaning that none have been sold (at least publicly) for over a quarter of a century. My guesstimate is to value has to be in the range of $10,000 or more.

Booklet

"Welcome to Coin Collecting" is an instructional, illustrated 16-page booklet that fully explains mint marks, conditions of coins and other subjects for collectors. To get your copy, send a large (No. 10) stamped, self-addressed envelope to Leon Lindheim, in care of Focus, The Sunday Journal and Star, Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501.

At last: 'Gone With the Wind'

NBC Thinks $10 Million Buys 110 Million Audience

By Jerry Buck

Los Angeles (AP) — What can you say about a 37-year-old movie that refuses to die?

That it's the greatest epic film ever made. That it's one of the most acclaimed pictures of all time. That more than 150 million people worldwide have seen it — many again and again.

That NBC paid an estimated $10 million — the highest price ever for a movie — to televise it tonight and Monday night.

The movie is, of course, "Gone With the Wind," adapted from Margaret Mitchell's sweeping novel of the Civil War.

Outside of a showing on the Home Box Office cable service this summer, "Gone With the Wind" has never been seen on television. It is the last major motion picture made before 1970 to make it to the small screen.

"Gone With the Wind" has already been seen in theaters by more people than any other movie — and NBC believes it will draw the biggest audience ever for a movie on television. It estimates 110 million people will tune in. The most widely viewed movie to date on TV was "Ben-Hur," which attracted 86 million people in 1971 on CBS.

If NBC's audience estimate is correct, it will be well worth $10 million. It would knock NBC through the roof in the ratings for two weeks — since the Sunday part would be in one ratings week and the Monday part would start the next week.

The first part, running three hours, will be shown tonight and the second part, running two hours, will be on Monday.

After produr David O. Selznick bought the film rights from Miss Mitchell, the public demanded that Clark Bagle play the role of Rhett Butler. British actress Vivien Leigh was cast in the much-sought-after role of Scarlett O'Hara following a two-year talent hunt. She went on to win an Academy Award as best actress. In all, the film won 10 Oscars, including best picture for 1939.

Welsh Miner Community Is Portrayed

"How Green Was My Valley," Richard Llewellyn's warm robust portrait of a Welsh mining town and a family who lived in it, will be seen on Masterpiece Theatre on KUON and Nebraska ETV beginning tonight at 8, with repeat telecasts at 11 p.m. Fridays.

The six-part television adaptation of the 1939 bestseller tells the story of a tightly knit family, dependent on each other and on the coal pits from which they draw their livelihood. It was filmed on location in South Wales.

The people involved in the television production have strong roots in that very same land. Stanley Baker, Sian Phillips, Nerys Hughes and Rhys Powys, who play the principal roles, were born in Wales and scriptwriter Elaine Morgan's father was a union leader and her father-in-law was a pitman.

"How Green Was My Valley" was made into an Academy Award-winning movie in 1941.

Presidents

At 7 p.m. Tuesday KUON and the ETV stations will present the first program in a dramatic trilogy dealing with Presidents Washington, Lincoln and Truman. The 90-minute programs will be seen on consecutive Tuesdays.

This week's is Maxwell Anderson's "Valley Forge," set in the winter of 1777-78 and focusing on the leadership of George Washington (portrayed by Richard Basehart).

Family Hour's End Unmourned

By Bill Granger

(c) 1976 Chicago Sun-Times

It seems more and more likely that the elaborately constructed fraud called television family hour will be quietly buried by the three commercial networks even as its architect Arthur Taylor departs as CBS president.

The passing of family hour will have few mourners.

The creative community in Hollywood will not miss it. Indeed, moans arise nightly from the leather-buffeted bars along Sunset Strip as writers, directors, producers and hangers-on cry that family hour has killed originality — though the rest of us might be forgiven if we doubt most of the creators of TV's rolled-oats programming would know originality if it bit their noses off.

The general public will not miss it. From the beginning shows designed for family hour have sunk to the bottom of the ratings like so many pebbles thrown into the sea. "The Montesfuscos" — like "Doc" — did not play well in Peoria.

And apparently now, the networks will not miss it. The inability of most network programming personnel to judge what is suitable for family hour — and what will still be watched by the general public in numbers sufficient to attract much advertising — is obvious to all. No one — at least of all, network personnel — has really understood what the family hour was supposed to be.

Family hour was the pet programming concept designed by Taylor. It probably showed more than anything else, Taylor's inability to deal effectively with television problems. Family hour was supposed to take the heat off the networks, which had been getting dangerously potent criticism from congressmen and critics.

It didn't do the job. The criticism of network violence has become greater.

And so, it appears that family hour is being quietly abandoned. Examples:

- NBC decided to air the excellent, but decidedly adult, "Day of the Jackal" in the family hour slot when a rainstorm delayed the Cincinnati Reds' demolition of the New York Yankee myth during World Series week. There was at least one not-subtle murder shown before the end of family hour.
- NBC also decided to air the wenching, shooting and tooting bit of trash called "Baa Baa Black Sheep" in family hour during a special two-hour premiere. At first, CBS filed an objection to this blatant violation of the family hour code . . . and then, just as quickly, withdrew it.
- CBS has moved the Mary Tyler Moore Show — a sophisticated comedy that has never been in the family hour slot before — in an attempt to save the network's Saturday ratings situation. Remember, according to the silly family hour code sex comedies were also supposed to be verboten early in the evening.
- ABC Television President James Duffy has carefully circulated a long speech attacking

NBC Thinks $10 Million Buys 110 Million Audience

By Jerry Buck

Los Angeles (AP) — What can you say about a 37-year-old movie that refuses to die?

That it's the greatest epic film ever made. That it's one of the most acclaimed pictures of all time. That more than 150 million people worldwide have seen it — many again and again.

That NBC paid an estimated $10 million — the highest price ever for a movie — to televise it tonight and Monday night.

The movie is, of course, "Gone With the Wind," adapted from Margaret Mitchell's sweeping novel of the Civil War.

Outside of a showing on the Home Box Office cable service this summer, "Gone With the Wind" has never been seen on television. It is the last major motion picture made before 1970 to make it to the small screen.

"Gone With the Wind" has already been seen in theaters by more people than any other movie — and NBC believes it will draw the biggest audience ever for a movie on television. It estimates 110 million people will tune in. The most widely viewed movie to date on TV was "Ben-Hur," which attracted 86 million people in 1971 on CBS.

If NBC's audience estimate is correct, it will be well worth $10 million. It would knock NBC through the roof in the ratings for two weeks — since the Sunday part would be in one ratings week and the Monday part would start the next week.

Bronson Role

Charles Bronson plays Israeli Gen. Dan Shomron in "Raid on Entebbe," the three-hour NBC-TV movie on the daring Israeli operation.

"Ara's Sports World" will be seen on (10)(C)(11) at 1 p.m. Saturday. In each program of this non-network series Notre Dame's former football coach Ara Parseghian presents three major sports events and a superstar. During the shows these giants of athletics work with kids, demonstrating important techniques of their respective sports.

Mississippi Waterway

Farmers who ship grain to gulf ports will be especially interested in KUON-ETV's Farm Digest at 6 tonight and next Sunday. The program will be about the controversy which surrounds a U.S. Corps of Engineer proposal to reconstruct the locks and dam No. 26 on the Mississippi River near Alton, Ill. At odds over the issue are the waterway and barge interests, who want the system rebuilt, and the railway and environmental interests, who generally do not. In the middle is the farmer whose grain goes to gulf ports either by barge or rail.

Family Hour Is Fading

critics of gratuitous violence on the tube. He has called such criticism overblown and said less than 10% of network programming could be called violent. (The prime time figure, however, is around 25% of all shows.)

• In the premiere of a family hour comedy on ABC called "Holmes and Yo Yo," the plot turns on the body of a murdered man found stuffed in a packing crate. I happened to think the premier was pretty funny — but how does it square with the networks' own family hour code of conduct?

These are just a few examples of what politicans might call erosion of support.

If family hour goes — and I'm convinced it will be little more than a memory before the season ends — then all of us can start looking at network programming with a sense of reality. Face it: beneath the gingham facade of family hour, there was really a sewer all along. And even if you couldn't always see it, you could smell it.

Luke (Chris Barnes), an orphan, loves blind dog Dan and rebels when his uncle says the animal must be destroyed in "Big Henry and the Polka Dot Kid." It's an NBC "Special Treat" program at 4 p.m. Tuesday on 3 C5.

22 Lines Give Flood Warning

Honolulu (AP) — Can a telephone call outrace a surging, destructive flash flood?

Yes. "Hawaii has recorded an average of five serious flash floods a year since 1965," says Edward M. Carlstead, meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service's office here.

The Hawaiian Telephone Co. provides 22 special telephone lines to remote rain gauges in the island chain to gather detailed reports on rainfall for the Weather Service. Timely, accurate readings provide warnings of possible dangerous flash floods.

ETV Program Documents the I-80 Sculpture Project

By Helen Haggie

"Five-Hundred-Mile Sculpture Garden" has all the elements of fiction, but it is a documentary.

The hour-long program was produced on film by Nebraska Education Television to be aired at 9 tonight (and repeated at 3 p.m. next Sunday and on Nov. 26).

The program documents the Nebraska I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project from its beginning in 1975 through the building of the sculptures and their dedication last July 4.

When the names of the 10 sculptors and photographs of renderings of their proposed works were announced July 9, 1975, Norman Geske, a member of the project's board of directors, prophesied there would be "geysers of controversy" concerning the works.

How right he was.

Many Nebraskans were outraged by the abstract designs and the fact there were no bison, pioneers, Indians or other items which had a part in the history of Nebraska.

Another sore point was that no Nebraskan had been selected among the 10 sculptors.

The camera catches the expressions and the voices of the objectors.

On the other hand many people were delighted by the project, and the camera records their feelings too. Because of the controversy, the Nebraska Legislature held hearings across the state to determine whether it should accept the sculptures, to be placed at designated reststops.

On Jan. 14 the Legislature agreed to accept the sculptures and the project moved on.

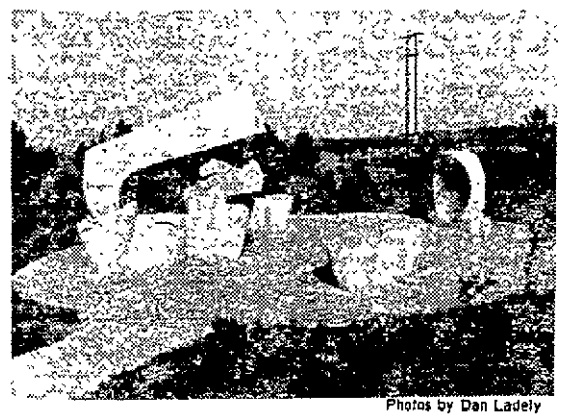

In excellent color, sound and sequence the ETV program records the actions. It takes one right into the schools where the artists spent up to two months in residency during their work on the project.

Byron Knight was producer of the documentary and Tom Speer was cinematographer/editor. George Frederick was in charge of the audio production; it includes Davd Buchholz's original music performed by Buchholz.

The documentary was made possible in part by funds and support from the Nebraska Arts Council and from Nebraskans for Public Television, Inc.

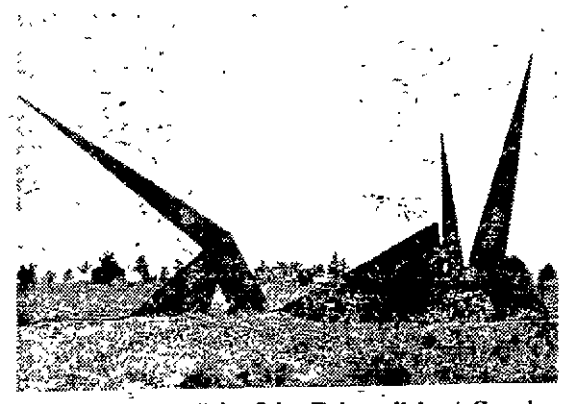

The film will be shown at the Sheldon Gallery Film Theater at 3 p.m. today; that program is free to the public.

"Crossing the Plains" by Bradford Graves is at the York westbound interchange on I-80.

"Erma's Desire" by John Raimondi is at Grand Island eastbound rest area. It probably stirred the most controversy.

Evaluation Is Requested

KUON-Nebraska ETV viewers will have an opportunity to help evaluate two programs on the history of the Great Plains. The programs are the first in a series being produced by the University of Mid-America, which is designing the programs as part of a multimedia college history course.

The first program is "The Land," to be telecast 7 p.m. Thursday. It serves as a visual introduction to the region and to the experience of living on the plains.

"The Lakota: One Nation on the Plains", is the second program, airing at 7 p.m. on Friday.

To assist in putting together future segments, viewers are encouraged to evaluate the two programs, rating them and comparing them to other programs normally watched on television. A call-in service will be available after the programs.

Radio KRNU Public Affairs Coverage List

Public affairs programming from the ABC and Mutual radio networks can be heard each weekday between 6 and 6:30 p.m. on Lincoln radio station KRNU (90.3 fm).

At 6 p.m. Monday KRNU presents Public Policy Forum, a discussion of major issues by journalists, scholars and politicians. At 6:24 p.m. listeners hear the White House-based program "One Man's Opinion" with Mutual correspondent Forrest Boyd.

Tuesday brings the discussion program "Northwestern Reviewing Stand" at 6 p.m., commentary on Capitol Assignment at 6:20 p.m., and ecological concerns on "Waste Not" at 6:25 p.m.

Jack Anderson's commentary at 6 p.m. begins Wednesday's public affairs programming. It is followed by "Labor News Conference," a panel discussion program on labor issues at 6:05 p.m., and the Robert F. Hurleigh Commentary at 6:25 p.m.

Social and economic problems are discussed each Thursday at 6 p.m. on "Decision of the 70's." At 6:20 p.m. is "Washington Report," featuring Philip C. Clarke and highlighting defense matters. Immediately following is ABC's Reynolds/Kaplow Commentary featuring Frank Reynolds and Herb Kaplow.

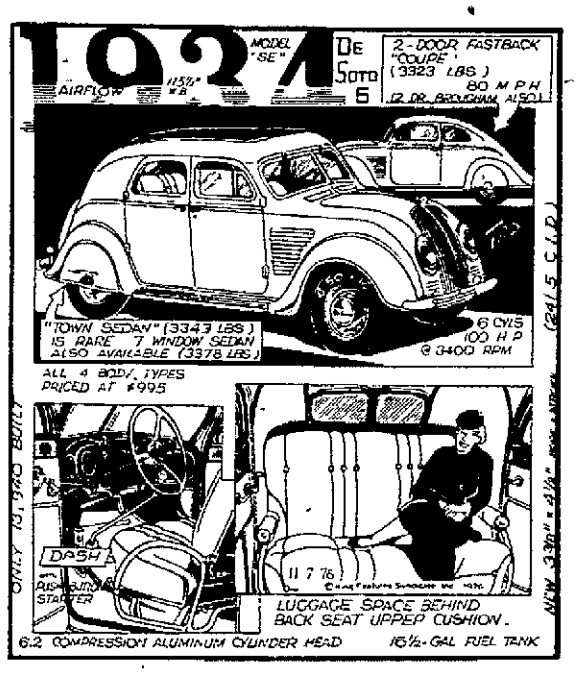

On Fridays Anderson is heard at 6:00 p.m., the panel discussion program "What's The Issue" is at 6:05 p.m., and "One Man's Opinion" is heard at 6:25 p.m.

Cub Leaders Have Pow-wow

Cub scout leaders of the Lincoln area will have a pow-wow, at Faith United Methodist Church, 33rd and Starr, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. This is an annual training gathering for training fun and fellowship, said Jerry Thomason, Thunderbird District vice chairman for cubbing.

Games, crafts, skits, organization and leadership will be covered. Baby sitting will be provided; those attending are asked to bring a sack lunch. All cubmasters, den mothers and assistants, pack committee members and parents of cubs are eligible.

Clarinet Day On 'Classics'

KFMQ's Patterns in Classics today (6 a.m.-noon) will be a tribute to the clarinet, featuring performances by outstanding artists on that instrument in a variety of settings. Host David Kappy listed these works among those to be heard:

Bartok: Contrasts for Clarinet, Violin and Piano. Dusha Quartet members.
Stravinsky. Ebony Concerto. Goodman/Bernstein
Nielsen: Concerto for Clarinet and Orch. Drucker, NY Phil./Bernstein
Copland. Sextet. Wright, Juilliard String Quartet, Copland.
Mozart. Clarinet Concerto, K. 622. Walton, Philharmonia/von Karajan
Stravinsky: Three Pieces. Guy Deplus.
Thuille. Sextet for Woodwind Quintet and Piano. Neb. WW Quintet Audun Raynan pianist

Philharmonic Program

Kenneth Schermerhorn conducts the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in a concert to be heard on KRNU from 8 to 10 tonight. The orchestra's program includes Barber's "Symphony No. 1," Loeffler's "Five Irish Fantasies," Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration" and the immolation scene from Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung."

De Soto's Airflow Made News in '34

By Tad Burness
Special Writer

Anyone wanting a new De Soto in 1934 had to accept an ultra-streamlined Airflow — quite a change from De Soto's earlier models.

Chrysler Airflows were also produced (1934-1937), but in the Chrysler line there was also a conventionally-styled model available, whereas during 1934, De Soto made all four of its body types as Airflows only. (In 1935, conservatively-styled Airstream models were offered as alternative choices in both Chrysler and De Soto lines, as there was considerable sales resistance to radically streamlined body types, especially to the racy fastback coupe.

Color choices on the four 1934 De Soto Airflow bodies were bland. There was black, star blue, fisherman blue, explorer blue, Baden green, cedar bird, gunmetal, Palm Beach gray, Dorset gray and a couple of sicklier choices: dusty gray and eel gray. Remember, 1934 was part of the Great Depression, and these colors seemed ideal for avoiding creditors ("Just slip away, in a car of eel gray!")

De Soto's airflow series was discontinued after 1936. Not many buyers cared then, but in the years that have since passed since many Airflow enthusiasts have stepped forth to declare what truly advanced cars these Airflows were.

THE POOR EAR

Statistics show only two other health problems that have more people involved than "Hearing Impairments" — over 20,000,000. Yet, do you know out of the sixteen listed, thirteen have far more voluntary agency collection — from $56,780,000.00 down to hearing impairments of $750,000.00.

That even "Hearing Impairments" under U.S. government spending is fourteenth (14th)—$6,600,000.00 out of sixteen. The top money getter, according to government figures, consist of 6,000,000 people compared to 20,000,000 for hearing. They get $508,000,000.00. Amazing isn't it, how little is done for such a large segment of our population.

JUDITH CAMPBELL IN 1960

Q. I am amazed reading about the extramarital affair the late President John F Kennedy had with Judith Campbell Where were the assignations held—in the White House? And did not Kennedy realize that Judy Campbell was reporting each time to the late Sam Giancana, head of the Chicago Mafia? Really! This whole thing is so shockingly sordid it is beyond my comprehension. Why didn't the Secret Service do something about it? Surely they must have known that Kennedy was playing around?—Mrs. J B W., Philadelphia

A. Before he was elected President, John F. Kennedy was introduced to Judith Campbell by Frank Sinatra in Las Vegas Later, in Miami, Sinatra introduced Judith Campbell to Sam Giancana of the Mafia. He introduced Giancana as Sam Flood. For many months the showgirl did not know Giancana's real name or his position as leader of the Chicago crime syndicate. Judith Campbell's first assignation with Kennedy, then a U.S. Senator, took place in the Plaza Hotel, New York City, about March 7, 1960. After Kennedy was elected President in November, 1960, further assignations took place in the White House and elsewhere The Secret Service, charged with guarding Kennedy, surely knew of the liaison but was powerless to prevent it, since extracurricular sex activity did not endanger Kennedy's life.

Reportedly, Judith Campbell told Giancana of her affair with Kennedy. Giancana did not mind sharing her favors with the President. He may well have thought of using his knowledge to blackmail Kennedy at some later date. The CIA also made the monumental error during that same period of enlisting Giancana and his late henchman John Rosselli in efforts to assassinate Fidel Castro of Cuba.

FBI agents subsequently wiretapped Giancana, learned about his and Kennedy's sexual relationships with Judith Campbell. They reported it to J. Edgar Hoover. Director Hoover in turn reported it to Robert Kennedy, then Attorney General of the U.S. Hoover also notified President Kennedy of the Giancana-Campbell relationship. Kennedy thereupon severed his friendship, not only with Judith Campbell, but with Frank Sinatra as well.

Q. What is the marital status of heavyweight boxer Muhammad Ali? Didn't one of his girlfriends just give birth to a baby by him?—Morton Ingliss, Chicago.

A. Khalilah Ali, married to Ali for nine years, filed suit in Chicago recently for divorce on grounds of mental cruelty and desertion. They have four children. Ali acknowledges that he is the father of an illegitimate daughter born Aug 6, 1976, to his longtime traveling lover, Veronica Porche. The baby girl, Hana Yasmeen Ali, was born in Berrien (Mich.) General Hospital, according to a parenthood certificate filed with the Berrien County registrar of deeds.

VERONICA PORCHE AND MUHAMMAD ALI

Q. I've been told that people in the hometown of the late Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery speak disparagingly of his memory. True?—Victor Newmarket, New York City.

A. They consider Montgomery "cheap and niggardly" in Bentley, England. Montgomery, who died there in March, 1976, at age 88, left $270,000 in his will. Of that sum, he bequeathed only $165 each to five members of the Cox family, who spent their entire working lives in his service. Apart from this bequest, the Montgomery estate went to Monty's son, the new Viscount of Alamein. Michael Cox, Monty's chauffeur, said of him: "Monty never gave more than he had to. What he left our family is a paltry sum. It will pay for a few rounds of beer."

Q. Is it true that the two highest-paid baseball players are both black?—Ron Gamble, Birmingham, Ala.

A. Hank Aaron, now retired, was paid $240,000 in 1976 by the Milwaukee Brewers, Dick Allen $225,000 by the Philadelphia Phillies. Both are black and reportedly the highest-salaried players in big league baseball last season.

Q. Has anyone in this country made more money from broadcasting than Lowell Thomas, who is 84? I am told he is worth $100 million True?—K. G., Pawling, N.Y.

LOWELL THOMAS

A. Lowell Thomas has earned millions as a broadcaster, but it was not until the mid-50's—when he helped found Capital Cities Communications—that he could amass his present fortune, estimated at $10-15 million. Capital Cities owns some 14 radio and TV stations, also newspapers in Fort Worth, Tex., Pontiac, Mich., and Belleville, Ill. Capital Cities also owns Fairchild Trade Papers, which publishes Women's Wear Daily, Home Furnishings Daily, and other trade papers of that ilk. At last count, Lowell Thomas owned approximately 175,000 shares of Capital Cities stock, worth more than $8.5 million

Q. Why has Susan Ford moved out of the White House—because she is tired of Secret Service surveillance?—Monty Campbell, Charlotte, N. C.

A. Susan Ford and three other sophomores from Mt Vernon Junior College for Women have moved into an Alexandria, Va., townhouse, the basement of which houses the Secret Service persons assigned to guard Susan. So long as she is the President's daughter, Susan cannot escape the Secret Service. None of the Ford children particularly likes living in the White House.

The World's Greatest Athlete Chases the Big Money

by L. H. Whittemore

Decathlon gold medalist Bruce Jenner and his wife Chrystie are keeping in shape. It is estimated he can make $2 million from TV commercials alone.

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Will success spoil Bruce Jenner? That's the question being asked about the 27-year-old American who was proclaimed "the world's greatest athlete" after winning the decathlon at the Montreal Olympics last summer.

Among those asking it are Jenner himself and his beautiful blonde wife Chrystie.

Says Bruce: "Our lives have changed drastically. I'd like to think it's all for the good, but there have been some drawbacks."

Says 26-year-old Chrystie, who dropped out of college and worked as a United Airlines stewardess to help support her husband while he trained for the decathlon: "Sometimes I'd give my eyeteeth to be back where we were."

For more than three months now the Jenners have been plunged into a grueling round of travels, interviews, screen tests and meetings with agents, producers and promoters that make the 10 track and field events of the decathlon almost seem like a cakewalk in comparison.

They've even added a third member to their team—a 37-year-old bachelor named George Wallach, who has taken over as "personal manager" for the star athlete. Wallach, at whose home in Beverly Hills the couple is staying, is blunt in describing the kind of life he sees ahead for Jenner.

"Bruce can be a one-man business, like Arnold Palmer," he exclaims. "I hate to sound so commercial, but even though Bruce Jenner is a human being, he's also a product. We're making the conversion from 'jock' to 'personality.'" (Last month he signed a contract with ABC to appear on several shows.)

Wallach has estimated that Jenner can make $2 million from TV commercials alone. Among the products under consideration for his endorsement have been automobiles, motorcycles, various foods, men's toiletries and clothing. Another item would be dog food, promoted by the couple's three-year-old Labrador, Bertha, that used to run with Bruce as he trained.

Even dog in the act

"We could feature her as 'the most physically fit dog in the world,'" Wallach points out.

Beyond the commercials, however, there is a delicate problem. Like Mark Spitz, who won seven gold medals for swimming in the 1972 Olympics, Jenner is faced with the possibility of quickly fizzling out as a celebrity. The solution, both he and Wallach feel, is to refrain from "jumping too fast" into too many promotions. That was Spitz's big mistake, in their view, causing him to lose out over the long haul.

continued

My favorite jokes

by bob steele

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bob Steele has been talking to people for 40 years over the same radio station, WTIC in Hartford, Conn. And, when he's not on the air, he often entertains on New England's banquet circuit. He's the father of four sons—the oldest, also named Bob Steele, served two terms, 1970-1974, as a U.S. Congressman from Connecticut—and he recalls: "All of our sons were born while I was broadcasting, and my listeners were invited to help name each one. For one of the boys, I said I rather liked the name John. At that, a fan protested: 'Why John? Every Tom, Dick and Harry is named John!' "

There are grandchildren, too, eight of them, and says Bob: "They're all typical grandchildren, always boring people by opening their little wallets and whipping out snapshots of their grandparents!"

Here are some of Bob Steele's jokes:

I always hoped my wife might have twins, but it wasn't to be. You've heard the definition of twins—infant replay.

Where I live, in Wethersfield, Conn., we have a scientist who's active in genetics. He crossed a praying mantis with a termite. Got a bug that says grace before eating your house.

Speaking of insects, we have two sizes of mosquitoes in Wethersfield: small ones that can go through a screen door and big ones that can open a screen door.

Ours is just a modest house, nothing showy. I never wanted to be wealthy or appear to be. What good is money, anyway? Only this morning I heard a news bulletin about a fabulously rich oil sheik and his 110 beautiful wives. He died while waiting to get into the bathroom!

I see another Howard Hughes will has shown up—in which he left everything to J. Paul Getty.

Speaking of the affluent crowd, a friend of mine says, "I love my girl for what she is—rich!"

An exasperated mother to her crying child at the dinner table: "Eat it, dear, pretend it's mud."

I've just received a news flash from our sports correspondent in Berlin: The East German pole vault champion has just become the West German pole vault champion!

A man points to a sprig of parsley floating on top of his drink and tells the bartender: "I ordered a Manhattan." The bartender says, "Well, that's a Manhattan." "Then what the heck is this?" the man asks. The bartender says, "Central Park."

Life is tough, a lot of things go against you. For instance, a friend of mine engraved "War and Peace" on the head of a pin only to discover he had left out page 84.

Farmer says: "Effie, now that we've struck oil, you're gonna have some decent clothes." She says: "Nothin' doin', Hank, I been wearin' decent clothes all my life. Now I'm goin' to dress like other women."

Are you still smoking?

In the years since the criticism against smoking first appeared, many people have given up cigarettes. But many more people haven't.

And that's who we'd like to talk to. That even larger group of people who are still smoking today.

If you're still a smoker, you've probably heard the charges leveled against 'tar' and nicotine. You may have become concerned. And chances are you even tried to do something about it. Like trying several of those empty-tasting low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes.

If you're like a lot of other smokers, you probably went right back to your old brand, and concluded that a good-tasting low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette has never been invented.

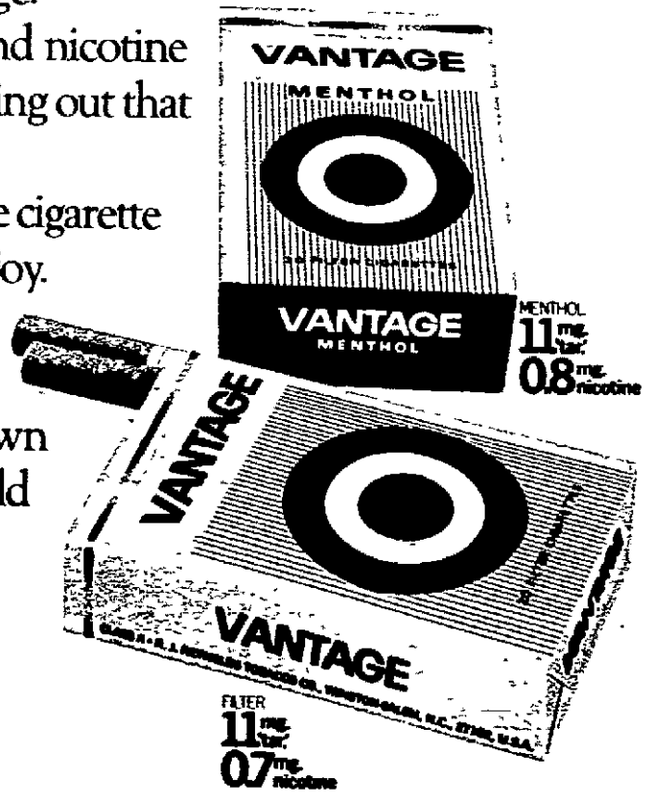

Well, if that's the case, you haven't tried Vantage.

Vantage cuts down substantially on the 'tar' and nicotine you may have become concerned about. Without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavor you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you can smoke. But it may well be the lowest you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

So, if you still smoke, but would like to cut down on 'tar' and nicotine, Vantage is one cigarette you should seriously consider.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

FILTER: 11 mg "tar", 0.7 mg nicotine. MENTHOL: 11 mg "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine, av per cigarette. FTC Report APR. '76.

Good Earth ALMANAC

ALTHOUGH THE RATE OF DEATH and INJURY FROM HUNTING ACCIDENTS IS LOW COMPARED TO OTHER SPORTS, THERE IS ONE PRACTICE WHICH WOULD HELP EVEN MORE:

EVERYONE who goes into the woods or fields during hunting season should wear BLAZE-ORANGE clothing.

OTHER THAN GOOD GUN-HANDLING SENSE, THERE IS NO OTHER SAFETY FACTOR MORE IMPORTANT THAN BLAZE-ORANGE CLOTHING. ALTHOUGH AN ORANGE COLORED HAT and VEST ARE GOOD, A COMPLETE OUTFIT IS MUCH BETTER. THE MAIN ADVANTAGE OF BLAZE ORANGE IS THAT IT STANDS OUT LIKE A BEACON IN ANY LIGHT CONDITION. THE TRADITIONAL HUNTING CLOTHING HAS BEEN RED, BUT IF LIGHTING IS POOR, RED VISUALLY TURNS TO BLACK. YELLOW BLENDS TOO EASILY WITH THE FOLIAGE OF SOME TREES -- AND ONLY MOVEMENT IS SEEN.

BLAZE ORANGE IS PARTICULARLY VISIBLE IN FOG OR SNOW, WHICH ARE COMMON CONDITIONS DURING THE DEER SEASON. THE COLOR ALWAYS WILL BE SEEN BEFORE ANY MOVEMENT IS EVIDENT.

Regardless of whether you're a hunter or a bird-watcher, or if you just plain like to wander in the fall woods, you'll feel safer wearing blaze-orange clothing.

HOW TO PLAY: First read the list of words then look at the puzzle. The words are in all directions—vertically, horizontally, diagonally, backwards. Circle each letter of a word found and strike it off list. The letters are often used more than once so do not cross them out. It is best to find the big words first. When you find all the words listed in the clues you'll have a number of letters over which spell the Wonderword.
